

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

MEDALLIC HISTORY

OF

IMPERIAL ROME;

From the FIRST TRIUMVIRATE, .

UNDER POMPEY, CRASSUS, AND CÆSAR.

To the Removal of the IMPERIAL SEAT,

CONSTANTINE THE GREAT.

WITH THE

SEVERAL MEDALS AND COINS,

ACCURATELY COPIED AND CURIOUSLY ENGRAVEN.

To which is prefixed, an Introduction, containing

GENERAL HISTORY OF ROMAN MEDAL

IN TWO VOLUMES.—VOL. II.

By WILLIAM COOKE, M.A.

Vicar of Enford in Wiltshire, and Rector of Oldbury and Didmarton, in Gloucestershire.

The Medal, faithful to its Charge of Fame, Through Climes and Ages bears each Form and Name; In one short View subjected to our Eye Gods, Emperors, Heroes, Sages, Beauties lie. - Again Rome's Glories shine, Her Gods and godlike Heroes rife to View, And all her faded Garlands bloom anew. Nor blush these Studies thy Regard engage, These pleas'd the Fathers of Poetic Rage: The Verse and Sculpture bore an equal Part, POPE. And Art reflected Images to Art.

DON: N PRINTED FOR J. DODSLEY, IN PALL-MALL.

3 11 7 Y TOTBIE OLUJACISM 12.00 MIRRIAL ROME NAME AND ADDRESS OF THE OWNER, WHEN CHICKL FOWERS WELVEL AND DESERVE The state of the Lorentz Liver. STREET WHEN A LAND CHERTS CHAVE AND A CONTRACT OF LOCATION AND ADDRESS OF THE PARTY NAMED AND ASSOCIATION OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY. A JOHN A MIDDAY THE

THE

DISPOSITION of the PLATES

IN VOL; II.

Plates.		Pages.	Plates.	Pages.
XXI.	-	- I	XLII	- 248
XXII.	-	- 26	XLIII	- 258
XXIII.	-	- 44	XLIV	- 270
XXIV.	-	- 54	XLV	- 282
XXV.		- 64	XLVI	- 292
XXVI.	-	- 74	XLVII	- 306
XXVII.	-	- 82	XLVIII	- 324
XXVIII.	-	- 86	XLIX	- 334
XXIX.	-	- 110	L	- 346
XXX.	-	- 120	LI	- 356
XXXI.	2000	- 136	LII	- 366
XXXII.	-	- 144	LIII	- 374
XXXIII.	-	- 156	LIV	- 388
XXXIV.	cond	- 166	LV	- 390
XXXV.	-	- 172	LVI	- 404
XXXVI.	-	- 182	LVII	- 422
XXXVII.	-	- 192	LVIII	- 442
XXXVIII.	-	- 202	LIX	- 452
XXXIX.	inut	- 210	LX	- 464
XL.		- 220	LXI	- 482
XLI.	-	- 240

ERRATA in Vol. II.

Page 197. line 5. for advaced, read advanced.

251. 18. for Ctesephon, read Ctesiphon.

314. 2. for BPOYZHNON, read PPOYZHNON.

327. 2. for Artrival, read Arrival.

362. in Frontispiece, for IMP. C. D. read IMP. C. P.

464. 3. for Ravanna, read Ravenna.

486. 24. for W, supply w.

MEDALLIC HISTORY

OF

IMPERIAL ROME.

SERVIUS SULPICIUS GALBA.

ALBA, while he governed the Tarraconensian Spain, had only the Command of one Legion (represented on the Reverse before us by a single Eagle and Ensigns, with S. C.) two Alæ, and Vol. II.

B three

GALE

Pl. XXI

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

JALBA.

three Cohorts. But before his March he had formed other Legions and Auxiliaries, besides a Body-Guard of Youths of the Equestrian Order, whom he honoured with the Title of his Evocati. For this was the Name given to those Soldiers who were particularly called out, and selected for their Bravery. When he advanced near Rome, the Marines, whom Nero had inrolled as Soldiers, petitioned. him for an Eagle and Enfigns (for he had orderedthem to return to their former Estate) that they might fo become Legionaries, with much Clamour and Infolence; infomuch that he ordered his Horse to fall upon them, who put feven thousand of them to the Sword, and the rest underwent a Decimation. This, with the Death of Nymphidius at Rome (tho' flain by the Soldiers on his avowed Intention of setting up for himself) of Fonteius Capito in Germany, and Clodius Macer in Africa, inclined the People to believe him cruel. And the Meanness of his Rewards, with his fordid Way of Living, confirmed them in the Opinion of his being extremely avaricious. So that his Arrival looked: unprosperous. The City was filled with his own Troops and the Marines. Great Numbers likewise from Germany, Britain, and Illyricum, whom NERO had fent forward towards Afia, and afterwards recalled against Vindex, afforded Materials for fresh Troubles.

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

Troubles, and were at hand for any bold Pretender. We have his Adlocution to the Prætorian Cohorts, Pl. XX and in the Exergue ADLOCVTIO S. C. When on this Occasion they demanded their Donative, " My Custom," faid he, " is to chuse my Soldiers, " not to buy them." This raised a general Discontent amongst those dangerous Bands. But he would by no Means be constrained to any Thing. So when the Populace vehemently clamoured for the Punishment of Tigellinus, and others, who had richly deferved it, he refused to comply; tho' probably they had fuffered, had it not been infifted upon. For Helius, the late Governor of Rome, Narcissus, Patrobius, Locusta the Prisoner, and fome others, who had figured under Nero, were put to Death with Ignominy. He was entirely governed by the Will of three Persons, who lived with, and stuck close to, him, and who were therefore called his Pædagogues. These were T. Vinius, his Lieutenant in Spain, of immense Avarice; Cornelius Laco, his Captain of the Guards, whose Arrogance and Indolence were intolerable; and his Freedman Icelus, who, having been raifed to the Equestrian Order, was now a Candidate for the highest Office of it. These Favourites set every Thing to Sale in fuch Haste, as if they feared that he would die before they had compleated their Business.

GAL

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

Business. Their Failings cost him the public Esteem. It is enough for a private Person, that he do no Injury: but it behoves the Prince to be careful that others do it not. Yet he gave several Proofs of a princely Disposition; one of which was, the Remission of the fortieth Penny, which none of the ancient Historians have taken the least Notice of. This is evident from the fine Medal in Bronze before us, whereon we fee his laureate Head, with SER GALBA IMP AVG. The Reverse has a very noble triumphal Arch, with two Horsemen above, and Captives marching under: the Legend is QVADRAGENSimæ REMISSAE, S. C. This feems to have been a Duty upon Goods imported, and was equal to two and a half per Cent. and had by NERO been remitted, and imposed again. This is further confirmed by another, on the Reverse of which a gowned Roman, with the Rudis or Wand, which was always given as a Discharge from Slavery, in his left Hand, and a Cap in the right is stiled the LIBERTas AVGusti: in the Area S C, and a little lower R XL, for Remissá Quadragesimá. The same Pl. XXI. 5. Legend we have around a female Figure, adorned with the fame Attributes, but without the Remission.

> But the Accession of Galba is celebrated on several other Coins. One in Bronze, of the first Magnitude.

Pl. XXI, 3.

GALBA.

Pl. XXI. 4.

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

Magnitude, gives his laureate Head, with a full Infcription, IMP SER SVLP GALBA CAES AVG PL XXI. TR P, Imperator Servius Sulpicius Galba Cæsar Augustus Tribuniciá Potestate; and a like Female Figure on the Reverse, called there LIBERTAS PVBLICA. But the same Head in Gold says only, GALBA IMPERATOR, shewing on the Reverse the very same Figure, as restored by Trajan; for the Legend runs IMP CAES TRAIAN AVG GER DAC PP REST, Imperator Cæsar Trajanus Augustus Germanicus Dacius Pater Patriæ Restituit. Another, in Bronze, as given at the Entrance of this Reign, shews, on the other Side, a Figure reprefenting victorious Rome, with a Laurel Branch in the left Hand, and holding out a Victory to him on her right, with the Senatorian Sanction, S C. But his Denarius, with the laureate Head, and IM-PERATOR GALBA, gives for the Reverse the Emperor himself, in his military Habit, with the Hasta pura in his left Hand, an Olive-Branch in his right, with his right Foot treading on a Globe, and around ROMA VICTRIX: Another Medal of him, quoted by Mr. Addison, bears on the Reverse the Figures of Honour and Virtue, ascribed to him by the Senate. The first is a Female, with the Cornucopiæ in her left Hand, and the Hasta

GALB

Pl. XXI.

Pl. XXI.

Pl. XXI.

Pl. XXI.

GALBA.

addison's Diaogues, p. 171. pura in her right, her Head being crowned with Laurel: the last is a military Figure, armed with an Helmet, having the Hasta pura also in the lest Hand, and the Parazonium in the Right, with his right Foot treading on an Enemy: in the Exergue S C.

Such, however, was the Situation of Affairs; the Emperor obstinate and inattentive, the Ministers most corrupt, the Soldiery discontented, and the People uneasy, when GALBA, the second Time, and T. Vinius, entered upon the Office of Consuls. A few Days after came Letters from Gaul, importing, that the Legions of Upper Germany demanded of the Senate and People another General. haftened GALBA's Defign of appointing a Successor. Pi/o, a young Nobleman of most excellent Character, was pitched upon. Him he adopted in the Camp, furrounded by the Prætorian Cohorts, who neither on this Occasion had any Taste of his Liberality. This entirely alienated their Affections. Отно, who judged that his Services had given him a Right to the Succession, catched the Opportunity, and by every Sort of Corruption in his Power, directed the Stream of their Devotion to himself. He gained over a fmall Body, who were bold enough to declare for him: more of them wished well to his Pretentions, and the Rest were not in- GALB. clined to dispute them: so that, a few Days after, he was slain in the Forum by a Party of them. Sempronius Denfus, one of his Guards, was the only Person who endeavoured to defend him, and was cut in Pieces. Piso escaped, and concealed: himself in the Temple of Vesta, but was dragged thence, and slaughtered. Their Heads were cut off, and carried to Отно, who viewed them, that of Piso particularly, with great Exultation. Thus fell GALBA, in the 73d Year of his Age, and the 7th Month of his Reign, according to-Suetonius. But Zonarus fays, that he reigned eight Months; and Dio Cassius, nine Months and thirteen Days.

Servius Sulpicius Galba was of proper Stature; had grey Eyes, a bald Head, an hooked Nose, and his Hands and Feet very much distorted with the Gout; fo that he could neither hold a Book, nor wear a Shoe. He had also a large and troublesome Excrescence on his right Side. He was a great Eater; and in Winter would rife before Day to gratify his Appetite. The Nobility of his Family was ancient, his Wealth great, and his Parts moderate. My Author (Tacitus) fays, that he was rather without Vices, than virtuous. But it appears, that he wanted not his Share of these; being prone to unnatural Lust, and extremely covetous. Indeed his Obstinacy and Avarice seem to have been the principal Causes of his Ruin.

STOR RELEASE

GALBA.

William Town 1987 Supplied AV 1987 To 1987 To statistical for the second state of the second at the state of th

and but and an a tool of the small of the

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

- AT THE RESIDENCE OF THE CASE OF THE CASE OF THE PARTY O

MARCUS SALVIUS OTHO.

N the Death of Galba the Senate affembled, and decreed to Otho the tribunitial Power, the Title of Augustus, and all the Imperial Honours. We have his Head in Gold accordingly, as prefixed to this Reign, with the Infcription IMP. OTHO CAESAR AVG TR P. Imperator Otho Cæfar Augustus Tribunitia Potestate; and on the Reverse, a semale Figure, holding a Javelin in one Hand, and a Laurel Wreath in the other, stiled SECVRITAS P R for Populi Romani. Monsieur Patin has one in Bronze, whereon the Head is laureated, with IMP M OTO CAesar...; and a Laurel Wreath on the Reverse, inclosing S C. He Vol. II.

Отн

Pl. XXI.

Pl. XXI.

Отно.

L XXI. 13.

10

remarks, that the Letter H is omitted in the Infcription; and observes, that no classic Author has made mention of the Laurel being decreed to him. Yet furely this was one of the omnes principum bonores, which, according to Tacitus, were conferred upon him. But the Coins of Patin are of the middle or the smallest Size. We have in the Pembrokian Collection one of the first Magnitude, which answers to it exactly enough, except that the Aspirate omitted in the other, is here inserted. It has, however, been confidently averred by some, that no Medals in Bronze, (while others confine the Affertion to the great Brass, and the Latin Stamp) were ever struck of this Emperor. And it was a faying of Christina, Queen of Sweden, that "He " who shall have found an antique Coin of Otho " in Bronze, will have found the Philosopher's "Stone." Yet the same Queen had in her Cabinet of Medals, collected by Francis Gottifred, a Greek one of Otho, of this Metal, of unquestionable Antiquity, which shall be produced by and by in its proper Place. The Head and Title of his Denarius entirely resemble that upon his Medal of Gold, already given. The Reverse of it has a decent Figure, holding a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and a Branch of Olive in the other, and is circumferibed PAX ORBIS TERRARVM. For he had flattered.

XXI. 14.

. 3.

flattered himself with a peaceable Reign, presuming, that all Opposition would die away before him. And indeed, for the present, and at Home, all Persons joined to abolish the Reproaches which had been formerly heaped upon him, and of which himself seemed now to have lost the Remembrance. Whether he really forgave them, or only deferred. his Vengeance, the Shortness of his Reign has rendered uncertain. But the Reproaches of his own Conscience were not to be stifled; for, on the very first Night of his Accession, he was heard to vent many Groans, and was fo disturbed in his Sleep, that they, who ran in, found him thrown out of Bed, and lying upon the Floor: after which, by every superstitious Method of Expiation, he endeavoured to appeale the Manes of GALBA. The first Thing that he figned, was an Order for 500 Great Sefterces, towards finishing the Golden House of Nero. What chiefly instigated him to aim at Sovereignty, was the Immensity of his Debts. For he did not dissemble the Necessity that he was under, of being Emperor or nothing, and that it was indifferent to him, whether he fell by an Enemy in the Field, or by his Creditors in the Forum.

The public Consternation was scarce over, when the News was spread abroad, that the Legions of Upper Germany had declared for VITELLIUS. Then 1.2

Отно.

it was that two Persons at once, of all Men living the most worthless that Immodesty, Indolence, and Luxury could make fo, were fatally picked out for the Destruction of the Empire. VITELLIUS, by his Condescension, and the Profuseness of his Gifts (for he gave, without Distinction, both his own and the Property of others) had made himself agreeable to the Army, and to the Lieutenants of those Legions, Cæcina and Valens, Men of boundless Defires and noted Temerity: fo that the latter, entering Cologne with the Cavalry, there faluted him Emperor. The Example was presently followed by all the German Legions, and these were afterwards joined by the Army in Britain. VITELLIUS, thus strengthened, divided his Forces, ordering Valens, with a Body of 40,000, to enter Italy by the Cottian Alps; while Cæcina did the same over the Penine Hills, at the Head of 30,000. Each was supported by the German Auxiliaries; with whom also VITELLIUS himself compleated the Troops. which were to follow under his particular Command. But a wide Difference there was between him and the Troops which declared for him. They were all Alacrity, being proud of their Success in Gaul, and panted for Action: while he, anticipating his Imperial Fortune, was dissolved in Ease and Luxury, being commonly full and intoxicated by the 1 CIL

the Middle of the Day. But the Ardour of the Soldiers did all. They called aloud for the March, and honoured him with the Name of GERMANICUS. That of CESAR he refused even after his Success. Meantime OTHO seemed to have bid Adieu to his usual Delicacy, acting like an Emperor. Marius Celsus, the Consul Elect, he had not only rescued from the Rage of the Soldiery, but now pardoned him, even while he avowed his Fidelity to GALBAS. received him into the Number of his Friends, and made him one of his Generals. This was a popular Action. Nor was the Death of Tigellinus less fo, whom he constrained to be his own Executioner. His Letters to VITELLIUS were couched in the most friendly Terms, offering Wealth and Favour, and whatfoever Spot himself should chuse for the safe and quiet Enjoyment of it. The same pretended Kindness was on both Sides carried on for a Time with like Dissimulation. But afterwards, like Persons in high Quarrel, they upbraided each other with their Vices and Debaucheries, and with equal Truth:

Amidst these Bickerings, Advices came that the Legions of Dalmatia, Panonia, and Mæsia, had sworn Allegiance to Отно. The same was said of Spain; but it was quickly known to have gone over to VITELLIUS. Aquitain, tho under the Obligations ligation of an Oath, went off likewise. There was no where Fidelity or Affection; Fear and Necessity swayed all. These turned the Narbonensian Gaul to Vitellius. The distant and transmarine Provinces Eastward were all for Otho. Egypt and all Africa professed the same Obedience.

Отно.

Pl. XXI. 15.

On the Calends of March he assumed the Fasces, having his Brother Titian for his Colleague. And on this Occasion 'tis very probable, that the Medal in Bronze, which is here referred to, was struck; but by what Greek City is uncertain, the Legend being almost wholly effaced. The laureate Head is however distinguishable enough, as well as the Name MP OTIO on his Neck, it being one of those few which were stamped a second Time, and one of the few which have a Latin Title on the Face, and a Greek Legend on the Reverse. On the Reverse are the usual Heads of the two Brothers Castor and Pollux, with their respective Stars, and the Article Twy of the Legend is still visible, to which the Substantive Αδελφων was undoubtedly annexed. That Honour for the Months of May and June was destined (to soothe the German Army) for Virginius and Poppæus Vopiscus; for at this Time there were new Confuls every two Months. He now affected the Legislator, giving a new Body of Laws to Cappadocia and to Africa, more for Ostentation tation than Use. This, however, induced the Capitals of those Countries to honour him on their Coins. We have, therefore, from Cæsarea of the Pl. XXI. 1 former, his Head plain, with the Inscription CANNS ΟΘΩΝΟC ΚΑΙCagos CEBACTOY: on the Reverse, a rocky Mountain, with KAIZAPEAC, and underneath ET ... for the Year; which, perhaps, had no Letter after it, as it was the Beginning of a Reign: for this is not uncommon. This is the Coin in Bronze already spoken of, which was in the Queen of Sweden's Collection. Chiflet, the same Queen's Almoner, in Confirmation of the Genuineness of it, fays, that the learned Spanheim had communicated to him the Copy of a Medal, struck in the Reign of CLAUDIUS, with the same Figure and Name; and that the abovefaid Francis Gottifred had produced others, of Titus, Commodus, and Severus, from the Queen's Cabinet, with the same Device. He tells of others also of the like Sort, struck in the Reigns of Antoninus Pius, Caracalla and GETA. The Inscription of that, which was struck Pl. XXI. 17 at Alexandria, the Metropolis of the latter, is injured by Time; but the laureate Head, and OΘΩΝΟΣ, are very plain. The Reverse is a Canopus, the Body of which is the Hydria or Water-Vessel, with the veiled Head of Iss o'Top, crowned: with the flowering Lotus: in the Area A, for the first Year. The Detail of this extraordinary Deity, as my Author quotes it from Rufinus, is curious. The Chaldeans, fays he, are reported to have carried the Fire, which they worshipped, into all Countries, infifting, that the God, who conquered all other Gods, was alone worthy of divine Regard: and it appeared, in the Competition with those of Gold, Silver, Brass, and Earth, that this God was fuperior to, and confumed them all. This known, the Priest of Canopus set his Wits to Work. He took one of the Hydriæ, or Water-Vessels, perforated fall of small Holes, which he afterwards closed up with Wax, and then painted the Outside of it very elegantly. This he filled with Water, and, having robbed an ancient Statue of its Head, fitted it very nicely to the Top of his Vessel. When the Chaldwans then came thither with their Fire, he produced the God that he had fashioned, around which when the Fire was kindled. the Wax melted, the Water issued from every Vent. and entirely quenched the Flames. From which Time this Canopus has been reverenced as a principal Deity by the Egyptians. But there was another struck at the same Place, with the Emperor's laureate Head, and AΥΤΟΚρατορος ΟΘΩΝCC, having, on the Reverse, a female Head, representing the City, or the Genius of it, crowned with Towers,

finst

O'T H O.

Fl. XXI. 18.

and

and with the Elephant's Tooth and Proboscis project- OTHO. ing from the Forehead: the Legend ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΕΑ; in the Area, L.

Отно now replaced the Statues of Роррел by a Decree of the Senate. It was even proposed to restore those of Nero; and on a certain Occasion himself was saluted, both by the People and Soldiers, with the Acclamation of Nero Отно, a Title which he was not averse to; as he had before, to his Patents and first Letters to some Governors of Provinces, annexed that Name.

As the Passages of the Penine and Cottian Alps were possessed by the Enemy, he resolved to open the War by an Attempt on the Narbonensian Province with his Fleet, which was ftrong and faithful. For the Marines, who had furvived the Difpleasure of GALBA, he had formed into a Legion, and had filled the rest with the Hope of a more honourable Service. To these he added the City Cohorts, and a Number of Prætorians. The Command of the Expedition was given to Antonius Novellus, Suedius Clemens, and Æmilius Pacensis. Oseus, his Freedman, was Admiral. The principal Officers of Horse and Foot were Suetonius Paulinus, Marius Celsus, and Annius Gallus. But his chief Confidence was in Licinius Proculus, his Captain of the Guards, a Soldier of no Experience, VOL. II. D but

Отно.

but fly and infinuating. Many of the Magistrates, and a great Part of the Confulars, were ordered to attend his own Person, and amongst them L. Vitellius, the Brother of his Competitor. Cacina had now passed the Alps. After, therefore, recommending to the Senate the Care of the Commonwealth, he began his March, leaving the Government of the City to his Brother. He had in his Army 2000 Gladiators. And now, as his first Scheme of attacking the Enemy in Gaul had mifcarried, he fent forward Afinius Gallus and Vestricius Spurinna with these, added to five Prætorian Cohorts, the Cavalry, and the first Legion, to guard the Banks of the Po. With himself he kept some felect Bodies of light Troops, and the rest of the Prætorian Cohorts, all the Veterans, and a vast Number of Marines. No Luxury attended him, but he marched on Foot before the Enfigns, armed with an Iron Breast-Plate, rough, unadorned, and unlike his Character. Fortune flattered him: the greater Part of Italy, as far as to the maritime Alps, being possessed by Means of his Fleet. But these were held by Marius Maturus, who, raising the Inhabitants, endeavoured to expel the Othonians, but was by them defeated. On Advice of this, Fabius Valens detached to the Assistance of the Narbonensians, two Cohorts of Tungrians, four Troops of Gavalry, and the whole Strength of the Tre- OTHO verians, under the Command of Julius Classicus. But these also were defeated, though no Use was made of this Success, the Victors retiring to Albigaunum in Liguria: but the News of it kept Corfica, Sardinia, and the rest of the Islands, steady.

But Cæcina had now reached the Po, which he passed, and laid Siege to Placentia, which was defended by Spurinna, with about 3000 Soldiers. In the first Assault the noble Amphitheatre without the Walls was fet on Fire, but Cæcina was repulsed with great Slaughter; on which he repassed the Po, and marched for Cremona. Annius Gallus was then leading the first Legion to the Relief of Placentia, but, learning the Motions of the Enemy, halted at Bedriacum. About the same Time, Martius Macer, at the Head of the 2000 Gladiators, defeated a large Body of the Vitellian Auxiliaries, and might have gained greater A'dvantages but for the mutinous Disposition of the Troops, fomented chiefly by the Murderers of GALBA, who were continually blaming their Officers, and who, by feditious Speeches and private Letters to Отно, created much Confusion. This filled him with Anxiety: for he, who mended in Adversity, was ever wavering in Prosperity. He, therefore, fent for his Brother Titian, to whom he gave the chief Command.

Отно.

Meanwhile Cæcina, much concerned to be thus foiled in his first Attempts, was eager to recover his Reputation before Valens should arrive and rob him of all the Glory. Twelve Miles from Cremona, he laid an Ambush of all his fiercest Auxiliaries, in the Woods adjoining to the Road, charging his Cavalry to march further on, and provoke the Enemy to Action: this done, they were to give Way, and draw them to the Snare. But this was discovered, and the Othonian Generals counteracted the Defign to his exceeding Lofs. And it was thought, had it not been for the over-cautious Behaviour of Suetonius Paulinus, his whole Army might have been destroyed. However, they were foon joined by the Forces under Valens, and both Leaders resolved upon a Battle as soon as possible. Отно, his Brother Titian, and Proculus were likewise for an immediate Engagement, against the Advice of Paulinus, Celsus, and Gallus. It was determined also that Отно should continue in Safety at Brixellum, which disheartened his Army, and kept from it a strong Body of Horse and Foot to attend him. His Defeat was the Confequence of these imprudent Counsels. Still his Affairs were not irretrievable. He had confiderable Forces on the other Side Side the Po: the Legions from Moesia were at Hand, having entered Aquileia, and a good Part of the Army had stayed with him. Notwithstanding these Considerations, he no sooner received certain Advice of this Event, than he determined to put an End to his own Life; a Resolution most strange and unexpected, from one of his luxurious and effeminate Disposition. The Manner of his Death in several Circumstances resembled that of CATO of Utica. He spake comfortably to, suiting his Speeches to the Age and Dignity of, those around him. With a placid Countenance, and a firm and unshaken Tone, he restrained their Tears; ordered Shipping and Carriages for them at their Departure; furnished them with Money, and recommended a timely Submission to the Victor. Then observing Salvius Cocceianus, his Brother's Son, trembling, and in Tears, he endeavoured to confole him, by chiding his Fears while he commended his Piety: " that VITELLIUS, who would receive his whole "Family in Safety, could not be fo cruel as to " hurt him: that by thus hastily ridding him of " a Competitor, he should merit his Clemency; " for that his Death was not an Act of Despair; " fince he should embrace it even while his Army " was eager for Battle: that he had gained enough of Reputation for himself, and Honour for his " Posterity.

Отно.

" Posterity. Be of good Courage, therefore," said he, "and regard your Health, nor ever forget, nor " yet too much remember, that Отно was your "Uncle." After this, difmissing every Body, he rested a little, but was disturbed by a sudden Tumult occasioned by the Consternation and Licentiousness of the Soldiery, who threatened Destruction to those that were going, and particularly to Virginius, whose House they had invested. Having checked the Authors of the Sedition, he returned, and waited patiently till his Friends had all departed in Safety. In the Evening he quenched his Thirst with a Draught of cold Water; and, two Daggers being brought to him, he tried their Points, and put one of them under his Pillow; when, being informed that his Friends were out of all Danger, he passed the Night quietly, and slept well. Break of Day he stabbed himself, when his Freedmen and Slaves, with Plotius Firmus, his Captain of the Guards, entering, found only one Wound. His Funeral was hastened, as himself had directed, that his Head might not be cut off and exposed. Some of the Soldiers, from their Affection to him, flew themselves at the Pile, whose Example was followed by others at Bedriacum, and elsewhere.

Thus died OTHO, at the Age of thirty-seven. Years, having reigned, according to Dio, ninety 10

Days; but, according to Suetonius, ninety-five; OTHO. and left it a Question, Whether his Life had been more execrable, or his Death more honourable? He was of the middle Stature, badly footed, and shambled in his Gait. Having little Hair, he wore false curled Locks, nicely fitted to his Head as they had been natural. This is apparent on his Coins. From the Time that the Down began to appear upon his Chin, his Custom was every Day to rub and smooth his Face, and clean it with moist Bread, that there might be no Appearance of Beard. This was but one Instance of his Effeminacy; for he also officiated openly at the Rites of Is, in a long linen religious Vesture: so that the Manner of his Death was much wondered at. But, however it might gain the Admiration; or be palliated by the Historians, of those Times, in theseit must be considered, like every other Exit of the Kind, as an Act of Despondence, and devoid of real Fortitude. And indeed this Opinion some Persons of Judgment entertained of it even in those Times. For we find Mucianus, the Governor of Syria, in his Speech to VESPASIAN, observing, that " he fell not by the Generalship of the Leader " employed against him, or by the Strength of the "Army, but by his own too hasty Desperation."

Ne Othonem quidem ducis arte, aut exercitus vi, fed præpropera ipsius desperatione, victum. Tacit. Hist. lib. ii. c. 76. I have hitherto met with no genuine Coin of this Emperor bearing the Title of P M Pontifex Maximus.

AULUS VITELLIUS.

of fresh Musters in Gaul, and been joined by eight Thousand Men from Britain, when, after a sew Days March, he was informed of the Success of his Armies, and the Death of Otho. At Lyons he was met by the Generals both of the conquering and the conquered Forces. Valens and Cacina were received with the greatest Honours. The whole Army was ordered out to meet his Son, then six Years old, whom he decorated with all the Ensigns of his Imperial Fortune. In the next Place, the most active Centurions of Otho's Party were put to the Sword. This alienated the Affection.

VITELLIUS. tion of the Illyrian Armies. The other Legions also received the Contagion, looking on the Germans with an envious Eye.

The Union of these Legions from Upper and Lower Germany was celebrated afterwards by feveral Coins in Bronze, shewing for the Re-Pl. XXI. 19. verse a legionary Soldier, holding up a Trophy in his left Hand, and a Victory in his right: the Legend CONSENSVS EXERCITVVM S. C: as was their subsequent Success by other Re-Pl. XXI. 20. verses; one of which has a winged Victory, holding a Shield, inscribed with S. P. Q. R. Senatus Populusque Romanus: the Legend VICTORIA AVGVS-TI, and in the Area S. C. Another has the Emperor, feated on a Globe, fustaining with his Spear a Trophy, on the Shield of which a Victory alate is inscribing his Triumph. The short Peace which enfued, is also commemorated by a female Figure, PLXXH. I. with a Cornucopiæ in her left Hand, and a Caduceus in her right, the Emblems of Plenty and Felicity, who is fliled PAX AVGVSTI; in the Area S. C. Another has the Emperor in his military Habit, Pl. XXII. 2. giving his Hand to a Senator, with the Legend also-PAX AVGVSTI; in the Exergue S. C.

> All this while the Luxury of VITELLIUS was. most detestable. The great Men, and even the Cities, as he passed, were exhausted with the Costliness of his Entertainments. He wrote to the Se> > nate.

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

nate, that he deferred the Title of Augustus, nor VITELL would receive that of CESAR: so that the Medals of Gold, with his laureate Head, fay only A VI-TELLIVS IMP GERMANICVS, shewing on the Reverse either the laureate Head of his Father, with the Ivory Sceptre before him, and the Eagle rising from it, according to the Poet:

Pl. XXII

Da nunc et volucrem sceptro quæ surgit eburno. Give now Rome's Eagle with expanded Wing, And from the Ivory Sceptre bid it spring.

And the Legend Lucius VITELLIus III COSul CENfor; or the Symbol of Liberty, with the Rudis and Cap, as already described upon the Golden Pl. XXII Medal of GALBA, with the Legend LIBERTAS RESTITVTA. But this Strain of Humility lasted not long, fince we find, on the Reverse of the fame Head and Inscription, the Bustos of his two Children, distinguished as the LIBERI IMPeratoris GERManici AVGusti. We have two of his Denarii Pl. XXII. also, with his laureate Head, perfectly resembling this, but whereon that Title is assumed, together with the tribunitial Power, A VITELLIVS GERM IMP AVG TR P; with his Father on the one Reverse, L VITELLIVS COS III CENSOR, and his Children on the other, with LIBERI IMP GER- Pl. XXII MAN. We have a very fine one in Bronze, of the first E 2

Pl. XXII

Pl. XXII. 3.

first Magnitude, struck in Honour of his Father, which has on one Side the Emperor's laureate Head, with the Inscription A VITELLIVS GER-MAN IMP AVG PM TR P; and, on the Reverse, the Censor represented in the Discharge of his Office, several Romans appearing before him: the Legend L VITEL CENSOR II. His first Wife was Petronia, the Daughter of a Consular, by whom he had a Son, named Petronius, blind of one Eye, and whom he was thought to have murdered. He next married Galeria Fundana, whose Father was of Prætorian Quality. By her he had this Son and Daughter; the former being almost dumb with a strange Hesitation of Speech.

The early Manhood of VITELLIUS had been spent in the Isle of Capreæ, amidst the Debaucheries of Tiberius. Hence he was called Spintria, and was supposed to have earned the Preferments of his Father by the Prostitution of his own Body. The Rest of his Life was of a Piece with this, and he was in high Favour with Caligula, Claudius, and Nero, by whom he was loaded with civil and sacerdotal Honours. He had been sent into the Lower Germany by Galba, as one that could do no Hurt; being wholly taken up with the Indulgence of his. Palate.

On his Advancement the Astrologers were obliged, by an Edict, to quit Italy before the Calends VITELLI of October. This was answered by an Order stuck up, commanding the Emperor to quit the World by the same limited Space of Time. The Death of Dolabella, now slain by his Command, procured him much Ill-Will, and was an unfavourable Specimen of his Government. At the same Time the Spirit of the conquered Legions gave him great Uneasinefs. They were therefore dispersed and enfeebled through various Pretences. Next to this: was his Fear of the Prætorians. But they, being first separated, then soothed with an honourable Discharge, brought their Arms to their Tribunes, till the War being rekindled by VESPASIAN, they proved the main Strength of the Flavian Party. Nor were his own Forces much less mutinous and Being come to Cremona, he would needs glut his Eyes with a View of the Field of Battle, which was still a dreadful Spectacles and offered Sacrifice to the Deities of the Place. The nearer he approached to the City, the more profligate was his: March, by the Intermixture of Players, Eunuchs, and other Buffooneries of the Court of Nero, whom he admired, and had himself followed, while he fung, not from Necessity but his own luxurious and gluttonous Disposition; and to whom he afterwards

Pl. XXII. 9.

VITELLIVS. wards offered inferial Sacrifices in a full Assembly of all the facerdotal Colleges. This he feems to have done in virtue of his own Office, and by Way of Ostentation, as being one of the Fifteen who had the Charge of the Sybilline Oracles, and the Regulation of all facrificial Affairs. Hence we have on a Silver Coin his laureate Head, with the Infcription A VITELLIVS GERM IMP AVG TR P; and on the Reverse a Tripod, with a Globe and Dolphin on Top, and an Eagle underneath, importing his facerdotal Honour, and universal Dominion: the Legend is XV VIR SACR FAC, Quindecemvir Sacris Faciendis.

It appears that he was careful to have the City duly supplied with Corn, by the Honours paid him on the Reverses of his Coins, in consequence of Senatorial Decrees; one of them having the Figure Pl. XXII. 10. of the Goddess Ceres, seated, with a Torch in her left Hand, and Ears of Corn in her right, the Legend being CERES AVG, and in the Area S. C. Another exhibits an Altar, with the same Sanction in the Area; and in the Exergue PROVIDENTiæ. These are both in Bronze.

> At his first Arrival his Mother, Sextilia, was declared Augusta, and her Statue erected. We find her also on the Reverse of some of his Coins in Bronze, seated, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, Pl. XXII. II.

Hand, and a Branch of Laurel in the other. The VITELLIVS fame Inscription was, by a Decree of Senate, an- Pl. XXII. 12 nexed to both, MATri AVGustæ or i, MATri SENatus, MATri PATRiæ: in the Exergue S C. Very extraordinary Honours; but which could not foothe her Griefs, as she foresaw, with Dread, the fatal Consequences of his Ambition.

On the unlucky Day of Allia, he took upon him the highest Pontificate, settled the Elections for ten Years to come, and declared himself perpetual Conful. He had his fet Meals three, and fometimes four, Times a Day, being accustomed to empty his Stomach for the Sake of eating more. At the Dedication of a large filver Dish, which he called the Shield of Minerva, he filled it with the Livers of Scares, the Brains of Pheafants and Peacocks, the Tongues of Flamingos, and the Milks of Murænæ, brought from Spain and Parthia. The Entertainment, which his Brother gave him, was remarkable; for it consisted of two Thousand Fishes, and seven Thousand Birds. He was cruel withal; for he contrived the Destruction of many of the Nobility, his own School-Fellows and Equals, by various Kinds of Fraud. To one of them, fick of a Fever, he, with his own Hand, gave Poison mixed with Water. Of his Creditors, he scarce spared any. One, whom he had ordered for Death, he SHEET WA recalled, recalled, and, while the Spectators were praising his Clemency, had him slaughtered on the Spot, saying, that "he wanted to feed his Eyes." When two Sons earnestly supplicated Mercy for their Father, he condemned all three. No wonder that his Reign was short. It is rather to be wondered, that such a Tyrant should meet with any Defenders. Yet was his Equity cried up by the flattering Senate, on one of his Reverses in Bronze, by a female Figure standing, with an armed Spear in the left Hand, and an even Balance in the right, distinguished as the AEQVITAS AVGVSTI, according to the Poet:

VITELLIVS.

Pl. XXII. 13.

Scis etenim justum gemina suspendere lance Ancipitis libræ.

Thou know'ft with equal Hand to hold the Scale. DRYDEN.

But his Spies now arriving from Syria and Judea, with Advices that the whole East submitted to his Authority, it is incredible how much his Haughtiness and Indolence encreased upon him. For now, being freed from all Apprehensions, both himself and his Army bade adieu to all Roman Discipline. His Fears had arisen chiefly from that Quarter; for Vespasian was much talked of, and he was moved at the Mention of his Name. It is therefore probable that at this Time his Coins, in Bronze, were

were struck, which are still extant, shewing a VITELLIVS female Figure at rest, with her right Hand upon Pl. XXII. 12 her Head, and before her a blazing Torch, and a Serpent rifing from a Congius or Measure, with the Legend SECVRITAS P ROMANI; in the Area

But that cautious Commander was only weighing the Circumstances of Things around him. Mucianus, the Proconful of Syria, was well disposed towards him, and more fo towards his Son Titus. Alexander, who governed Egypt, was in the same Counsels. The third Legion, which had passed from Syria into Mæsia, he counted for his own, and had a good Hope of the other Legions of Illyricum; for the Arrogance of the Vitellian Soldiers had very much exasperated all the Armies. Confirmed at length by the Persuasions of Mucianus, and his Friends and Officers, he threw off his Difguise. The first Motion was made by Tiberius Alexander, in Egypt, who disposed the Legions there to take the Oath to VESPASIAN. This was done by his own Troops also, with inexpressible Ardour. Those at Antioch did the same, whom, as well as the Syrians in general, Mucianus had violently inflamed, by afferting, that VITELLIUS had determined to fend the German Legions into Syria, and to order the Syrian Legions to winter in Ger-VOL. II. many.

VITELLIVS.

Measures. So did Sohemus, Antiochus, and Agrippa. Nor was the young and beautiful Queen Berenice less agreeable through the Magnificence of her Prefents. Thus Asia, Achaia, and the neighbouring Parts, professed Obedience to Vespasian. The Legions of Cappadocia were afterwards brought over. It was resolved, that Mucianus should march with a Part of the Forces against Vitellius. Letters were written to all the Armies, and the Prætorians invited from all Quarters to take Arms. Mucianus, with the light-armed Troops, marched on with moderate Speed, and was followed by the sixth Legion, and a Body of thirteen thousand Regulars.

This was no fooner known, than the Legions in Mæsia and Illyricum declared for Vespasian. Influenced by these, the two that were in Pannonia, with Antonius Primus at their Head, took the same Engagements, and were imitated by the Troops in Dalmatia. All the Forces, which had savoured Otho, were strongly solicited to the same Service. The Design was, to draw so near on all Sides, as to be ready to enter Italy in the ensuing Spring. But the Activity of Primus disdained these dilatory Counsels. He advanced to Aquileia, gained Possession of several Cities, and deseated a Body of Horse and Foot belonging to the Enemy. Being then re-inforced of Verona, and so cut off their Communication with Germany.

VITELLIUS, justly alarmed, gave Orders for his Troops to take the Field. New Musters were made, and every possible Encouragement given. But the German Army was no more the same. Luxury, and Debaucheries of every Kind, had sunk their Spirits, and enervated their Bodies. They were more disposed for Rapine and Sedition than for Discipline and Action. Cacina too, their General, was thought to waver in his Fidelity. He had a Conference with L. Bassus, under whose Command were the two Fleets at Misenum and Ravenna, which soon after revolted. But when he declared his Intention of doing so likewise, he was imprisoned by his own Officers.

Primus had now been joined by three Legions more, and was prepared for a decifive Action. He attacked the Enemy's Cavalry near Cremona, and routed them, with two Legions which came to their Assistance. This brought on a general Engagement, which lasted all Night, and ended in the entire Deseat of the Vitellians. Their Camp was taken, themselves forced to a Surrender, and the unfortunate City of Cremona burned to the Ground.

Still VITELLIUS was absorbed in Luxury, and F 2 little

VITELLIVS.

little moved with evil Tidings. The Defection of Cæcina rather gave him Satisfaction, as it discovered the Affection of his Troops. To the People and the Senate he cried up their Fidelity in the most lofty Terms. A Decree passed for the striking of Coins, which might record it to Posterity. These had for their Reverse two joined Hands, with FIDES EXERCITVVM S. C. But when he heard of their Defeat, instead of endeavouring to repair his Losses, his Study was to conceal them. His other General, Valens, who had been confined by Sickness, had now fallen into the Enemy's Hands, by whom he was afterwards put to Death; and his remaining Troops had unfeafonably quitted the Paffage of the Apennine Mountains. Yet, in the Midst of these Distresses, he assumed the Title of CAE-SAR, which he had hitherto rejected.

But, on the Captivity of Valens, most of the Vitellian Forces went over to the opposite Party. On the News of this, he made a public Offer of surrendering the Empire, in which he was prevented by the Violence of his German Guards, who drove Sabinus, the Brother of Vespasian, and Governor of Rome (with whom the Compact was actually made) while he endeavoured to enforce it, into the Capitol, and besieged him there. Yet not his Guards only, but all around him, seemed averse to this this Agreement: fo that when he would have de- VITELLIN livered his Sword, as the Enfign of his Authority, to the Consul first, next to the Magistrates, and then to the several Senators present, they refused to receive it. On this he declared, that he would go and furrender it in the Temple of Concord. But when feveral of them cried out aloud, that their Concord was in him; that "himself was their Concord;" he returned, affirming, that he would then keep his Sword, together with the Surname of Con-CORD, which they had given him. This was ratified by a Decree; for we have one of his Reverses with the Figure of this imaginary Goddess, Pl. XXII. feated, having a Cornucopiæ in her left Hand, and a Patera in the right, with an Altar blazing before her, and the Legend CONCORDIA AVGVSTI: in the Exergue S. C. At last the Capitol was taken by Affault, and that superb Structure reduced to Ashes. Sabinus was murdered by the Soldiers, and this little Success seemed to revive the Spirit of the Party. The Populace, in general, declared for him, and defeated Petilius Cerealis, who was marching to the Relief of the Capitol, at the Head of a thoufand Horse. His Brother Lucius was successful also against the Marines in Campania. But Primus, advancing with his Forces to the City, was encountered under the very Walls. Having driven the VITELLIVS. the Enemy within the Gates, the Battle was there renewed, and continued the whole Day. In the End, those who remained in Arms took Shelter in the Prætorian Camp, as their last Refuge, where they were with Difficulty forced, and put to the Sword. When VITELLIUS heard that the Enemy was at Hand, he left the Chair, in which he was then carried, and fled privately to his Father's House, attended only by his Baker and his Cook; but the next Day, on a light Report that a Peace was obtained, he returned to the Palace, when, finding it entirely deferted, he put on a Belt, stuffed with Gold Coins, and concealed himself in the Porter's Lodge, a Dog being chained before the Door, which he barred with the Bed and Bedstead. Here he was found, and hence he was dragged with Ignominy to the Gemonian Stairs, where he suffered a painful Death. His Head was then cut off, and exposed through the City, and his Body thrown into the Tyber.

> VITELLIUS was of an enormous Size, with a Face made red by Intemperance, a fat Belly, and lame of one Thigh, having been hurt by a Chariot, while he waited on Caligula, as he was driving. He confumed feven Millions of our Money on his Belly in the Space of a few Months. And it is thought, that, had he reigned much longer, the Revenues of the whole Roman Empire would have VITELLIVS been insufficient for his Table. He perished, with his Brother and Son, in the sifty-seventh Year of his Age, after having reigned one Year, all but ten Days. We have no Greek Coins of this Emperor, but what were struck in Egypt, and they are rarer than those of Otho. Vaillant enumerates only sour, which have for their Reverses a Serapis, an Iss, a Canopus, and a Victory.

The Control of the Control of the

T. FLAVIUS VESPASIANUS.

VESPASIAN.

Senate, and his Sons, TITUS and DOMITIAN, elected Cæsars. The eldest also entered upon the Consulate with his Father. Hence on the Denarius, which on one Side bears the Emperor's laureate Head, with IMP CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG, we have for the Reverse the Heads of his two Sons, with TI CAESAR AVG F COS, Titus Cæsar Augusti Filius, for the one, and CAESAR AVG F, for the other. In the East he had encountered no Obstruction in his Way to Empire, except that which he met with from Anicetus, the Freedman of Polemo, the late King of Pontus. This

Pl. XXII. 16.

Man, having got together a Fleet of light Ships, vespasian made himself Master of Trapezund, and cut in Pieces a Cohort there in Garrison. Against him Vespasian detached Virdius Geminus, a Commander of approved Valour, who, building some Liburnian Vessels, defeated him in the Mouth of the River Chobus, while he imagined himself secure under the Protection of Sedochus, the King of Lazi. This Victory, according to Tacitus, gave great Joy to Vespasian. It is celebrated on a Medal in Bronze, pl. XXII. 19 by a Victory alate, standing on the Prow of a Ship, having a Wreath of Laurel held out in her right Hand, and a Palm Branch in the left, with the Legend VICTORIA NAVALIS; in the Area S. C.

At this Time both VESPASIAN and TITUS were at a Distance from Rome; for the former had committed to the latter the Care of the Fewish War, and was himself at Alexandria in Egypt, where he much exasperated the People by the heavy Taxes imposed upon them. Mean while Mucianus governed all in Italy, and ratified his Orders with the Seal of VESPASIAN, sent to him for that Purpose. His principal Care was to fill the Treasury; for Money, he said, was the Nerves of Government, which he advised VESPASIAN (and his Advice was not lost) to procure by all Means. The Senate confidered him rather as a Joint-Emperor VOL. II. than G than a Subject; and when the Honour of the Confulate was disposed of, as is said above, they conferred on Domitian the Prætorship, and Consular Authority; on Mucianus triumphal Ornaments, on Pretence of an Expedition against the Sarmatians. For a Triumph over Citizens was not allowed. Even when the Dictator triumphed for his Success in Africa, his Victory over Juba was the Pretext. Antonius Primus was rewarded with Consular Honours, and Cornelius Fuscus, and Arrius Varus, with Prætorian, for their signal Services.

Some Rebellions happened now in Gaul and Germany, which are described at large by Tacitus, and which were quelled at length, not without much Difficulty and Bloodshed, by Gerealis. One of them was attended with extraordinary Circumstances. Julius Sabinus, Prince of the Lingones, who claimed his Descent from the Dictator, took upon him the Title of Cæsar, and raised a considerable Army. Being deseated, he retired into the Country, and concealed himself and his Wife in a subterraneous Sepulchre for nine Years together, having two Children born to him in that Time.

Young Domitian, having been guilty of many arbitrary Proceedings, kept himself at Albano through Fear of his Father. He had fallen in Love with Domitia, the Daughter of Corbulo, whom he took from her Husband, and kept as one of his Mistresses, Mistresses, though he afterwards married her. But VESPASIA VESPASIAN, arriving at Brundusum, was there met by Mucianus, and the principal Nobility; as he was at Beneventum by Domitian, whose Reception was little agreeable to the Haughtiness of his Dispofition. When he came near to Rome, he was attended by the whole City, in a Manner, and with the loudest Acclamations. He repaid this Welcome by an uniform Behaviour, full of Sweetness and Affability. He resided rarely in the Palace, being fond of the Sallustian Gardens; and the Gates of the royal Apartments were all Day open and unguarded. He was constant in his Attendance on the Senate, and communicated all Things with the Fathers. In what concerned the Commonwealth he acted like an Emperor; in all Things else as a private Person.

On the Commencement of the new Year he became Consul for the third Time. The Medals now struck in Honour of him are numerous. Those in Gold have, some, his laureate Head, with Pl. XXII. I IMP CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG TR P.; and on the Reverse, Returning Fortune, with COS III FORT RED, Fortuna Redux. This Deity lays hold on the Prow of the Ship which brought him, with her right Hand, and has a Cornucopiæ in hereleft. For he was quite in Disgrace under Nero, whom VESPASIAN. whom he had grievously offended, sometimes by fleeping, at others by leaving the Place, while he fung; fo that he was altogether obscure, when called upon to command against the Fews. Other Pl. XXII. 19. Reverses, of the same Head and Title, have the Temple of VESTA, which he either repaired or Pl. XXIII. T. adorned: and others, a Victory alate, treading on a. Globe, and protending a Wreath of Laurel from her right Hand, while her left fustains a Branch of Palm: in the Area VIC AVG, for Victoria Au-Pl. XXIII. 2. gusti. Others, of the same Metal, have his laureate Head, furrounded by a larger Inscription, IMP CAESAR VESPAS AVG COS III TR PPP, Imperator Cæsar Vespasianus Augustus Consul Tertio Tribunitiá Potestate Pater Patriæ; and on the Reverse the Head of his Wife, with the Legend DIVA DOMITILLA AVG. For he had married FLAVIA Domitilla, the Daughter of Statilius Capella, an Equestrian, by whom he had TITUS, DOMITIAN, and Domitilla, and who died, as did the Daughter, while he was yet a private Person. But it appears by these Medals, and the Deisication recorded on them (though unnoticed by Tacitus, Suetonius, and Dio) that her Memory was very dear to him. Patin gives us a Greek Coin in Bronze, inscribed Pl. XXIII. 3. ΦΛΑΟΥΙΑ ΔΟΜΙΤΙΛΛΑ, Flavia Domitilla, with an Horse, on full Speed, for the Reverse, and on the Back of it a Serpent, raised and hissing, with his VESPASTA Sting exerted, and underneath L. S. for the fixth Year: by which Figures he supposes the Brevity of her Life to be fignified, the Horse being the Symbol of Celerity, as the Serpent is of the Year revolving into itself; or rather, as it is so figured, the Emblem of Death. But after all, whether it relates to this Lady or not, is uncertain. But her Denarius we are sure of, since it bears her Head, with DIVA DOMITILLA AVGVSTA; and has on the Reverse a Fortune, with a Cornucopiæ in her left Hand, and the Helm in her right: the Legend FORTVNA AVGVST. At this Time the Emperor's two Sons were dignified with the Title of Princes of the Roman Youth, fince they are reprefented on Horseback as such on the Reverse of one Pl. XXIII. of his Coins in Bronze, the Legend of which is Titus ET DOMITIANUS CAESARES PRINcipes IVVENTutis. On the Reverse of another, they PLXXIII. are placed by the Emperor under the protecting Hands of his guardian Genius, who brings forward the eldest with the right, while the youngest is shielded under the left Arm: the Legend is TVTELA AVGVSTI. There is a remarkable Passage in Suetonius, where, speaking of the Omens which foreboded the Empire to VESPASIAN, he fays, "There were not wanting Persons who interpreted & thefe

Back

Pl. XXIII.

ESPASIAN.

"these Things as if the Commonwealth would one Day come, in TVTELAM ejus, under the Care of his guardian Genius." Another, in St. Jerome, will illustrate this, "Under this Error, and most evil Custom (of Idolatry) the Cities of many Provinces labour, and Rome itself, the Mistress of the World, in her several Courts and Palaces, venerating the Image of TVTELA with waxen Tapers and Lights, whom they call by that Name, with respect to the Guardianship and Protection expected." With this Title the lyric Poet addresses Augustus.

----- O Tutela præsens Italiæ dominæque Romæ! Hor.

Dread Guardian of th' Imperial State, Whose Godhead rules thy Country's Fate!

FRANCIS.

21. XXIII. 7.

A Medal in Bronze, of the first Magnitude, with the Emperor's laureate Head, and his Titles at large, IMP. CAES. VESPASIAN AVG PM TR P P P COS III, has also the two Cæsars on the Reverse, with their Designation to the Fasces. Each has the Hasta pura in his right Hand; and the eldest of the two, which is the larger and manlier Figure, is stilled Imperator; so that it was struck after the Conclusion of the Jewish War. The Legend behind Domitian is CAES AVG F DES, Cæsar

Cæsar Augusti Filius Designatus; and that belind VESPASII TITUS, which is continued in the Exergue, is IMP AVG F COS DESIT, Imperator Augusti Filius Conful Designatus iterum. For the latter returned this Year from the Destruction of Jerusalem. It was the ancient and constant Opinion of the East, that the Ruler of the World was to come from Judea. The Jews, with Reason, taking this Prediction to belong to themselves, had rushed precipitately into that Rebellion, which ended in the Excision of their Capital, and the Dispersion of those who furvived the general Slaughter. The Adulation of Fosephus, however, applied it to VESPASIAN, which procured him Liberty and Favour. A Triumph on this Occasion was decreed both to the Father and the Son; and the former, as well as the latter, was faluted Imperator for the nineteenth Time, as is evident from the Denarius before us, bearing his laureate Head, with CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG. and on the Reverse the Legend IMP XIX. And it is further evident, from the Measure between the Letters and the Figures, and the Ears of Wheat springing from it, that a Congiary of Corn was distributed to the People on the same Occasion. Magnificent Arches were erected to both, and the Triumph was most pompous. Tired with the Tediousness of it, he could

Pl. XXIII.

Pl. XXIII. 9,

10, 11, 12.

VESPASIAN. not help faying, that he was defervedly punished, for desiring at his Years a Triumph, neither due to his Family, nor hoped for by himself. It is celebrated on the Reverses of many of his Coins, by the Figure of a Woman, representing Judea, seated on an Heap of Arms, at the Foot of a Palm-Tree, with her Veil hanging loofe behind, and leaning her Head upon her left Hand, in a Posture denoting Sorrow and Captivity. The Legend of all but one is Pl. XXIII. 13. IVDEA CAPTA. This naturally reminds one of that Passage of the Psalmist, By the Waters of Babylon we sate down and wept, when we remembered thee, O Sion. "But what is more remarkable," fays Mr. Addison, "we find Judea represented as a " Woman in Sorrow, sitting upon the Ground, in " a Passage of the Prophet that foretells the very " Captivity recorded on these Medals." But the Legend of that one is very particular, as it is an Address of this captive Daughter of Ferufalem to her Conqueror, VICISTI CAESAR. Such Addresses, however, are not so uncommon on Coins, as to impeach the Genuineness of them, since we shall find another of the same Kind in the Course of this Reign. And with respect to this before us, Patin has pronounced it most unquestionably genuine. But another Reverse has the same melancholy Figure, with the Addition of a Shield fixed to the PalmPalm-Tree, and a winged Victory inscribing the VESPASIA Action thereon; and here the Legend is VICTORIA PL XXIII. AVGVSTI. The last-mentioned Author remarks, on the Coin before us, that we find this Way of registering a Victory touched upon in Virgil:

> Ære cavo clypeum, magni gestamen Abantis Postibus adversis figo, et rem carmine signo; " Æneas bæc de Danais victoribus arma." Æn. lib. iii. I fix'd upon the Temple's lofty Door The brazen Shield which vanquish'd Abas bore: The Verse beneath my Name and Actions speaks, "These Arms Eneas took from conqu'ring Greeks."

The Heaps of Arms on which the Woman fits, in the Coins above, denote that they were become useless, or that a Peace was the Consequence of this Success. In the fourth is the Figure of a Man, with his Hands bound behind him, which feems intended to represent the Captivity of Simon, the Fewish Chief, whom Dio calls Barphoras, and Tacitus confounds with John of Giscala, by misapplying to this latter the Name of Bargioras, who was led in Triumph and put to Death on the same Day. Another Medal of Gold, but struck Pl. XXIII. the following Year, records the same Success and Triumph, having the Emperor's laureate Head, with IMP CAES VESPAS AVG PM TR P IIII PP COS IIII; and on the Reverse a Trophy, with the Vol. II. H Legend Casque or Helmet on his Head, a Spear in his right Hand, and holding a Trophy in his left, called in the Legend MARS VICTOR. This last Medal is in Bronze; and all of them bear the Sanction of the Senate.

The Senate decreed to VESPASIAN all the usual Honours, full of Joy and full of Hope, as an End now feemed to be put to Wars of every Sort; Gaul, Spain, Germany, Illyricum, Egypt, Judea, Syria, and all the Provinces, enjoying profound Quiet, as if the World throughout was pacified. This State of Pl. XXIII. 17. Things is recognized on one of his Denarii, containing his laureate Head, and the maimed Inscription IMP CAESAR VESP ..... P; and having on the Reverse the Busto of PEACE, inscribed in the Legend PACI ORBIS TERR AVG. The Reader will endeavour to make out the EPH, for which we are at a Loss; unless, perchance, it be an Intimation that it was struck E PECVNIA HOSTICA, from Money taken from the Enemy. Pl. XXIII. 18. But there is a very fine Medal in Bronze, with his laureate Head, and a full Inscription, IMP CAE-SAR VESPASIANVS AVG PM TP PP COS III; of the Reverse of which Mr. Addison has taken particular Notice. "Here (fays he) you fee the " Peace

" Peace which VESPASIAN procured the Empire, VESPASIA

" after having happily finished all its Wars, both

- " at home and abroad. The Woman with the
- "Olive-Branch in her Hand is the Figure of
- " PEACE.

Pignora Pacis

Prætendens dextrâ ramum canentis Olivæ. SIL. IT. lib. iii.

In her Left Hand she holds
The Olive-Branch, the candid Pledge of Peace.

"With the other Hand she thrusts a lighted Torch

" under an Heap of Armour that lies by an Altar.

"This alludes to a Custom among the ancient

" Romans, of gathering up the Armour that lay

" scattered on the Field of Battle, and burning it

" as an Offering to one of their Deities (Mars).

" It is to this Custom that Virgil refers, and which

" Silius Italicus has described at large.

Qualis eram cum primam aciem Præneste sub ipså
Stravi, scutorumque incendi victor acervos. Virg. Æn. lib. viii.

Such as I was beneath Præneste's Walls;
Then when I made the foremost Foes retire,
And set whole Heaps of conquer'd Shields on fire.

DRYDEN.

Ast tibi, Bellipotens, Sacrum, constructus acervo Ingenti mons armorum consurgit ad astra: Ipse manu celsam pinum, slammâque comantem Attollens, ductor Gradivum in vota ciebat. Sil, It, lib. x. ESPASIAN.

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

- " To Thee the Warrior-God, aloft in Air
- " A Mountain-Pile of Roman Arms they rear:
- "The Gen'ral, grasping in his Victor-Hand
- " A Pine of stately Growth, he wav'd the Brand,
- " And cry'd, O Mars, to Thee devote I yield
- "These choice First-fruits of Honour's purple Field."

With respect to the standing Column, "It was

- " from this Pillar that the Spear was toffed at the - " Opening of a War, for which Reason the little
- "Figure on the Top of it holds a Spear in its.
- ". Hand, and Peace turns her Back upon it."

Prospicit a templo summum brevis area Circum:

Est ibi non parvæ parva columna notæ:

Hinc solet hasta manu, belli Prænuncia, mitti;

In regem et gentes cum placet arma capi.

Ovin

- "Where the high Fane the ample Cirque commands,
- " A little, but a noted Pillar stands;
- " From hence, when Rome the distant Kings defies,
- " In Form the War-denouncing Jav'lin flies."

In the Exergue, S.C. On the same Occasion was the Medal struck, which we have given as a Frontispiece to this Reign, which is in Bronze, and of the first Magnitude; the Reverse of which exhibits a military Figure symbolical of Rome, having an Helmet on his Head, the Hasta pura in his left Hand, and in his right a Victory, with a Palm-Branch and Laurel-Wreath; the Legend ROMA, and in the Area, S.C.

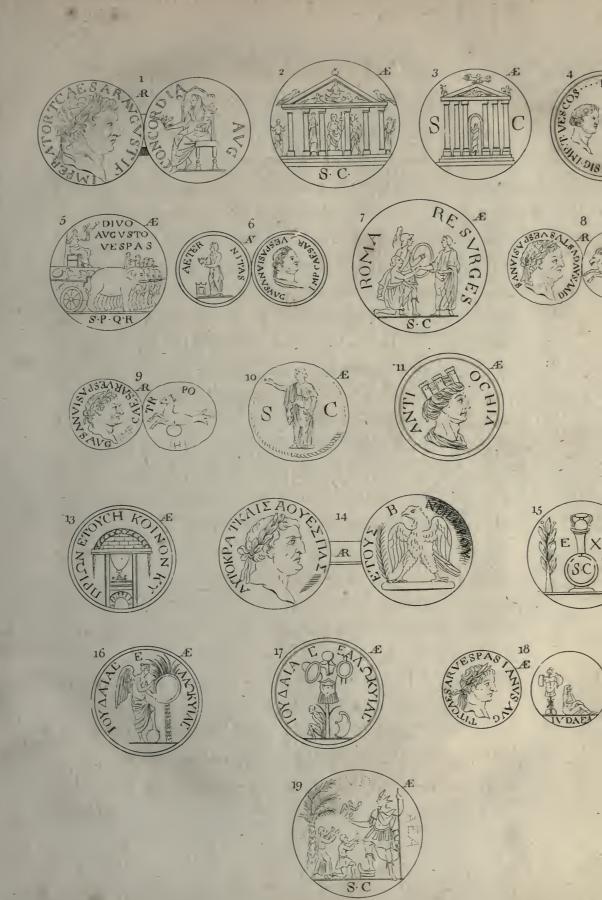

Notwithstanding:

Notwithstanding the heavy Load of Imposts un- VESPASIA der which the People laboured, the Senate were pleased to compliment the Emperor on the Public CREDIT, by decreeing a Reverse to one of his Coins, Pl. XXIII. with a female Figure, having a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and the Lap gathered; while the other Hand is extended, and the Palm open, to express the Frankness of Trust, and the Plenty produced by it. The Legend names her FIDES PVBLICA. This might be owing to his Non-Infringement hitherto of the Acts of his Predecessors, or it might be done in order to recommend to him the Establishment of what they now imputed. For we read not of any particular Provision made for this End; a Bleffing which feems to have been referved for the Government of his Son Titus. Yet it is probable that the Decree was grounded on some Profession or Declaration to this Purpose.

But before the Arrival of Titus at Rome, very injurious Reports had been spread of him, as intending to set up for himself in the East. These seem to have been owing to the Progress which he made through those Countries, after the Destruction of Ferusalem. At Antioch he had been received with the highest Honours, and, when he came to the Euphrates, was addressed by Ambassadors from Vologeses, the Parthian Monarch, who presented.

VESPASIAN. presented to him a Crown of Gold. On his Return he passed into Egypt, visiting Alexandria with much Pomp; and at Memphis affished at the Consecration of the Apis, with a Diadem on his Head; and tho' this was according to the ancient Rite of that Religion, there were not wanting those who gave it a perverse Interpretation. I have no doubt Pl. XXIII. 20. but that the Silver Medallion before us bears Relation to this Transaction, as it represents him so adorned. The Infcription IMP T CAES F VESP AVG PMIRCS III; which may be read Imperator Titus Filius Vespasiani Augusti Pontificis Maximi Impérii Romani Consulis Tertio. On the Reverse is a Figure feated, with his Helmet on, and resting his Shield upon his Knee; while another Person, standing by his Horse, holds his Finger towards his Mouth, intimating fomewhat mysterious: in the Exergue, S C. This, added to the extraordinary Attachment of the Soldiery, encouraged the Rumour; on which Account he made what Haste he could to the Embraces of his Father, crying out, "I am come, Father, I am come;" and, to evidence his Duty and Fidelity, as well as their perfect Agreement, other Coins were struck in Silver, with his laureate Head, and IMPERATOR T CAESAR AVGVSTI F; having on the Reverse a Concord feated, with a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand,

Pi. XXIV. 1.

Hand, and a Bunch of Poppies in the right, the VESPASIAN Emblem of Placidity and Quiet, intitled CON-CORDIA AVG. From this Time TITUS became a Partner in the Tribunitial Power, and Joint-Cenfor with his Father.

All this while the Capitol was rebuilding with extraordinary Magnificence, the Care of which the Emperor had committed to L. Vestinus. It was raised upon the old Foundations, with some Addition of Height, and makes the Reverse of one of his Medals in Bronze; whereon we see the Fi- Pl. XXIV. 2 gure of the Temple, and the Deities (Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva) inclosed; and in the Exergue, S C. In his fixth Consulate the Temple of PEACE was dedicated, in which the Spoils taken from the Temple of Ferusalem were laid up. The Plan of this also forms the Reverse of one of his Medals, having Pl. XXIV. 3 in the Area S C. He finished also the Temple of DIVVS CLAVDIVS, begun by AGRIPPINA; raifed an Amphitheatre in the Middle of the City, laid out a Forum, and was the Author of many other public Works.

Berenice now came to Rome with her Brother Agrippa. On the latter, Prætorian Honours were conferred. The former was received into the Palace, and became the Favourite of TITUS. She hoped to become his Wife, and acted as fuch.

VESPASIAN.

But when he found that this Connection rendered him unpopular, he parted with her, though much against the Will of both. At this Time Julius Sabinus, already spoken of, was discovered and brought to Rome. With him suffered his Wife, called differently by the Historians, Peponilla, Epponina, and Empona, though she produced her two Sons to move Compassion. "These (said she to the Emperor) I brought forth in a Sepulchre, that we might be the more Suppliants." Her Speech extorted Tears, but not Mercy. The famous Julius Agricola was now made Governor of Britain.

In the ninth Consulate of VESPASIAN, we find his two Sons designed jointly to succeed to that Honour. This appears from one of his Reverses, whereon their Bustos face each other, with the Legend IMP T VES COS..... and D. CAESAR. AVG. F. COS. DESIG.

Alienus Cæcina, whose Exploits, and subsequent Desection from VITELLIUS, have been already spoken of, now cancelled the Merit of the last Service, by entering into a Conspiracy with Eprius Marcellus, against the Life of VESPASIAN; though both had been distinguished by him with many Honours. The former had engaged a large Number of Soldiers, but was slain in the Palace by the Command

Pl. XXIV. 4.

Command of Tirus, as he rose from an Entertain- VESPASIAI ment there. The latter was condemned, and cut his own Throat. Thus the Emperor escaped the Snares of ungrateful Men, but was soon after carried off by a Fever. When reproved in his Sickness, by the Physicians, for living after his usual Manner, and fatiguing himself with the Cares of State, he answered, that "it became an Emperor " to die standing." When People talked of a Comet which appeared then, he faid, that " it " did not portend Death to him, but to the King " of Parthia, who wore his Hair, for that himself "was bald." When he found his Disease mortal, " Methinks (faid he) I am going to be a God," alluding to the Roman Custom of deifying their Emperors. Thus was he full of Jest and Pleasantry to the last. He was in his seventieth Year when he died, having reigned ten Years wanting fix Days. His Confecration-Medal represents him drawn by four Elephants, with a Spear in his right Hand, and a Victory, holding out a Wreath, in his left: in the Area DIVO AVGVSTO VESPAS; and in the Exergue S. P. Q. R. A fmall one of Pl. XXIV. 6 Gold, with his laureate Head, and the Inscription IMP CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG, has for the Reverse a Priest, veiled, in the Act of offering, with an Altar before him: the Legend AETER-NITAS.

Pl. XXIV. 5

VESPASIAN.

He was a square-set Figure, with Limbs compact and strong, and his Countenance like that of one in the Act of straining. He had good Health, and, to preserve it, used Friction to a stated Quantity, and fasted one Day in every Month. Suetonius fays, that the only Thing justly blameable in him was his Avarice. Yet he appears not to have hoarded Wealth for himself, but for public Uses. For he was liberal to all Sorts of People. He allowed yearly Salaries to the poorer Confulars, and restored many Cities, throughout all the Provinces, which had fuffered by Earthquakes and Fire. Of the Imperial City he was particularly regardful, having restored many of its noblest Edifices, and added others. There are ancient Inscriptions yet extant which testify his Liberality in the Reparation of Temples, Aquæducts, and Highways. Where Houses had been burned, or run to Ruin, he obliged the Owners to rebuild them, or allowed that Liberty to others, infomuch that the City began to wear a new Face. And these Improvements were judged by the Senate worthy to be recorded on his Medals. For there is one before us, on which he is raifing the suppliant City from the Ground; a military Person (probably his Son Titus) assisting, with the Legend ROMA RESVRGES: though this may also refer to the Condition of the State in general;

Pl. XXIV. 7.

general, rent and distressed as it had been by Civil VESPASIA Wars, till relieved by his Accession. As a Commander, he perfectly understood his Duty. His Donative to the Soldiers was no larger than in Times of Peace; and he was a strict Disciplinarian. When a spruce young Man, scented with Persumes, came to return him Thanks for his Preferment, "I had " rather," faid he, " that you had fmelled of "Garlic," and revoked his Grant. As a Man, his Civility, Clemency, and Placability, were remarkable. He splendidly endowed the Daughter of VITEL-LIUS, and gave her most honourably in Marriage. When in Nero's Time he lamented himself to the Officer, who was fent to forbid him the Palace, faying, "What shall I do? and whither shall I "go?"—the other, in a furly Tone, replied, "To the Gallows."-This Man waited upon him, when Emperor, to intreat his Pardon; when all the Answer that he gave him was, "Go, be "gone-to the Gallows."-When he was advised to beware of Metius Pomposianus, supposed to be of the Imperial Family, he not only did not hurt him, but made him Conful; faying, that "he would answer for his Gratitude." innocent Person suffered with his Knowledge. Helvidius Priscus, who would falute him only as a private Ferson, and who, during his Prætorship, would I 2

VESPASIAN. would not acknowledge him in his Edicts, though first banished, and afterwards doomed to Death, he would have faved at any Rate, and had faved him, had he not been misinformed that he was already dead. Nay, he has been known to shed Tears. and utter Groans at the Execution of a just Sentence. But he was not without Superstition, being fo positively confident of his own Horoscope, that he affirmed to the Senate, that " nobody but his. " own Sons could fucceed him;" and it should feem that he was born under Capricorn, as well as Pl. XXIV. 8, 9. Augustus, having the same Figure on the Reverses. of two of his Silver Coins, which are here exhibited, the one struck in the fourth Year of his Reign, the. other after his Death. As an Emperor, he was the Patron of Learning and Arts, and the first who granted annual Stipends to the Greek and Latin Orators. He made a compleat Collection of all Decrees, both of the Senate and People, and of all Treaties, Leagues, and Privileges, from the Building of the City. He appointed Commissioners. for the Restitution of what Individuals had lost by Plunder in the Civil Wars. He bore very placidly the Freedom of his Friends, the oblique Reflections of the Lawyers, and the contumacious Spirit of the Philosophers. When Salvius Liberalis, in his Defence of a rich Client, ventured to fay, "What is it to CESAR, if Hipparchus be worth a thousand VESPASIAN "Great Sesterces?" himself commended the Expression; and in the Senate made it his Business to encourage, as much as possible, all Freedom of Speech. And to this liberal Disposition I conceive that we owe one of his Coins, the Reverse of which Pl. XXIV. 10 represents a Senator in the Act of speaking freely, without any Legend, except what marks it struck by a Decree of that illustrious Body. Suetonius fays, that he did not receive, till late, the TRIBU-NITIAL Power, and the Appellation of Pater Pa-TRIE; which Affertion appears to be manifestly false, by the many Coins which we have produced, struck in his third Confulate, which was but the fecond Year of his Reign, on which both thefe Titles are constantly inscribed.

"is

There are many Greek Coins of him in the Cabinets of the Curious. Vaillant has described nineand-twenty; fome of which are before us. The first, though from a Greek City, bears the Latin Name of ANTIOCHIA, because struck there by the Romans, under Mucianus, while the Emperor was yet in Afia, and has the Genius of the City, which was the third in the whole Empire, crowned with Turrets. The fecond, struck by the Community Pl. XXIV. 13 of the Island of Cyprus, has the Temple of the Paphian Venus, described under the Reign of TIBERIUS.

VESPASIAN. TIBERIUS, with KOINON KYHPION ETOYC H, The Community of the Cypriots, in the eighth Year. A third, struck by the Thessalonians, has an Eagle with a Palm-Branch, and under it the Name ΘΕΣΣΑΛΟΝΙΚΕΩΝ, inclosed in a Wreath of Olive. The fourth is obliterated in Part, but has the Em-Pl. XXIV. 14. peror's laureate Head, with AVTOKPAT KAIZA ΟΥΕΣΠΑΣ····· Imperator Cæsar Vespasianus ······ and on the Reverse an Eagle, with a Palm-Branch before him, and the Legend ETOYS B ME IEPOY, In the second Year of the New Temple, meaning the Capitol. The next was struck at Nicomedia, the Capital of Bithynia, which Province was at that Time, as appears from other Coins, under the Government of Marcus Plancius Varus. It has the laureate Head of VESPASIAN, and is inscribed ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡΙ ΚΑΙΚΑΡΙ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩ ΟΥΕΣΠΑΣΙΑΝΩ NEIK, Imperatori Cæsari Augusto Vespasiano Nicomedienses. But it requires a Sphynx to unriddle the Reverse, which is a Tiger resting his Fore-Paws upon an Urn: the Legend fays EIII MAPKOY ΠΛΑΝΚΙΟΥ ΟΥΑΡΟΥ, Sub Marco Plancio Varo. Whether it has any Relation to the Reverse before us, which exhibits a raifed Urn, between two Olive Branches, which was struck EX S. C. let the curious Reader judge.

Pl. XXIV. 15.

TITUS FLAVIUS VESPASIANUS.

O TITUS, before the Death of his Father, TITVS. Cruelty and Haughtiness had been imputed, nor were his Hands free from Corruption. Yet his Reign, from the Time that he became fole Master of the Roman Empire, was without Blemish. Pity! that it proved fo short, comprehending only two Years two Months and twenty Days! It is faid, that neither Augustus, if he had died sooner, nor. TITUS, if he had lived longer, had possessed the mighty Reputation, which the World allows to both: fince the former, constrained by the Number, and the Plots, of his Enemies, had been very fevere at first, and afterwards living long, the Multitude titude of his Benefits had effaced the Remembrance of his Cruelty: and Titus could not for any Length of Time have maintained his Empire by fuch Mildness and Innocence. But most unhappy is the State of Princes, if it cannot be supported by the strictest Virtue!

TITVS.

Most of the Coins that we have of this Emperor were struck in the Life-time of his Father, whose Power he shared, and with whom he was seven Times Conful. On these he bears the Title of PONtifex, but not of PM or Pontifex Maximus. Three of them have Reverses of the Judea capta, figured nearly as on those of VESPASIAN. There Pl. XXIV. 16, are two other Greek ones in Bronze; the one with a Victory alate, inscribing his Triumph on a Shield, fixed against a Palm-Tree, and resting the left Foot upon a Globe; the other with a Trophy, and a Captive bound at the Foot of it. The Legend of both is ΙΟΥΔΑΙΑΕ ΕΑΛΩΚΥΙΑΕ, i. e. Judeá captâ. His Denarius bears his laureate Head, with Pl. XXIV. 18. TIT CAESAR VESPASIANVS AVG. and the Reverse, the Figure of a lamenting Female veiled, and fitting on the Ground, with a Trophy raised behind her; in the Exergue, IVDAEA. Another Pl. XXIV. 19. Reverse crowns him with a Diadem; his left Hand holds the Hasta pura, his right a winged Victory with a Wreath, and his right Foot treads on the

Prow

i i

Prow of a Ship; before him is a Palm-Tree and TITVS two Captives suppliant: the Legend defaced is IVDAEA; and in the Exergue, S C. His Medal in Gold, with his laureate Head, says, T CAES IMP VESP PON TR POT; and bears on the Reverse, a Victory alate, holding out a Wreath, and standing on a Globe; in the Area, VICtoria AVGusti. Other Reverses shew him in his quadrigated triumphal Car; in the Exergue, S C. There is also VICTORIA NAVALIS, a Naval Victory, recorded on one of his Reverses, struck in his fecond Consulate, exactly in the Manner that we have feen it on one of VESPASIAN'S, with S C in the Area. Tristan refers this to his Victory over the Jews, upon the Lake of Genesareth, after the Taking of Tiberias, which is celebrated by Apollonius:

Jam de tot lembis nullum superesse videres, Partem ignis, partem gurges absumpserat altus, Romanæ plausit volitans Victoria classi.

Not one remaining Vessel could you see, Part had the Deep devour'd, and Part the Flame, While Victory clapp'd her Wings to hail the Reman Name.

Another Medal of the same Year, with his laureate Head, and the Infcription T CAESAR VESPASIAN IMP *IIII PON TR POT II COS II, has for its Reverse, his Brother on Horseback, with the Hasta VOL. II. K pura, Pl. XXV.

Pl. XXV.

Pl. XXV.

Pl. XXV.

PI. XXV. 5. pura, and the Legend CAES DOMITIAN COS
DESIG; and underneath him, S.C. And another PI. XXV. 5. has Mars for its Reverse, armed with Helmet and Spear, but without any Legend, save the S.C.
The last Honour paid to him, while his Father was PI. XXV. 6. yet living, is that of the Columna Rostrata, on which he stands in the military Tunic, with the Hasta pura in his right Hand, and his Head incircled with the Diadem, the Legend being the Continuation of his Titles TR P VIIII IMP XV COS VII PP.

From some Inscriptions in Gruter, published by Grævius, at the End of his Edition of Suetonius, in Quarto, this Emperor appears to have been particularly careful and munificent in the Restoration of the several Aquæducts, which conveyed the Marcian and Claudian Waters, and the Anio, intothe City, for the Benefit of the Inhabitants. Over one of these Fountains he erected a META, or Conic Pillar, which, from its Use, was called the Meta sudans; and, by a Decree of the Senate, it forms Pl. XXV. 7. the Reverse of one of his Coins in Bronze. Another, Pl. XXV. 8. of the first Size, which was struck at the same Time, having his laureate Head and Titles, as we have annexed them to the Front of this Reign, celebrates the Tranquillity of it by a Reverse of Peace, with a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and an OliveBranch in the other, entitled the PAX AVGVSTI; in the Area, S C.

Other Inscriptions, copied by the same Author, record his extraordinary Generosity in Frumentarian Distributions, in the Conservation of Public Structures, and the Restitution of Temples. Amongst them, that noble Amphitheatre, begun by his Father, and now finished by himself, the grand Ruins of which are yet seen, redounded highly to his Honour. For it is perpetuated by one of his Medals, which represents him seated on an Heap of Arms, with the Inscription IMP T CAES VESP AVG PM TR P PP COS VIII; in the Area, S C. And on the other Side is delineated this magnificent Work itself, with a conic Pillar on each Side of it.

Former Emperors, the last excepted, had paid no Regard to the Edicts of their Predecessors, but in the Wantonness of Power had recalled their Bounties, reversed their Privileges, and rescinded their Acts: so that no Considence in, or Dependence on, the Government remained any longer. To remedy this Evil was worthy of the Virtue of Titus. He fully restored the Public Faith, by solemnly confirming at once all Grants, Immunities, and Benefits of every Kind, on whatsoever Person, Place, or People, they had been heretofore conferred.

Pl. XXV.

TITV

K 2

To

T 1 T V S.
Pl. XXV, 10.

To this undoubtedly was owing the Reverse before us, with two united Hands, which hold at the same Time, Spikes of Corn, and a Caduceus, intimating that from such Agreement, spring Plenty and Felicity. It is called in the Legend FIDES PVBLICA. Mr. Addison, therefore, seems to have mistaken the Intent of this Reverse. "The two Hands," says he, "are Emblems of Fidelity."

Inde fides dextræque datæ. Ovid. Met. l. 14..
Thence Faith and Hands were pledg'd.

"By the Inscription we may see that they represerve sent in this Place the Fidelity or Loyalty of the Public towards their Emperor. The Caduceus, rising between the Hands, signifies the Peace that arises from such an Union with their Prince, as the Spike of Corn on each Side shadows out the Plenty that is the Fruit of Peace." It is submitted to the Judgment of the Reader, whether this learned Author has not manifestly mistaken the good Faith of the Government for the Allegiance of the Subject.

No Senator was flain by the Command of Titus, nor did any other Person suffer Death under his Government. His Choice was "rather to perish "than destroy." The Law of Majesty was not heard of; and all Informers were banished the City.

In this Reign a fresh War was kindled in Britain, wherein Julius Agricola laid waste the whole Country of the Enemy; and was the first Roman who sound Britain surrounded by the Sea. For when certain Soldiers mutinied, and slew their Officers, having sled to the Ships, they put to Sea. By Stress of Weather, being driven to the West, they sailed round till they arrived at the opposite Camp of the Romans. After which Agricola sent others, who, steering the same Course, proved it to be an Island. On these Accounts Tirus was once more honoured with the Title of IMPERATOR.

A dreadful Eruption of Mount Vesuvius now destroyed the two Cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii; the Inhabitants of the last being assembled in the Theatre when the City was overwhelmed. This was followed: by a Pestilence: And the next Year, while Tirus was visiting Campania, and effectually relieving the Sufferers there, a subterraneous Fire broke forth at Rome, which did much Mischief. Many public Buildings, and the Capitol among the rest, were consumed by it. The Emperor took the whole Loss upon himself. Besides the Amphitheatre already spoken of, he builded magnificent Baths, which he dedicated in his own Name; and gave pompous Sports, at which he threw wooden Balls among the People, inscribed with with Eatables, Apparel, Vessels of Gold or Silver, Horses, Cattle, Slaves, &c. which whosoever took up, and carried to his Stewards, received the Things specified. On the last Day he was observed to shed Tears. Retiring presently into the Country, he was taken ill upon the Road, and died in the same Villa wherein his Father had expired. A Report went, that his Days were shortened by his Brother, who had before plotted against him, and Victor is positive that he was poisoned by him. Before his Death he declared, that he repented of one Thing only; but what that was is yet unknown. Some will have it to have been his Familiarity with Do-MITIA, his Brother's Wife: which is not probable; fince she, who absolutely denied, would most certainly have boasted of it: Others, that he had spared his Brother, from whose cruel Spirit, and abandoned Life, the Roman People had fo much SETTI UT Evil to expect.

TITVS.

The Remembrance of his Mother was very dear to him, fince we find the Carpentum decreed to her Honour, by the Senate and People, on the Re-Pl. XXV. 11. verse of one of his Coins, in the Area of which we read MEMORIAE DOMITILLAE, and in the Exergue SPQR. He married ARRICIDIA, the Daughter of Tertullus, at one Time Commander of the Prætorian Cohorts; and, after her Death, MARCIA

MARCIA FURNILLA, of an illustrious Family, from TITVS. whom he was divorced, after she had brought him one Daughter. The name of this Infant was Julia. She was by her Father declared Augusta, and married to Sabinus. Several Medals of her in Bronze are yet extant, bearing her Head, with this Inscription, IVLIA IMPeratoris Titi AVGusti Filia AVGVSTA: The Reverses are the Figures of those Deities whose Attributes the Empresses were wont to ascribe to themselves. These are, I. VESTA, Pl. XXV. 12. feated, the Patroness of Chastity, with a Spear in the left Hand, and the Image of Pallas in the right. This was the Palladium, which was kept in the most private Part of the Temple of this Goddess, under the Custody of one only of the Vestals, the View of it being forbidden to all others. A precious Deposit! for they looked upon the Empire of the World to be destined for those who kept it. 2. CERES AVGVSTA, with the Hasta pura and Ears of Corn. 3. CONCORDIA AVGusta, seated as usual, with the Cornucopiæ and Patera; the Emblems of Plenty and Tranquillity. We have her Denarius also, whereon she is very elegantly figured, with the Inscription IVLIA AVGVSTA TITI AVGVSTI F. On the Reverse is Paris, leaning his Arm on a Column, with his Crook, and the Golden Apple, who stiles her in the Legend the VENVS

Pl. XXV. 133

Pl. XXV. 14.

Pl. XXV. 15.

TITVS.

VENVS AVGSTa; a very high Compliment. The Munificence and Benevolence of this Emperor had not been exceeded. He not only forgave, but favoured, those who had conspired against him. One Evening, reflecting that he had bestowed no Favour on any Person that Day, "My Friends," said he, "I have lost a Day." An irrefragable Argument of his Merit was, that the Senate heaped more Thanks and Praises upon him, when dead, than they had ever paid to any other Person while living.

The Greek Coins of him in Bronze are less com-Pl. XXV. 16. mon than those of VESPASIAN. The first before us bears his laureate Head, with ΑΥΤοπρατωρ ΚΑΙσαρ Τιτος ΟΥΕΣΠασιανος ΥΠΑΤΟς II. Imperator Cæsar Titus Vespasianus Consul secundum. The Reverse is a Diana, without Legend, and therefore probably Aruck at Ephefus; though we have the like from Smyrna. One Reverse has a Wreath of Laurel, inclosing ΦΛΑΟΥια ΝΕΑΠΟΛΙς ΣΑΜΑΡΕΙΑΣ, Flavia Neapolis Samariæ, meaning the City of Sichem, which had assumed that Name in Honour of the Imperial Family. So had the City of Cyrene done, which therefore we find called, upon another of his Reverses, ΦΛΑΟΥΙα ΚΥΡΗΝΗ, Flavia Cyrene, and represented by a female Head, covered with that of an Elephant, shewing the Tooth and Proboscis.

One

One Reverse has the Statue of Semiramis, treading TITVS. on the Prow of a Ship (to intimate the maritime Situation of Ascalon, where the Coin was struck) Pl. XXV. 17 the Pigeon perched near her; having, as was fabled, been nourished in her Infancy by Doves. This the Ascalonites made the Distinction of their City; and the Letters ALKAAO are still remaining of the Legend. Another has the Figure of EIPHNH, or Pl. XXV. 18 PEACE, with the Caduceus and Spikes of Corn, and her Lap filled, Emblems, as we have observed before, of Felicity and Plenty. And others, struck Pl. XXV. 19 by the Abderites and Samians, shew the Head of his Brother, with the Legend ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑΝΟΣ ΚΑΙΣΑΡ ΣΑΜΙΩΝ, Domitianus Cæsar Samicorum.

T. FLAVIUS DOMITIANUS.

DOMITIAN.

Throne after so fair an Example, judged it necessary to put on at least the Appearance of Virtue. At first he seemed to have a great Abhorrence of Blood, and was scarce ever suspected of Avarice. On the contrary, he gave many Proofs both of his Abstinence and Liberality. One Speech of his was admirable: "He who does not punish "Informers, encourages them." He abolished Libels, and declared the Authors infamous; was diligent in the Administration of Justice, and careful to keep the City Magistrates and Provincial Governors within Bounds. And, to render all Men fecure of the quiet Enjoyment of their Property and Domitian Rights, he established at once, after the Example of his Brother, all the Privileges and Grants which had been confirmed by former Emperors. For Pl. XXVI. which Reason, we see on one of his Reverses also the Figure of Public Faith, being that of a Woman with Branches of Laurel in one Hand, and an Imperial Crown in the other; the Legend FIDEI PVBLICAE. SC. This ferves to explain another of Antoninus Pius, bearing the same Figure, but without any Legend.

But in a short Time his very Virtues degenerated into Vices. His Expences made him rapacious, and his Fears cruel. He did allow his Brother the Honour of a Confecration, but carped at his Memory afterwards in all his Speeches and Edicts. He fet aside a private Hour of every Day, in which he did nothing but kill Flies for his Diversion. His Wife Domitia had Intrigues with Paris the Player. Him therefore he condemned to Death, and her he repudiated. Yet in a short Time he took her again, pretending that the People infifted upon it. On this Occasion the following Medal was struck both Pl. XXVI. in Gold and Silver, bearing her Head, with the Inscription DOMITIA AVGusta IMPeratoris DO-MITIANi AVGusti GERManici. The Reverse is a Peacock, the Bird of Juno, with CONCORDIA AVGVSTa, DOMITIAN. AVGVSTa, to express their mutual Benevolence, and ber high Quality. For in his Edict, he declared that he recalled her in pulvinar suum, to his Pallet, alluding to that Sort of Couch or Pallet on which the Images of the Gods were laid: fo that while the is represented as his Juno, he is of Course the Jupiter on Earth. And indeed he arrived at that Height of Madness, as to dictate, "Our Lord and "God commands," &c. From which Time these Titles were constantly applied to him. There are several Greek Coins in Bronze of this Imperial Pair. In one they face each other, and behind his Head we read ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑΝΟΣ ΣΕΒ, Domitianus Augustus, as behind hers DOMITIA DEB, Domitia Augusta; while the Reverse exhibits the Temple, ΘEΩN CEBACTON, Deorum Augustorum. Another, which was struck at Smyrna, is modester. It contains, as the former, their Heads adverse, only that of the Emperor is laureated, with ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑΝΟΣ ΚΑΙΣαρ ΣΕΒαςος ΓΕΡΜΑΝΙΚΟΣ. She is called again ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ, Domitia Augusta. The Reverse is an Hercules, with the Lion's Skin and Club, and an Apple in the right Hand (called, on another Coin of the Smyrnæans, HPAKAHS SOTHP, Hercules the Preserver). The Legend, EIII ΔΙΜΟΣΤΡΑΤΟΥ ΣΤΡΑΤΗΓΟΥ σεμνε ΣΜΥΡναιων, Sub Dimostrato Prætore venerabli Smyrnæorum. Another bears on one

Pl. XXVI. 4.

Pl. XXVI. 3.

Pl. XXVI. 5.

Side

Side his laureate Head, with KAICAP DOMITIANOC, DOMITIAN Cæsar Domitianus; and hers on the other, with DOMITIA CEBACTH DOMITIANOY CEBass, Domitia Augusta Domitiani Augusti. A Fourth, which I Pl. XXVI. 6 suppose to have been struck in Egypt, has also his laureate Head, with ΑΥΤοχρατωρ ΚΑΙΣΑΡ ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑ-NOΣ ΣΕΒαςος, Imperator Cæsar Domitianus Augustus, and on the other Side the Head of the Empress, with ΔΟΜΙΤΙΑ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ, Domitia Augusta.

By this Lady, the Daughter of the famous Corbulo, he had a Son in his fecond Confulship, who died, and was afterwards deified. For the Dena- Pl. XXVI. 7 rius of the Empress, which shews her with the Title of DOMITIA AVGVSTA IMPeratoris DOMITiani, has for the Reverse a Boy seated on a Celestial Globe, and furrounded with the Planets; the Legend of which stiles him DIVVS CAESAR IMPeratoris DOMITIANI Filius. And a Medal in Bronze, Pl. XXVI. of the first Magnitude, with her Head inscribed DOMITIA AVGVSTA, calls her on the Reverse DIVI CAESARIS MATER. She is represented standing with the Hasta pura in her left Hand, and the Patera in her right, having an Altar before her, as in the Act of offering to the Deity of her Son: In the Exergue SC. Another represents her in the Pl. XXVI, a fame Action, and with the same Title, but seated, with the Altar burning before her, and the SC in DOMITIAN. the Exergue. But notwithstanding his Fondness for DOMITIA, and his Severity against Prostitution and Adultery, he was by no Means continent himself. For he put to Death Sabinus, the Husband of his Niece Julia, and took her to himself, cohabiting with her openly. But as she was pregnant, he obliged her to procure an Abortion, which was the Cause of her Death. Her Deification ensued, as Pl. XXVI. 10. appears by the following Reverse of one of his Medals of Gold, having the Peacock, with his starry Tail expanded, the Emblem of Confecration refpecting the Sex, and the Legend DIVI TITI FILIA; and the Carpentum was decreed to her Memory, in Compliment to him, both by the Se-I. XXVI. 11. nate and People. For we find it figured on the Reverse of one of his Coins, with the Legend DIVAE IVLIAE AVGustæ DIVI TITI Filiæ, and in the Exergue SPQR.

> In his Edifices he was more than fumptuous. Very many and very noble Works, which had been destroyed by Fire, were restored by him in the most fplendid Manner, particularly the Capitol, twelve thousand Talents having been expended upon the gilding of it only. He feemed defirous of turning every Thing into Gold. For even this was less splendid than several of the Apartments of his own Palace. Hence, on a Medalion of Silver, we have

his

his laureate Head IMP CAES DOMITIAN AVG DOMITIAN PM COS VIIII; on the Reverse of which the Ca- Pl. XXVI. 1 pitol is delineated, inclosing the Images of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva: the Legend CAPITolio RE-STITuto. We have likewise on one of his Denarii Pl. XXVI. 1 his Head plain, with DOMITIANVS AVGVSTVS, and the Capitol depicted in like Manner on the Reverse, but without any Legend. He builded also a new Temple in the Capitol to JUPITER CUSTOS, or the GUARDIAN, having been concealed there all Night, when the Place was taken by the Vitellians; and the Forum, which was afterwards called NER-VA's; the Temple also of the Flavian Family, in which I conceive the Reverse before us to be the Pl. XXVI. 1 particular Sacellum of Julia, containing her Statue, with an Altar blazing before it, and the Priestess offering: To this the Poet alludes in his Epigram on this Temple:

> Dum voce supplex, dumque thure placabit Matrona divæ dulce Juliæ nomen: Manebit altum Flaviæ decus gentis.

MARTIAL:

Long as the Roman Matron shall implore Her Aid, and Julia's Deity adore, So long inviolate and pure shall shine The sacred Honour of the Flavian Line.

In the Area S. C.; a Music Hall, a Cursus, and Naumachia.

His

DOMITIAN.

His Expeditions were either voluntary or forced. Of the first Sort, was that against the Catti, in Germany, whose Country he invaded, and, having taken fome Captives, made an hasty Retreat. For this he triumphed, and took the Surname of GERMA-NICUS, as appears from a Medal of Gold, which has Pl. XXVI. 15. his Head plain, with a Shield behind it, on which the Eagle is emboffed, and the Title DOMITIA-NVS AVGVSTVS. The Reverse shews him in his quadrigated Car, and holding a Branch of Laurel in his right Hand; the Legend GERMA-NICVS. Yet this Title is omitted on his Dena-Pl. XXVI. 16. rius, which gives his laureate Head, with IMP verse an Altar, on which lies the winged Lightening, with TR P COS VII DESignatus VIII. PP.

CAES DOMITIANVS AVG PM, and on the Re-To return this Inroad, the Catti drove Chariomerus, King of the Cherusci, and attached to the Romans; out of his Dominions. He implored the Emperor's Assistance; who sent him a Subsidy in Money, but no Troops. The Lugians also, attacked by the Suevians, required his Aid by their Ambaffadors, and received an hundred Horsemen. But this Succour, small as it was, so irritated the latter, that they drew over the läzyges to their Party, and prepared to pass the Danube. A War also broke out between the Romans and Decebalus, King of the Dacians, Dacians, which continued long with various For- Domitian tune. Domitian led an Army against him, yettransacted nothing in Person. Having dishonoutably lost great Part of his Forces, he fent Letters to Rome as if victorious. To punish the Quadi and Marcomanni, because they had not affisted him against the Dacians, he entered Pannonia with an Army, and put to Death some of their Deputies, who had been sent to compromise Matters. Being afterwards defeated, and put to Flight by the Marcomanni, he invited Decebalus to a Peace, though he had. often refused it to his Request. Decebalus embraced the Offer; but not caring to trust his Perfon to an Interview, he fent his Brother Diegis, well attended, who gave up some Arms and Prifoners; all, as he pretended, that he had. This done, Domitian placed a Diadem on the Head of Diegis, as if he had conquered, and had really the Power of giving a King to the Dacians. He then fent triumphant Letters to Rome, and with them the Ambassadors, and the Epistle of Decebalus, as he called it (for some looked upon it as forged by himself) and adorned his Triumph with many Pageants, but not of what he had taken from the Enemy. For, on the contrary, he was at great Expence to obtain a Peace, fending a vast Sum and a Number of experienced Workmen to Decebalus, VOL. II. with with mighty Promifes of future Gratifications. A Triumph feemed to be the least Reward of these pretended Victories. So many and fo great Decrees passed, that throughout the Roman World Statues of Gold and Silver were erected to him. and the City was crowded with triumphal Arches. But for his Success against the Iazyges of Sarmatia, of which we have no particular Account, he was content to consecrate a Crown of Laurel to Jupiter. Pl. XXVI. 17. Capitolinus. We have many Reverses which are owing to fome one or all of these supposed Suc-PI. XXVI. 18. cesses. One of them in Gold and Bronze, is a Copy of an Equestrian Statue, extending the right Hand, and holding a lighted Torch in the left, erected to him in the Midst of the Forum. It was gilded, and one of the Hoofs trod upon the Hair of a Figure, which lay prostrate, and represented the Rhine. The Area of the Golden Coin is void, Pl. XXVI. 19. but that of the Bronze has the S.C. Another in Gold, has the Figure of Mars, armed with an Helmet and Coat of Mail, with a Continuation of his Titles TR POT IMP II COS VIII DES VIIII Pl. XXVI. 20. PP. A Second in Bronze, has him in his quadrigated triumphal Car, holding up the Scepter and Dove in his right Hand, and an Helmet with his left. Another has a Trophy of Arms, crowned with a laurel Wreath, a Serpent issuing from each

DOMITIAN.

Pl. XXVII. 1.

Side,

- 14 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1

and the second s

30 40 5.

Side, to denote his military Prudence: in the Area, Domitian S C. A Third has a Trophy raised on the Trunk Pl. XXVII. of a Tree, and two Captives at the Foot of it: in the Area, S C. A Fourth has a Victory alate, touching a like Trophy with the right Hand, and holding a Palm-Branch in the left. A Fifth has a Victory alate, hastening forward, with a Shield in the right Hand, inscribed S P Q R: in the Area; S C. A Sixth has the same Figure treading on a Globe, a Palm-Branch in the left Hand, and a Wreath of Laurel in the right: in the Area, S C. In a Seventh, the like Figure supports with the left Shoulder an Imperial Eagle: in the Area, SC. An Eighth, which is of the first Magnitude, and has on the other Side his laureate Head and Titles, as in the Frontispiece of this Reign, shews a Trophy, with a disconsolate Female sitting at the Foot of it on German Shields; hard by, a captive German looks back, resting his left Hand upon his Shield: the Legend is, GERMANIA CAPTA: in the Exergue, S C. Another of his Medals of Pl. XXVII. 6 Gold, with his laureate Head, and DOMITIANUS Augustus, has for its Reverse his favourite Deity, Minerva, whose Son he was desirous of being thought, with GERMANICVS COS XIIII, as the Symbol of his insuperable Skill in War; for she is figured, grasping in her right Hand, the Thunder

M 2

and

and Lightening of Jupiter. Indeed, he did every

DOMITIAN.

Thing for the Encouragement of the military Men, by large Donatives and Increase of Pay. His Cordiality and Affection for them is strongly expressed on the Reverse before us, whereon they appear be-PI. XXVII. 7. fore him with their Eagle and Enfign. He extends his Hand to one of them, and an Altar blazes between them, implying a Sort of mutual Compact or Agreement between them, of Reward and Service. Accordingly, they were infinitely disturbed at his Death, and were with great Difficulty reftrained from breaking out into a Civil War. On another of his Reverses his Patroness, Minerva, is 1. XXVII. 8. represented as placing her right Hand upon his Trophy. And on another, Jupiter himself is seated, I. XXVII. 9. with the Hasta pura in his left Hand, and holds. out a Victory, with her Wings expanded, on the Palm of his right: the Legend IOVI VICTORI; and in the Exergue S C. A noble Medallion, in Bronze, gives the Emperor's laureate Head, infcribed IMP CAES DOMIT AVG GERM COS XII CENS PP min; and the Reverse represents him on Horseback, in the Act of piercing his Enemy with his Spear, who is armed, and on whom his Horse is trampling: in the Exergue, S C. From this Medallion it appears, that he had taken upon himself the Office of Censor, which originally continued

. XXVII. 10.

Lustrum only. This Term was afterwards reduced to a Year and a Half. But by another Medallion Pl.XXVII. of the same Metal, with his laureate Head, it is evident that he assumed the Title of Perpetual Cenfor: For the Inscription runs IMP CAES DOMIT AVG GERM COS XV CENSor PERpetuo PP. The Reverse shews him in his military Habit, the Hasta pura in his left Hand, his right grasping the Thunder and Lightening, while a winged Victory, with a Palm-Branch in one Hand, with the other Places a Crown of Laurel on his Head: in the Exergue S C. This Title we shall find on more of his Coins by and by.

He was fond of the Entertainments of the Amphitheatre, the Circus, and Naumachia. And Minerval being the Goddess of his Choice, he celebrated the Quinquatria, the Festival in Honour of her, duly every Year, with great Magnisicence. He instituted also Quinquennial Sports to Jupiter Capitolinus, which were Musical, Equestrian, and Gymnic. The PLXXVII. 12 first Sort seem to be recorded on one of his Denarii, having his laureate Head inscribed IMP DOMIT AVG GERM COS XI; and a Lyre for the Reverse, with S C in the Area. Prose Orations were also spoken both in Greek and Latin. He celebrated also the Secular Games, taking his Computation, putation, not from those of CLAUDIUS, but of Augustus. These are recorded on very many of his Coins. It will be sufficient to insert some few of them for the Reader's Inspection. The First is a very fine Medallion, in Bronze, with his laureate Head, and IMP CAES DOMIT AVG GERM PM

DOMITIAN.

Pl. XXVII. 13. TR P VIII CENS ====. On the Reverse we see the Victim; the Altar, the Priest and his Assistant, the Musical Performers, and the Tiber, decumbent with his Cornucopiæ, and the S C in the Exergue: the Legend is COS XIIII LVDos SAECulares

15, 16.

Pl. XXVII. 14, FECIT. In the smaller Coins of Bronze we see some little Difference, by the Omission of one or other of the Figures, and may observe the double Flute in Use at their Theatrical Entertainments.

18, 19.

Pl. XXVII. 17, We may remark also the several Sacrifices, and the Manner of prostrating the larger Victim: the Legend is the same in all. His Expeditions were another Fund of Entertainment. He gave a fumptuous Spectacle, in which Virgins ran for the Prize. Himself presided in the Course, with Sandals on, dressed in a purple Robe after the Greek Fashion, and wearing a Crown of Gold, with the Effigies of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva; the Flamen Dialis, and the College of the Flavian Priests, sitting by him in the same Habit, except, that on their Crowns his own Image was also seen. In the Circus,

The state of the s

Circus, besides the Chariot-Races, he exhibited a DOMITIAN. double-pitched Battle of Horse and Foot; and a Sea-Fight, in a new Place, in which, not only all who fought in a Manner perished, but many of the Spectators. For a terrible Storm, with heavy Rain arifing, though he changed his own Cloaths, he fuffered no Man else to do it, whence many fatal Disorders ensued. To sooth the People, therefore, he gave them a public Feast, by Night, in which the Conduits ran with Wine. His nocturnal Sports indeed were frequent, in which he fometimes introduced Women and Dwarfs. In the Amphitheatre, amidst the Combats of Gladiators, Women fought as well as Men. The wild Beafts that perished on these Occasions, it would be difficult to enumerate. Among the Rest a Rinoceros was exposed, whose Feats were so extraordinary as to furnish Matter of Conversation for the whole City, and to occasion a Decree for the Impression of it on the Public Coins. For I am persuaded that this Pl. XXVIII. is the Animal which we see upon a Medal of Gold, which has on the other Side IMP, DOMIT, AVG. GERM.; and in the Centre S. C. It is in the Pembrokian Collection, and over the Leaden Coin (for it is of this Metal also) is called the Monoceros, but most improperly. For this Creature is described by Pliny as having the Head of a Deer, the Body

DOMITIAN.

Body of an Horse, the Tail of a Boar, the Feet of an Elephant, and an Horn in the Midst of the Forehead, of which there is scarce any Resemblance here. For the Horn, the principal Criterion, is upon the Snout, which gives Name to the Rhinoceros. This gave Birth to several Epigrams of Martial. One of them has greatly perplexed the Commentators. Bochart, in his Hierozoicon, is for reading the fifth Line thus—Namque gravi geminum sic extulit ursum:—as if it were Matter of Astonishment to see a Rhinoceros toss two Bears, one after the other; whereas, if you only drop the third Letter in the Word ursum, the Difficulty will cease.

Sellicitant pavidi dum Rhinocerota magistri,
Seque diu magnæ colligit ira feræ;
Desperabantur promissi prælia Martis:
Sed tamen is rediit cognitus ante furor.
Namque gravem gemino cornu sic extulit urum,
Jastat ut impositas Taurus in astra pilas. De Spect. Ep. 22.

While yet the fearful Keepers strove to fire The meek Rinoceros, and rouse his Ire, The promis'd Contest we despair'd to view; At length his fore-known Fury came anew. Struck with Amazement we beheld up-borne The Buffal dreadful with his double Horn; On high he toss'd him, and with equal Ease, As Bulls the Bundles toss, whene'er they please.

The Contest sufficiently ascertains the Reading.

He toss'd the Bull with as much Ease as the DOMITIAN. "Bull tosses the Bundle." These Bundles were made up of Rags, and somewhat resembled the human Figure. They were thrown to the Bulls in the Amphitheatre, to be toffed by Way of Sport for the Rabble.

One of his Entertainments was too particular to be omitted. He had a Part of the Palace put in Mourning, the very Cieling and Floor being Black, as well as the Seats for the Guests. Hither he invited the principal Persons of the Senatorian and Equestrian Orders. Being seated, before every one was placed a Column, shaped in the sepulchral Fashion, with his Name inscribed, from which hung a fmall Lamp, as usual in Monuments. Then a Company of naked Boys, blacked over, like fo many Spectres, entered, and having danced round them with horrible Gestures, stood directly before each of them. Lastly, every Thing made use of in the Solemnities of the Dead, was fet before them. The Guests were filled with dreadful Apprehenfions, and expected nothing less than Death. All this while a profound Silence was kept, except that Domitian himself made a solemn Harangue, touching Death and Destruction. At length he dismissed them, and, their Slaves who waited without having been sent off beforehand, other strange VOL. II. Faces Domitian. Faces were provided to attend them home in their Chairs and Carriages; which did by no Means leffen their Apprehenfions. As foon as they were got thither, and began to breathe a little, they were told, that certain Persons were at hand from Augustus. This they looked upon as the Sentence of Death; but were most agreeably surprized, each of them. to fee before him the Youth, who had represented his Dæmon, now washed and trimmed in the most elegant Manner, with a Present of extraordinary Value. Such was their Compensation for the Terfors of the Night.

He thrice gave a Congiary to the People, of three hundred Denarii each Man, and in the Midst of the Spectacles a plenteous Feast. At the septimontial Solemnity, Bread-Trays were distributed to the Senators and Equestrians, and to the Populace little Baskets with Provisions. The next Day he scattered missile Balls, of all Sorts of Things; and, because the greater Part sell amongst the Populace, he ordered fifty Tickets for each Bench of the PLXXVIII. 2, Senatorian and/Equestrian Orders. These Liberalities are recorded in the four following. Coins, struck by Order of the Senate. The two first have the Congius with Ears of Wheat. The third has Ceres feated with her Torch, and Amalthea with her Horn of Plenty, an Altar between them: the Legend

32 40

Legend ANNONA AVGVSTI. The fourth is DOMITIAN. fomewhat injured on both Sides. The one has his laureate Head, with IMP CAES DOMIT === VIII CENS PER PP. The other represents him en- Pl. XXVIII. throned, and making the Distribution in Person; the Legend is COS XIIII FRVGAO.

From another Medal with his laureate Head, it is evident that a Regulation of the Coin took Place in his fifteenth Consulate. For the Inscription is IMP CAES DOMIT AVG GERM COS XV CENS PER PP; and it bears on its Reverse a female-Fi- Pl. XXVIII. gure, with a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, and a Pair of Scales in the right, with the Legend MONETA AVGVSTI, S. C.

The famous Julius Agricola, having reduced the greater Part of Britain, was recalled by Domitian, and rewarded for his Services with triumphal Honours. Finding the Emperor jealous of his military Fame and Reputation, he wifely retired from public Life; and had at last the unexpected Fortune of dying in Bed, though not without some Suspicion of Poison.

But L. Antonius, who commanded in Upper Germany, having prevailed upon the two Legions which were with him, and the Inhabitants of the Province, to support him, openly rebelled against Domitian; and assumed the Imperial Purple. Against him the ins

DOMITIAN.

Emperor made great Preparations, and began his March in Person. But in the mean Time Antonius was defeated and flain by L. Maximus. His private Cabinet was taken at the same Time, and all his Papers burned by Order of the victorious General, that his Correspondences might not be known. Notwithstanding which, the Emperor took this Opportunity of wreaking his Vengeance upon all whom he suspected. Among many others, Metius Pomposianus suffered Death, for no other Reason but because he had a Map of the World drawn out upon the Walls of his Bed-Chamber, and took Delight in reading and studying the Speeches of Kings and great Men, which he met with in Livy. Maternus the Sophist was executed for declaiming against Tyrants, in the Way of Exercise only. The Emperor himself attended, and instructed the Accusers and Witnesses. He ordered Rusticus Arulinus to be slain, for philosophizing, and saying that Thrasea was a divine Man; and Herennius Senecio, because, though he had lived long, he had never petitioned for a Magistracy since his Questor-Thip, and had written the Life of Helvidius Priscus; and many others, for their philosophical Studies. The rest of this Class were all expelled the City.

As Cenfor, he did some Things worthy of Praise.

For

For he degraded Cacilius Rufinus from the Senate Domitian for his Dancing; and delivered up Claudius Pacatas, though raised to the Rank of a Centurion, to his Master, as soon as it appeared that he was his Slave.

The Year before his Death, Domitian raised a general Perfecution throughout the Roman Empire, against the Christians, in which vast Numbers suffered Death. One of these was Flavius Clemens the Conful, though nearly related to him, and the Husband of his Cousin Flavia Domitilla. He fuffered, according to Dio, for the Crime of Impiety. This was the Term usually given to Christianity. For this Cause, says he, many others were condemned, who had gone over to the Fewish Manners; Part of whom were executed, and Part ruined by Confiscations. Domitilla was only banished to Pandataria. Glabrio also, who had been Consul with Trajan (afterwards Emperor) was doomed to Death through the Envy of Domitian, who had obliged him to fight a great Lion. This he did, and very gallantly flew him; when the Applause of the Spectators excited the Jealoufy of the Emperor. Our Historian fays, that he also was accused of the same Crime of Impiety. Saint John the Apostle was banished to Patmos.

He now suspected all Men, doubting the Fidelity of his Captains of Guards, and even of his own Freedmen. For the Instruction of these last, he put to Death Epaphroditus, the Freedman of Nero, for not having affifted his Master. But this answered no End; for the next Year he was himself slain, in Consequence of a Conspiracy entered into by Sigerius and Parthenius, two of his Chamberlains, and the last his Sword-bearer also, Entellus his Secretary, and Stephanus his Freedman. Nor were his Wife Domitia, nor Norbanus, and Petronius Secundus, Commanders of the Prætorian Guards, supposed to be ignorant of it. For the Names of all of them were marked down by him for Destruction: of which Domitia having made the Discovery, imparted it to the rest. He had lived forty-four Years, ten Months, and twenty-fix Days; and reigned fifteen Years and five Days.

DOMITIAN.

To this Composition of Pride, Lewdness, Cruelty, and Cowardice, did the degenerate Romans raise Altars, inscribed SALVTI AVGVSTI; and to their eternal Shame, recorded it on their Coins, of Pl. XXVIII. 7. which the Reverse before us is a Witness; having in the Exergue the SC: and ascribed to him that Coalition of all great and good Qualities which Pl. XXVIII. 8. constitutes the Hero. For on another Reverse, bearing the same Stamp of Authority in the Area, we have the Figure of Virtue, whose left Foot rests rests upon a Casque: she is habited in a white Vesture, erect, and holds in her right Hand the Hasta

pura, the Parazonium in her left, and her Head is armed with an Helmet:

Incessuque viro propior, lætique pudoris,
Celsa humeris, niveæ fulgebat Stamine pallæ. Sil. Ital. I. 15.

With dauntless Mien alost she rear'd her Head,
And next to manly was the Virgin's Tread;
Her Height, her sprightly Blush, the Goddess shew,
And Robes unsullied as the falling Snow.

Addison-

The Legend is VIRTVTI AVGVSTI, S. C.

Domitian was tall, and of a ruddy Countenance, had large Eyes, and was near-fighted, fair and comely all over in his Youth, except that his Toes were pinched in. Afterwards he grew bald, his Belly became fat and prominent, and his Legs flender. Being impatient of Labour, he was fcarce ever on Foot, rarely on Horseback, and almost always in a Chair or Sedan. He was an excellent Archer, and has been seen to kill an hundred wild Beasts on one Occasion, and has purposely fixed his Arrows in the Head of them so as to resemble Horns. When one has held his Hand expanded against the Wall, he has shot his Arrows precisely between the Fingers foretold. The liberal Studies were neglected by him at first; though he restored, at a vast Expence, the Libraries which had been confumed by Fire. Fond of Adulation, he was yet very severe against those who used, and against those who used it not. The former he punished because they flattered, and the latter because they neglected him. He never really loved any one, except a few Women. Those, whom he pretended to love, he was most desirous of destroying: and they, who were most eager to gratify him, were most suspected, and marked out for Ruin. He was Conful for ten Years together, and enjoyed that Dignity seventeen Times; was attended by four-and-twenty Lictors, and wore a triumphal Robe, as often as he entered the Senate. September, the Month of his Inauguration, he called Germanicus; and October, in which he was born, Domitian. His Death was most agreeable to the Senate, who loaded him with Curfes, pulled down his Shields and Statues, and endeavoured, as much as they could, entirely to abolish the Remembrance of him.

DOMITIAN.

and the second selected to

MARCUS COCCEIUS NERVA.

TIAN, and with one Voice declared M. Coccelus Nerva Emperor. He was a Native of Italy, but of Cretan Extraction. Yet his Family had been very eminent in the State, and for three Generations had been honoured with the Fasces. Himfelf had enjoyed that Dignity twice before his Accession, and now took it upon him, for the third Time, at the Beginning of the new Year. Virginius Rusus was his Colleague, who was soon after killed by a Fall, and honoured with a public Funeral. He is the Subject of one of Pliny's Epistles, who speaks greatly in his Praise.

Vol. II.

0

It

NT .....

It now appeared, that the Imperial Power and public Liberty were confistent; on the Restoration of which all Men congratulated themselves. The Æra of it was inscribed on the Capitol, and perpetuated on their Coins. For on one of them, of the Pl. XXVIII. 9. first Magnitude, in Bronze, bearing the Emperor's laureate Head, with IMP NERVA CAES AVG PM TR P COS III PP, we have for the Reverse a female Figure erect, holding the Rudis in one Hand, and the Cap of Liberty in the other, intitled in the Legend LIBERTAS PVBLICA, with SC in the Area. We have indeed feen the fame Figure on the Coins of GALBA and VITELLIUS, but with far less Propriety in the first Instance, and none at all in the latter. But NERVA was the most indulgent Father of his People, whose Liberality and Benevolence were not exceeded. His Promotion is cele-Pl. XXVIII. 10. brated on one of his Reverses, under the Symbol of Fortune, holding a naval Helm in her right Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in her left; and she is called. FORTVNA AVGVST. But the Reverse of the Golden Medal, prefixed to this Reign, has only the facrificial Utenfils (to fignify his facerdotal Rank) the Lituus, the Guttus, the Adspersorium, and the Capeduncula, with a Continuation of his Titles, COS III PATER PATRIAE. The Denarius an-

Pl.XXVIII. 11. nexed is on both Sides nearly the fame. He gave up all Confiscations, relieved the several Cities in NERVA. Distress, and bred up the Children of the Poor throughout Italy at the public Charge. He put an End to Persecution, discharging all who were accused of Impiety, and restoring the Exiles. All Slaves and Freedmen, who had informed against their Masters and Patrons, were condemned and executed. He forbad the erecting Statues of Gold or Silver to himself. He purchased Lands to a large Amount for the poorer Citizens, the Divifion of which he entrusted to Senators of Integrity. All Effects found in the Palace, which DOMITIAN had taken from others, were restored. As the Exchequer was drained, unwilling to burthen the People, he disposed of great Quantities of Raiment, many Vessels of Gold and Silver, Abundance of rich Furniture, both of his own private Property and belonging to the Imperial Palace, many Farms and Houses, and all Things else, such excepted as were barely necessary. Nor was he exact in the Price, but favourable to most of the Purchasers. He abolished many Sacrifices, many of the Circensian Entertainments, and other Spectacles. He fwore in the Senate, that no Senator should suffer Death by his Orders, and kept his Oath, although a Conspiracy was formed against him. He did nothing without consulting Persons of the first Rank. With their

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

NERVA.

their Advice he published many wholesome Laws, particularly against Castration, and against the Marriage of an Uncle with his Niece. His Government, in fine, was fuch as permitted him to fay, that "he "knew no Reason why he might not safely resign, " and refume his private Condition." When Calpurnius Crassus, with some others, conspired against him, though they knew not that their Plot was. discovered, he seated them next to himself at the public Shews; and, when the Swords of the Gladiators were brought to him for Trial, as usual, gave them into their Hands, that they might fee, as he faid, if they were sharp enough. Crassus confessed his Guilt, and was with his Wife banished to Tarentum. This Lenity was not approved by the Senate. For his Indulgence was fo extraordinary, that Men prefumed upon it. The Prætorian Cohorts, with Casperius Ælianus, whom he had made their Commander, at the Head of them, befet his Palace, demanding the Heads of all concerned in the Death of Domitian; whom he refifted so far as to offer them his naked Throat. This availed not; for they cut in Pieces Petronius, Parthenius, and others, and obliged him to return them public Thanks for what they had done. Seeing himself therefore defpised for his Years and Infirmities, he entered upon a Refolution most falutary to the Commonwealth.

He ascended the Capitol with great Solemnity, and there with a loud Voice (praying that fuch his Deed might prove prosperous to the Roman Senate and People, and to himself) declared Trajan his adopted Son, by the Name of MARCUS ULPIUS NERVA TRAJANUS. This reduced the Cohorts to Order, and secured the Quiet of the State. At this Time fome Advantages were obtained by the Army in Pannonia, for which he bore the Title of IM-PERATOR. He took off the Duty upon Carriages throughout Italy, which was an Imposition much complained of. The Memory of this was preserved by a Decree of the Senate, on one of his Reverses, representing Enfigns, Arms, and Horses Pl.XXVIII. 12 at Liberty, with VEHICVLATIONE ITALIAE REMISSA, and SC in the Exergue. Two Congiaries given by him are recorded also by the same PI.XXVIII. 13 Authority, the one being a Frumentarian Distribution, expressed by the Congius, with Ears of Wheat rifing from it. The Legend is PLEBEL VRBANAE FRVMENTO CONSTITUTO. The Emperor himself is represented on the other Reverse, over-PLXXVIII.14 feeing his own Donation, with the Distributor and Receivers before him: the Legend CONGIARium P. R. Populo Romano, SC.

For the last three Months of his Reign; his adopted Son Trajan was his Colleague in the Confulate. He declared declared him CAESAR in full Senate, and wrote to him with his own Hand to this Purpose:

Thy Arms, O Nerva, should avenge our Tears.

For Trajan at this Time commanded in Germany. Thus a Spaniard by Birth (for fuch was TRAJAN) became CÆSAR, and afterwards Emperor, though NERVA had many Relations of his own. For he had more at Heart the public Emolument, than the private Advantage of his Family. This was his last Transaction of Consequence before his Death, which also was occasioned by his Care for the Republic. Aquilius Regulus, a noted Informer, being brought before him, roused his Indignation to such a Height, as put him in a Sweat. This was succeeded by a Rigor, which brought on a violent Fever, that proved fatal to him. Authors differ with respect to his Age, which is made fixty-five, feventy-one, and feventy-three Years. He reigned fixteen Months and ten Days.

He carried his Age but very indifferently, being of a weakly Constitution; was of a most serious Disposition, having never been known amongst his Friends to laugh, or make Use of any light Amusement. His Meekness and Lenity were carried too far; an insolent Soldiery taking Advantage of the first, and the Governors of Provinces of the last;

fo that his own Peace fuffered, and his People were oppressed. But his Intentions were all directed to the public Good. And his Care for the future Well-being of his People, by the Establishment of fuch a Successor, rendered his Memory dear to all true Lovers of their Country. His Disinterestedness, with respect to Money, was evident from his Correspondence with Herodes Atticus, the Father of the Sophist of that Name. This Man had found an immense Treasure concealed within his House, and acquainted NERVA with it by Letter, defiring his Directions for the Disposal of it. The Answer was, Use it. He replied, that "it was too con-" fiderable for any Person of private Condition, " therefore he must not use it." To which the good Emperor rejoined laconically, "Then abuse.

MARCUS

MARCUS ULPIUS NERVA TRAJANUS.

TRAIAN.

of his Age. He was at Cologne, in Germany, when Nerva died, and where he continued the whole Year. The Empire had been dangerously convulsed and rent by the Cruelty and Extravagance of Domitian, by the Rebellion of Antonius, by the Inroads and Successes of the Marcomanni, Quadi, Sarmatians, and Dacians (to the last of whom was paid an annual Tribute, though softened by the Name of Stipend) and by the Insolence of the Prætorians. The State resembled a Vessel in Distress, which had been forced upon the Shallows, and the Assistance of a more than mortal Hand seemed feemed necessary for its Preservation, This was the TRALAN. Idea which the Romans themselves entertained of it. The Mildness and Oeconomy of the last good Emperor had relieved it in Part, and the Magnanimity, Valour, and Policy of TRAJAN, now fecured its Safety. This is the Explanation which Mr. Addison gives of the fine Medal annexed. It is one of the Nummi Contorniati, or Medals which are finely rimmed round with a different Metal; and has on one Side, the laureate Head of TRAJAN, with a Pl.XXVIII.15. Branch of Laurel before him, and the Inscription DIVO NERVAE ET TRAIANO. The word Imperatoribus is understood, and then the Senie of the Reverse naturally follows. After, therefore, premising, that different Interpretations had been made of it, which feemed to be forced and unnatural, he gives his own Opinion. "The Vessel," says he, " is here represented as stranded. The Figure be-" fore it comes in to its Assistance, and lifts it off "the Shallows. For we see the Water scarce " reaches to the Knees, though it is the Figure of a " Man standing on firm Ground. His Attendants, " and the good Office he is employed upon, re-" semble those the Poets often attribute to Neptune. " Homer tells us, that the Whales leaped up at. "their God's Approach, as we see in the Medal. " The two small Figures that stand naked among VOL. II. P " the

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

TRAIAN.

- "the Waves are Sea-Deities of an inferior Rank,
- " who are supposed to affist their Sovereign in the
- " Succour he gives the distressed Vessel.
  - " Cymothoe, simul et Triton adnixus acuto
  - " Detrudunt naves scopulo; levat ipse tridenti,
  - " Et vastas aperit syrtes, et temperat æquor." VIRG. Æn. 1. 1.
  - " Cymothoe, Triton, and the fea-green Train
  - "Of beauteous Nymphs, the Daughters of the Main,
  - "Clear from the Rocks the Vessels with their Hands;
  - "The God himself with ready Trident stands,
  - "And opes the Deep, and spreads the moving Sands."

DRYDEN.

- "The Interpreters of the Medal have mistaken
- " these two Figures for the Representation of two
- " Persons that are drowning. But as they are both
- " naked, and drawn in a Posture rather of triumph-
- " ing o'er the Waves than of finking under them,
- " fo we see Abundance of Water-Deities, on other
- " Medals, represented after the same Manner. I
- " therefore take the Thought to be this: The
- " stranded Vessel is the Commonwealth of Rome,
- "that, by the Tyranny of Domitian, and the In-
- " folence of the Prætorian Guards under Nerva,
- " was quite run aground, and in Danger of pe-
- " rishing. Some of those embarked in it endea-
- "vour at her Recovery; but it is TRAJAN that,
- " by the Adoption of NERVA, stems the Tide

" to her Relief, and, like another Neptune, shoves

TRAIAN.

- " her off the Quickfands. To shew that this
- " Construction is conformable to the Fancies of
- " the old Romans, you may observe, that Horace
- " represents at length the Commonwealth under
- " the Figure of a Ship, in the Allegory that you
- " meet with in the fourteenth Ode of his first - " Book:

"O Navis, referent in mare te novi.

" FluEtus."

"And shall the raging Waves again

"Bear thee back into the Main?.

CREECH.

- "Nor was any Thing more usual, than to repre-
- " fent a God in the Shape and Dress of an Em- " peror. For the Thought in general, you have
- " just the same metaphorical Compliment to Theo-
- " dosius, in Claudian, as the Medal here makes to
- C TRAJAN.
  - " Nulla relicta foret Romani nominis umbre,
  - " Ni pater ille tuus jamjam ruitura subisset
  - " Pondera, turbatamque ratem, certâque levasset
  - " Naufragium commune manu." CLAUD. de 4to, Cons. Honorii,
  - " Had not thy Sire deferr'd th' impending Fate,
  - "And with his folid Virtue propp'd the State;
  - "Sunk in Oblivion's Shade, the Name of Rome,
  - "An empty Name! had fcarce furviv'd her Doom:
  - "Till he fustain'd the Load, and, with fure Hand,
  - "Eas'd her, half-wreck'd upon the dang'rous Strand."

TRAIAN.

It is plain that the Medal before us was struck after the Death and Deification of NERVA. But that which Mr. Addison had, the Reverse of which was entirely the same, was stamped in Honour of TRAJAN, when he was only Cæfar, by the Title on the Face of it, .... SARI TRAIANO.

From Cologne he wrote to the Senate, affuring them, that no good Man should suffer Death or Ignominy by his Command, which he afterwards confirmed by Oath. Casperius, and the rest of the bufy Spirits among the Prætorians, who had been guilty of the late Infult, he fent for, under the Pretence of employing them, and executed that Vengeance upon them which NERVA had recommended to him. Having fettled the Affairs of the Province, he took the Surname of GERMANICVS, which we find on all his Coins. On his Arrival at Rome, he did many Things for the Advantage of the Commonwealth in general, and of worthy Persons in particular. He gave a confiderable Largess to the Soldiers, and a Congiary to the People. contributed largely to the Cities of Italy, towards the Education of Children, on whom he conferred many Benefits. This Liberality is recorded on the Pl.XXVIII. 16. Coin in Bronze, which represents a Mother prefenting her Children to him, as he fits enthroned, who hold out their little Hands in token of Gratitude:

tude: in the Area is S C: in the Exergue, ALI- TRATAN. Menta ITALiæ dat: on the Verge, S P Q R OPTIMO PRINCIPI. For on these several Accounts, the Surname of OPTIMVS, which, as it expressed his Disposition, he valued more than all his other Titles, was already conferred upon him. His Wife PLOTINA, as she entered the Palace, turning upon the Steps, faid to the People, "Such I " enter it as I would wish to leave it." And indeed she behaved so as to be without Reprehension. We have the Head of this Lady on a Medal of the PLXXVIII. 17 first Magnitude, in Bronze, with the Inscription PLOTINAE AVGusta TRAIANI AVGusti. The Reverse is the Venus Genetrix, with the Legend VENERI GENETRICI: and in the Area, S.C. The Emperor's Sister, tho' deceased, was also declared AVGVSTA, and honoured with a Confecration, as appears from her Medal also in Bronze Pl. XXVIII. 18 of the like Size, having her Busto, inscribed DIVA AVGVSTA MARCIANA: the Reverse is a cowering Eagle, wih S C underneath. On other Medals, both in Gold and Bronze, we have the Figure of PLXXVIII. 10 his Niece Matidia, the Daughter of Marciana, who was also honoured with this Title. For there she is called MATIDIA AVGusta DIVAE MARCIANAE Filia. Her Reverse is a Piety, rearing Children, with the Legend PIETAS AVGVST. Another Daughter

TRAIAN. Daughter there also was, named Julia Sabina, who was married to Adrian the next Year.

> His Diligence in Arms, his Lenity in Civil Matters, and his Generofity to the Cities that stood in need of it, were most eminent. In excellent Princes, fay's my Author, we look for Sanctity in Peace, Fortitude in War, and Prudence in both. These Virtues Trajan blended by a certain happy Temperament, except that he was a little too much given to Wine, and the Entertainments of the Table, yet never to Intoxication. But he was guilty of a much worse Vice, which will admit of no Palliation. He was patient of Labour, a Lover of good and brave Men, the Patron of Learning, and, though not learned himself, yet moderately eloquent; liberal to his Friends, whose Society he enjoyed on Terms of Equality; deaf to Informers; not passionate, nor covetous; naturally magnificent and magnanimous, choosing rather to be loved than honoured; towards the People, humane; towards the Senate, full of Nobleness and Grace; dear to his Subjects, and terrible to his Enemies. An excellent Commander he was; for while he gained the Love of his Soldiers, he kept them under strict Discipline and Subjection. This was highly necesfary, fince the State was like to stand in Need of their best Service; as? the Emperor could by no Buckey Means Means brook the Payment of a yearly Stipend to the TRAJAN. Dacians.

Decebalus, therefore, crosling the Danube, ravaged all the Country as he paffed. But TRAJAN quickly drove him back, took many of his Cities, and obliged him to submit to his own Terms; which were, to surrender his Arms, the Deserters, his Machines, and the Artificers of them; to quit the neighbouring Country, which he had taken Possesfion of; to have the same Enmities and Alliances with the Romans; and to admit no Subject of the Roman Empire into his military Service. This Convention settled, Decebalus was admitted to his Presence, and prostrated himself before him. He fent Ambassadors also to Rome, to have the Peace. ratified by the Senate. TRAJAN then, leaving Garrisons in the principal Places of Dacia; returned to Rome. This Success was obtained by the Emperor in his fourth Consulate, and is recorded on a Medal of Gold, the Reverse of which shews him in Pl. XXIX. 1. the military Habit, with the Hasta pura in his right Hand, and a Victory alate, holding a Palm-Branch in her left Hand, and with her right placing a Wreath of Laurel on his Head: the Legend P. M. TR. P. COS. IIII. P. P. It is probable that he repaired the Temple of Cybele this Year, fince, on the Reverse of one of his contorniated Medallions lions in Bronze, she appears drawn by Lions. Her Head is turrited, and she holds the Hasta pura in her Hand; and close to her is one of the Corybantes, distinguished by his Whip or Scourge.

Pl. XXIX. 2.

But the next Year the War broke out again with fresh Fury. For Decebalus, discontented with the hard Conditions imposed upon him, invited the neighbouring Powers to his Assistance, collected Arms, received Deferters, repaired his Castles, and had already feized upon the adjacent Territory of the Iazyges. He was, therefore, again declared an Enemy by the Senate, and Trajan took the Field against him, but narrowly escaped an Assassination, by some Deserters commissioned for that Purpose; one of whom, being suspected, was put to the Torture, and discovered the Whole. Meantime, Longinus, who commanded under TRAJAN, was by Decebalus, who pretended all Submission, inveigled to an Interview, and treacherously imprifoned. For from him he hoped either to learn the Defigns of the Emperor, or to make him the Price of a Reconciliation. But his Hopes deceived him; for Longinus dispatched himself by Poison; and TRAJAN advancing, laid a Bridge over the Danube, a Work of extraordinary Magnificence; of which Dr. Brown, in his Travels, fays, "there are still. " some Ruins, not far from Severin, about twenty Hungarian TRAIAM.

" Hungarian Miles from Belgrade. This Bridge

" confisted of twenty Piles of square Stone, of an

- " hundred Feet high, besides the Foundation:
- " of fixty Feet in Breadth, and the Distance be-
- "tween each of them one hundred and feventy
- " Feet, and conjoined by Arches: upon the which
- " was this Inscription, fingular for the Pun in the " Word Pontificis:

PROVIDENTIA AVG.

VERE PONTIFICIS VIRTVS ROMANA

QVID NON DOMAT? SVB IVGVM ECCE

RAPITVRET DANVBIVS.

"And as a Memorial hereof, many Roman Coins "were stamped, and some in Silver, not yet rare "among us, with this Inscription, DANVVIVS." One of these is now before us, having on the Face of it the Emperor's laureate Head, with IMP TRAIANO AVG GER DAC PM TR P. The Reverse is the Genius of the River decumbent, resting the left Arm upon his Urn, and having an Helm in the right Hand, to denote its being navigable: in the Exergue DANVVIVS. The Legend says, COS V PP S P Q R OPTIMO PRINC. Having passed the River, he subdued the Dacians, though not without much Difficulty. Decebalus, Vol. II.

Pl. XXIX. 3.

feeing his Capital in the Hands of his Enemy, put their Reverse a female Figure, loosely dressed, with a Sprig of Frankincense in the right Hand, and in the left the Calamus odoratus, with a Camel standing by. "The Dress that Arabia appears in," says Mr. Addison, "on this Coin, brings to my Mind "the Description that Lucan has made of these

TRALAN.

an End to his own Life. His Head was conveyed to Rome, and his Kingdom made a Roman Province, Pl. XXIX, 4. as appears from the Reverse subjoined, in which we fee the Genius of the Country feated upon a Rock, and holding in her left Hand the Standard of the Roman Eagle, and extending her right Hand to the Emperor, who is crowned with Laurel, and raised upon the Shoulder of a Captive, and bears a Cornucopiæ in his left Hand. The Legend is DACIA. AVGVSTi; and in the Exergue PROVINCIA. S C. Here Trajan fettled a Colony. The Royal Treafures were recovered, though concealed in the Bed of the River Sargetia, the Stream of which Decebalus had turned with that View, and afterwards restored to its former Channel. About the same Time Palma, the Prefect of Syria, reduced that Part of Arabia which borders on Petra: on which Occafion the Senate decreed Medals, which have for

" Eastern Nations:

Pl. XXIX. 5.

Quicquid

TRAIAN.

" Quicquid ad Eoos tractus mundique teporem

" Labitur, emollit gentes clementia cæli,

" Illic et laxas vestes, et fluxa virorum

" Vėlamenta vides.

Luc. lib. 8.

"While Asia's softer Climate, form'd to please,

" Dissolves her Sons in Indolence and Ease.

"Here filken Robes invest unmanly Limbs,

"And in long Trains the flowing Purple streams. Rowe.

" She bears in one Hand a Sprig of Frankincense,

" --- Solis est thurea virga Sabæis.

VIRGIL.

"The Sprig of Incense Saba's Sons alone

" Can boast.

" In the other Hand you see the perfumed Reed,

" as the Garland on her Head may be supposed to " be woven out of some other Part of her fragrant " Productions:

« _____ Sit dives amomo

&quot;Cinnamaque, costumque suam, sudataque ligno

&quot;Thura ferat, floresque alios Panchaïa tellus. Ov. Met. lib. 10.

&quot;Let Araby extol her happy Coast,

&quot; Her Cinnamon and fweet Amomum boaft,

&quot;Her fragrant Flow'rs, her Trees with precious Tears,

&quot;Her fecond Harvests, and her double Years. Dryden.

&quot; The Camel is the Beast of Burden there, which

&quot; helps to carry off its Spices. We find it men-

&quot; tioned in Persius, on the same Account;

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

TRALAN

"Tolle recens primus piper e sitiente Camelo. PERS. Sat. 5.

" ____ the precious Weight

" Of Pepper and Sabean Incense take

"With thy own Hands from the tir'd Camel's Back. DRYDEN:

" He loads the Camel with Pepper, because the "Animal and its Cargo are both the Productions.

Pl. XXIX. 6. "of the fame Country." The Legend is SPQR OPTIMO PRINCIPI: in the Area SC; and in the Exergue ARABid ADQVISitd. This is in Bronze; but there are fome Greek Coins in Silver,

Pl. XXIX. 7. which celebrate this Event, having the Emperor's laureate Head, with ATTOKP KAIC NEP TPAIANOC.

APICTOC CEB ΓERM ΔΑΚ, Imperator Cæfar Nerva Trajanus Optimus Augustus Germanicus Dacicus; and a Camel only for the Reverse, with ΔΗΜΑΡΧικης ΕΞεσιας ΥΠΑΤΟΣ, Tribunitia Potestate, Consul.

But it was the Reduction of Dacia, and the Death of Decebalus, which brought to him Ambassadors with Congratulations from all Quarters, even from India. From this Time the Surname of Dacicus appears on all his Coins; many of which were struck on this Occasion. One of them shews the Conqueror in his triumphal quadrigated Car, holding a Sceptre and a Branch of Laurel: the Legend SPQR OPTIMO PRINCIPI: in the Exergue SC. Another has the Emperor on Horseback, ri. XXIX. 8. S.C. Another has the Emperor on Horseback, trampling on the Foe, with the same Legend. A ce Non:

third gives the Figure of Peace, treading on her TRAIAN. Enemy, with a Branch of Laurel in one Hand, and Pl. XXIX. 9. a Cornucopiæ in the other; with the same Legend. A fourth exhibits the same Figure, setting Fire with Pl. XXIX. 10. a Torch to an Heap of Arms, as in the Reign of VESPASIAN; the Legend still the same. A fifth has Pl. XXIX. 11. a Captive, fitting melancholy on an Heap of Arms, at the Foot of a Trophy erected upon them. A fixth shews two Trophies, to intimate his two Pl. XXIX. 12. Victories over the same Foe: in the Exergue SC; and the Legend at length, SENATVS POPVLVS-QVE ROMANVS. Befides these and many more, Columns, Statues, and Arches were erected, to perpetuate the Memory of this important Conquest. But we must not omit the Mention of one Medal Pl. XXIX. 13; more, because it is particularly taken Notice of by Mr. Addison. "You see on it the Figure of Trajan, " presenting a little Victory to Rome. Between " them lies the conquered Province of Dacia. It " may be worth while to observe the Particularities " in each Figure. We fee Abundance of Persons " on old Coins, that hold a little Victory in one " Hand, like this of TRAJAN, which is always the " Sign of a Conquest. I have sometimes fancied " Virgil alludes to this Custom in a Verse that " Turnus speaks;

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

TRATAN.

- " Non adeo has exosa manus Victoria fugit. En. lib. II.
- " If you consent, he shall not be refus'd,
- " Nor find a Hand to Victory unus'd.
- The Emperor's standing in a Gown, and making
  - " a Present of his Dacian Victory to the City of
  - Rome, agrees very well with Claudian's Character
  - of him:
    - Victura feretur
    - " Gloria Trajani; non tam quod, Tigride vitto,
    - " Nostra triumphati fuerit provincia Parthi,
    - " Alta quod invectus stratis Capitolia Dacis:
    - " Quam patriæ quod mitis erat.
    - "Thy Glory, Trajan, shall for ever live:
    - " Not that thy Arms the Tigris mourn'd, o'ercome,
    - " And tributary Parthia bow'd to Rome;
    - " Not that the Capitol receiv'd thy Train
    - "With shouts of Triumph for the Dagi slain;
    - " But for thy Mildness to thy Country shewn.
  - "The City of Rome carries the Wand in her Hand,
  - " the Symbol of her Divinity:
    - " Delubrum Romæ (colitur nam sanguine et ipsa
    - " More Dea)-
- PRUDENT. cont. Sym. 1. 1.
- " For Rome, a Goddess too, can boast her Shrine,
- "With Victims stain'd, and sought with Rites divine.
- "As the Globe under her Feet betokens her
- "Dominion over all the Nations of the Earth,

66 the

the Heap of Arms she sits on, signifies the TRAIAN.

" Peace that the Emperor had procured her. On " old Coins we often see an Emperor, a Victory,

" the City of Rome, or a Slave, fitting on a Heap

" of Arms; which always marks out the Peace that " arose from such an Action as gave Occasion to

"the Medal. The Posture of the Province here is " what we often meet with in the Slaves and Cap-

"tives of old Coins: among the Poets too, fitting

" on the Ground is a Mark of Misery or Cap-c tivity.

"Outinam ante tuos sedeam Captiva penates. PROPERT. I. 4.

"O might I fit a Captive at thy Gate!"

On this Occasion Trajan exhibited Spectacles, which lasted an hundred and twenty-three Days; on which fometimes a thousand, and sometimes even ten thousand Beasts, wild and tame, were flaughtered, and five thousand Pair of Gladiators fought. At the same Time he paved the Pontine Marshes with Stone, raising Buildings by the Ways, and most magnificent Bridges, where wanted. This was the old Appian Way, which was carried on to Capua, and afterwards continued to Brundusum. The Restoration of it by this Emperor is celebrated on Coins, which have for the Reverse a female Figure Pl. XXIX. 14. decumbent, with a Palm-Branch in the left Hand;

TRAIAN. to denote that this was one Consequence of his late Atchievement; and in the other a measuring Wheel, to fignify the public Road, and the Extent of it. The Legend is the common one of SPQR OPTIMO PRINCIPI; but the Exergue explains the Whole, by giving us the new Name, which the Road now affumed, of VIA TRAIANA. He now caused all the adulterated Coins to be melted down; and fet on Foot many Works of extraordinary Magnificence: he enlarged the Temple of Pl. XXIX. 15. Janus, which is probably represented in the Reverse before us. Another Temple is also recorded Pl. XXIX. 16. on his Coins by a Senatorial Decree, but to what Divinity erected, is uncertain. He built the Port of Ancona, which upon his Coins has a Sort of theatrical Aspect, with a Tower at each End of it. It is shut in by a Chain, within which a Pl. XXIX. 17. Vessel rides in Safety. It has the S C, and the same Legend as above. For the making of this Port, a triumphal Arch was erected to him at the fame Place, which is yet entire. Mr. Addison, in his Travels, fays, that "it looks very white and " fresh, as being exposed to the Winds and Salt-" fea Vapours, that, by continually fretting it, pre-" ferves itself from that mouldy Colour which " others of the same Materials have contracted." The Body of it is inscribed to TRAJAN, in his fixth Confulate.

Consulate. It was therefore erected the Year after TRAIAN. the Port was made; for the Face of the Medal just mentioned calls him COS V. One End of the Arch is inscribed DIVAE MARCIANAE AVG.. SORORI AVG.; and the other PLOTINAE AVG. CONIVGI AVG. The Whole may be feen in Gruter and Patin. He diverted a Part of the AQVA MARTIA, or Martial Water, as it was called, to Mount Aventine, for the Benefit of that Quarter of the City; which Stream was thenceforward called the AQVA TRAIANA: the Utility of which was recognized by the Senate on his Coins, which have for their Reverse the Genius of Pl. XXIX. 18. the Stream decumbent, and leaning upon his effluent Urn, with a Reed in one Hand, and the Legend AQVA TRAIANA underneath; that around the Verge being almost entirely obliterated. The grand Hall, which he erected for the Administration of Justice, deserved also to be commemorated on his Coins; on feveral of which we have two different Views of it: and from the Number of its Columns Pl. XXIX. 19. and Decorations, it appears to have been a Work of extraordinary Magnificence: in the Exergue we read BASILICA VLPIA. S.C. and around is the usual Legend. But on some of his Coins, which Pl. XXX. 1. were struck in this Year of his fixth Consulate, there is a most superb Porticus crowded with Or-Vol. II. naments.

TRAIAN.

naments. This might be taken for one of the Entrances of this Emperor's Forum, "on the Pe-"diments of which," fays A. Gellius, "around, " and on every Side, were the gilded Figures of " Horses and Ensigns, and underneath was sub-" feribed EX MANVBIIS, from the Spoils;" and Lipfius doubts not, that there were also gilded Statues. But in the Work before us, instead of the ex manubiis, we see I O M, Jovi Optimo Maximo, which perfuades me, that it was intended for the Vestibulum, or Porch of the Capitol, decorated by Trajan. "Therefore we behold," fays Pliny in his Panegyric, "one or two Statues of you, and " of Brass only, in the Vestibule (in vestibulo Jovis " Optimi Maximi) of Jove of Infinite Goodness " AND POWER." The Circus Maximus, the two Sides of which had been greatly damaged by Fire, was repaired and enlarged by him with the Materials of Domitian's Naumachia. An Inscription upon it faid, that "he had made it large enough " for the Roman People." Yet one would have thought that it had scarce needed any Enlargement before, fince it was then three Furlongs in Length and one wide. It even makes a considerable Figure upon his Coins. Mr. Addison fays, that he faw one of them in the Hands of Monseigneur Strozzi, Brother to the Duke of that Name. "It " has

" has on it," fays he, " besides the Circus Maxi- TRAIAN. " mus, a View of the Side of the Palatine Moun- Pl. XXX. 2. " tain that faces it, on which are seen several Edi-" fices, and among the rest the famous Temple of " Apollo, that has still a considerable Ruin stand-"ing. This," he observes, "is a very curious " Medal, as large as a Medallion." One of them is also in the Pembrokian Collection, and inserted here for the Satisfaction of the curious Reader. It has the usual Legend, and in the Exergue, S C. But the most magnificent of all his Works was, the Forum, called by his Name. The fuperb Entrances of it, particularly the grand Portico, were aftonishing. It is represented on the Medal before us. On the Top of it he appears in his triumphal Car, crowned by Victory, with Trophies on each Side. The Niches are filled with the Statues of those who had distinguished themselves in the Dacian War. In the Exergue, FORVM TRAIANI. In the Area of this Portico was his Equestrian Statue. When Constantius visited Rome, Ammianus, lib. xvi. c. 10. describes him as lost in Amazement when he beheld this Forum, which he calls "the fingular Work under Heaven, which the "Gods themselves would confess to be wonderful, so " enormous was the Contexture of the Whole, in-"effable, inimitable." That Emperor despaired of R 2 being

Pl. XXX. 3.

Pl. XXX. 4.

TRAIAN.

Pl. XXX. 5.

being able to attempt any Thing like it, but the Horse "he both could and would copy." Hormisda, the Persian, who stood by, said, "But first build " fuch a Stable for him, if you can." In the Center of the Forum stood a vast Column of Marble, which, including the Base, was one hundred and forty-four Feet high. There was an Ascent by winding Stairs within; and on the Summit of it was the Statue of the Emperor, twenty Feet high, with a Scepter in the left Hand, and a Globe of Gold in the right, which was intended to receive his Ashes hereafter. The Exploits of the Emperor. in the Dacian War were wrought upon it. These were published at the Expence of Francis the First, King of France, in one hundred and thirty Copper Plates. And the Figures were so curiously done, that Raphael Urbin confessed, that whatsoever Elegance might be discerned in his Drawings, he was indebted for to these. The Pillar is still existing, with an Inscription, importing that the Mountain had been dug away, and levelled to a Depth equal to the Height of the Column. It is figured upon .. his Medals, with the usual Legend, and in the Area S C.

Pł. XXX. 4.

In the short Interval of Peace, which he enjoyed this Year, he distributed a Congiary to the Roman People. The Reverse of the Medal in Bronze, which which commemorates it, is much injured, both in TRAIAN. the Legend and the Figure: but enough of both remains to assure us of the Intent of it. He is represented as making the Distribution in Person, Pl. XXX. 6. with feveral Petitioners around him; and the Letters CONG === with S C in the Exergue, are yet plain. At the fame Time fome Medals in Gold Pl. XXX. 7. were struck in Honour of PLOTINA, having her Bufto inscribed PLOTINA AVG. IMP TRAIANI. For the Reverse, Vesta seated, with the Hasta pura in her left Hand, and holding out the Palladium on her right: the Legend CAES AVG GERMA. DAC. COS VI PP. There is likewife a Denarius, entirely refembling this, both in the Face and Reverse. I find also two of the Emperor's Denarii struck this Year, the Reverse of the one being his own Equestrian Statue, with the usual Legend; of the other, his Predecessor Nerva seated, with the Pl. XXX. 8, 9; Hasta pura in one Hand, and the Patera in the other: the Legend being DIVVS PATER TRA-IANi.

He must have set out out very early this same Year on his Expedition against the Armenians and Parthians; because we have several Medals of the same Date, which record the Success of his Operations. The pretended Ground of the Quarrel was, that the Monarch of the former had received his

TRAIAN. Crown from the latter: but the real Motive was Glory. At Athens, the Ambassadors of Chosroes met him with Prefents from their Master, and a Request of Peace, and of the Crown of Armenia, for Parthamasiris, who was also the Son of Pacoras. He refused the Presents; answering, that Friendship was to be proved by Deeds, not Words: and that, when he came into Syria, he would do what was fitting. On his Arrival at Antioch, he received an Ambassy and Presents from Abgarus, of Ofroene, who, lying exposed both to the Romans and Parthians, was defirous of pleafing both. Having marched to the Borders, the Satraps and Kings of those Parts waited upon him with rich Gifts. He took all, and marched on to Satala and Elegia, Cities of Armenia, did Honour to the King of the Heniochi, but punished Parthamasiris, the Monarch of the Armenians, making himself Master of the whole Country. Those Princes, who submitted, he held in the Number of his Friends, and took the rest Prisoners without Resistance. At Elegia, Parthamasiris laid his Diadem at his Feet, hoping to receive it again at his Hands, but was disappointed. He was however dismissed in Safety with his Attendants. TRAJAN, planting Garrisons in convenient Places, marched on to Edessa, where he first saw Abgarus. This Prince had sent several Ambassadors Ambassadors with Presents, and Excuses for his TRAIAN. Non-appearance. But his Son Arbandes, a Youth of great Beauty, having gained the Favour of TRAJAN, who was supposed to be too familiar with him, he ventured to fhew himself, and obtained In Mesopotamia, he took Singara, with other strong Holds. These Successes gave Birth to many Senatorial Decrees: and on the Surrender of Nisibis and Batna, he received the additional Surname of Parthicus. We find it on one of his Coins in Gold this Year, the Reverse of which has Pl. XXX. 10. the orient Sun, the Legend PARTHICO PM TR P COS VI PP S P Q R. This points out the East for the Scene of these great Actions. But another of his Reverses shews the Emperor himself, standing, in Pl. XXX. 11. his military Habit, with a Spear in one Hand, and a Sword in the other. At his Foot is a female Captive, representing Armenia; and on one Side the Euphrates, on the other the Tigris, decumbent, and leaning upon their Urns: the Legend is ARMENIA ET MESOPOTAMIA IN POTESTATEM PR REDACTAE.

A dreadful Earthquake happened during his Stay at Antioch this Winter, in which City was a vast Concourse of People from all Parts, so that the Damage was general. Vast Numbers lost their Lives, and a Multitude of the Survivors were bruifed and mangled in a shocking Manner. The Emperor himself escaped through the Window of the Room TRAIAN. where he was. In Spring he once more entered the Enemy's Country. He had builded Vessels at Nisibis, which were now conveyed in Carriages to the Tigris. With these he laid a Bridge over that River, at the Foot of Mount Cardynus, and passed it in the Face of the Enemy. He then reduced Assyria; and began to execute his Purpose of joining the Euphrates and Tigris. This seems to be expressed in the Reverse before us, the two Figures repre-Pl. XXX. 12. fenting the Euphrates in Conjunction with the Tigris, with the usual Legend; and in the Exergue SC. However, finding the former of these Rivers to be much higher than the latter, he dropped his Defign, left he should ruin the Navigation of it. On the Reduction of Ctefiphon, he was faluted Imperator the ninth Time, and confirmed in the Sur-Pl. XXX. 13. name of Parthicus. To this was owing the Reverse annexed, on which the Soldiers, Horse and Foot, with their Enfigns, appear before him, as he fits on his Tribunal, attended by his two principal Officers: in the Exergue IMPERATOR VIIII. S C. Another of his Reverses in Gold exhibits a Trophy, Pl. XXX. 14. with two Captives; male and female, fitting at the Foot of it; and in the Exergue PARTHIA CAPTA: the Legend is PM TR P COS VII SPQR. From this Medal it is evident that the Emperor Emperor Trajan was seven Times Consul, not- Trajan. withstanding the Silence of Authors respecting this Point. For Dio Cassius admits of no more than fix Confulships; nor do we meet with more in Almeloocen's Fasti; nor in Goltzius's Catalogue of Confuls, or in his Enumeration of Titles from Coins and Inscriptions. The Senate now passed many Decrees to do him Honour, and principally that he should have as many Triumphs and Festal Days as he should judge proper. He now determined to fail down the Persian Gulf, and took Possession of Messana, an Island of the Tigris, in which Athambylus reigned. Here he incurred great Danger, from the Severity of the Weather, the Rapidity of the Tigris, and the high Tides. Thence he came to the Ocean; and having observed the Nature of it, and feen a Ship pursuing its Voyage to India, he faid, that if he was a young Man, he would himfelf pass thither. The Senate, informed of these Things, decreed for him a triumphal Arch in his own Forum, and made great Preparations for his Reception: but he returned no more. Nor was the End answerable to the Beginning. What he had gained with fo much Toil and Hazard, was on a fudden loft. For while he was failing towards the Ocean, and returning thence, a general Defection took place; and his Garrisons were either ejected, or put Vol. II.

TRAIAN.

to the Sword. Apprised of this, he dispatched Lusius and Maximus, his Generals, against the Rebels. This last was defeated and died. But Lusius recovered Nisibis, and sacked and burned Edessa. Seleucia was also stormed and burned by other Commanders. TRAJAN, fearing left the Parthians also should raise Disturbances, determined to give them a Native for their King. He therefore came to Ctefiphon, and affembling the Romans and Parthians in a spacious Plain, ascended his Tribunal; and after recounting his Exploits, declared Parthamaspates their King, placing the Diadem on his Head. The very curious Medal in Bronze, Pl. XXX, 16. which celebrates this Transaction, gives on its Reverse the whole Ceremony; with the Legend REX PARTHIS DATVS: in the Exergue SC. But in the Course of the Expedition, several Scepters were disposed of by him. Two are given to Per-Pl. XXX. 17. - fons, who, on the fine Reverse before us, are raised upon Thrones, and receive them on their Knees: himself is represented in the Act of conferring them, while a Victory alate descends from Heaven, and

Pl. XXX. 18. crowns him with a Wreath of Laurel. Another fine Medal in Bronze, with his laureate Head, inscribed IMPeratori CAESari NERvae TRAIANO OPTIMO AVGusto GERmanico DACico PAR-THICO P. M., Pontifici Maximo, Thews on its Reverse three Kings together, receiving their Domi- TRAIAN.

· verse

nions at his Hands, having the Legend REGNa

ADSIGNata.

After this he marched into Arabia against the Hagarens, who had also revolted. Their City was neither large nor wealthy, and the Country around mostly desart, through the Want of Wood and wholesome Water, and parched with continual Heat. He fent forward his Gavalry to the Walls, but they were repulsed with much Loss. He followed himself, and had a narrow Escape, an Horseman being slain close by him. Storms of Wind and Hail, with Thunder and Lightning, drove them back at every Affault; fo that he was forced to raife the Siege, and foon after fell into an incurable Disease. Meantime the Yews about Cyrene rose upon the Greeks and Romans, whom they masfacred, feeding upon their Flesh like Beasts of Prey. Many they fawed afunder, threw many to the wild Beafts, and obliged many to kill one another in Combat, destroying two hundred and twenty thoufand Persons. The same Confusion they created in Egypt and Cyprus, flaying there two hundred and forty thousand, but were subdued principally by Lufius. TRAJAN had Thoughts of leading his Army into Mesopotamia once more, but his Malady increasing, he began his March for Italy, leaving Hadrian at the Head of his Forces in Syria. He thought . S 2 himfelf himself poisoned; but others judged his Disorder to be owing to a Suppression of the Hæmorrhoidal Flux. He was seized with a Stroke of the Palfy, and had a confirmed Dropsy, which carried him off at Selinus, a City of Cilicia, after a Reign of nineteen Years six Months and sisteen Days.

TRAIAN.

He was a Prince of boundless Ambition, and raised the Roman Empire to the highest Pitch of Dominion which it ever obtained. But he had another Sort of Ambition, which was much more noble, that of engaging the Affection of his Subjects by continued Acts of Generofity and Mercy. Hence, when he appointed a Commander of the Prætorian Cohorts, and gave him the Sword as usual, he held it out to him drawn, "Receive "this," faid he, "for me, if I govern well; if not, against me." His great Failings were Vinosity and unnatural Lust: but he endeavoured to prevent any ill Effects from the first, by charging those about him to execute no Commands that he should give after drinking largely; and the last was scarce deemed a Vice amongst them. He was a Bigot to the Idolatry of his Country; and, notwithstanding his boasted Clemency, permitted the Persecution to proceed against the Christians; and, while he was at Antioch, in Person condemned Ignatius to the wild Beasts. His Resolution on this Head was inconsistent and contradictory. For Hamid though, though, after Pliny's candid Representation of them, TRATAN. and their Religion, he forbad any Enquiry after them, yet he directed that they should be punished when formally accused. "A strange Perplexity "this," says Tertullian, "between Reasons of State " and Justice! He declares them innocent, by for-" bidding them to be fearched after, and at the " same Time commands them to be punished as " Criminals." His Ashes were brought to Rome, and deposited under his Pillar, and himself was deified. We have the Heads of himself and his. Predecessor on the same Medal of Gold, with DIVI NERVA ET TRAIANVS PAT. There are Abundance of Greek Medals of him. Vaillant enumerates more than one hundred and twenty. Few of them have any Thing worth Notice. We shall insert only one or two of the more curious. The first, which gives his laureate Head, with TPAIANOC CEBACTos, Trajanus Augustus, may be called a Confecration Medal, as it shews him on the Reverse placed in the Center of the Zodiac, furrounded by the Constellations. Another, struck undoubtedly Pl. XXX. 19 at Alexandria, in Egypt, is very fine, having his laureate Head, with TPAIANOC CEBACTOC, Imperator Trajanus Augustus; and, on the Reverse, the Genius of the River Nile, seated on a Sphynx,. with a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and the Papyrus:

TRAIA'N.

in the other: several little Figures of Men are in Motion round about; and in the Area, III, anno 17°. It was probably struck in Gratitude for his Munisicence; who, on a Failure of the usual Inundation, had very readily and copiously relieved their Wants.

THE Land of the Country and the second real field and concil of the characteristic of the concept or has bedieved, over contracting over the of draw will me and yet

PUBLIUS AELIUS HADRIANUS.

ADRIAN was the Kinsman of TRAJAN, and HADRIAN. had married his Niece Sabina. He succeeded to the Empire in Consequence of a supposititious Adoption, managed by PLOTINA, whose Favourite: he was. Of this, Letters were dispatched to the Senate, figned by her. He was, therefore, acknowledged Emperor; and we see him on the Reverse Pl. XXX. 20: before us, rifing as the orient Sun, and affuming. the Titles of PM TR P COS II; and underneath, ORIENS. The late-conquered Nations were now in Arms; the Moors discontented, the Sarmatians in open War, the Britons impatient of the Yoke,. Egypt troubled with Seditions, and Lycia and Palestine.

HADRIAN.

Palestine evidently disposed for Rebellion. He, therefore, wifely resolved to quit Parthia, Armenia, Assyria, and Mesopotamia, and make the Euphrates the Boundary of the Roman Empire. He, therefore, gave fome neighbouring Dominions to the Prince whom TRAJAN had fet over the Parthians, withdrew his Troops, doubled the usual Largess of the Soldiers, and fet out from Antioch, for Rome, by the Way of Illyricum. Tatianus, Plotina, and Matidia, with the Remains of TRAJAN, took their Passage by Sea. On his Route he wrote to the Senate, required divine Honours for TRAJAN, and asked Pardon in the genteelest Manner for having affumed the Purple without their Consent, having been hastily faluted Emperor by the Army. His Arrival at Rome is celebrated on his Medals. The Pl. XXXI. 1. Reverse of one of them in Gold has a Figure representing Rome, armed, with an Helmet, seated on a Trophy, having the Hasta pura in the left Hand, and with the right taking hold of HA-DRIAN's, in Token of a friendly Reception; in the Exergue, COS III. The Senate decreed to him the Triumph due to TRAJAN, but he refused it for himself, and carried the Statue of the deceased Emperor in the triumphal Car. The Title of PATER PATRIAE, though pressed upon him once and again, he deferred for a Time. His Bounties

The different all with the dealers of the least the leas

Bounties were immense. He remitted the coro- HADRIAN. nary Gold to Italy, and lessened it to the Provinces, notwithstanding the known Difficulties of the Treafury. He exceeded TRAJAN, himself in the Provision which he made for the Education of Children. This is recognized on the Reverse, which Pl. XXXI. 2. shews him enthroned, while a Roman Matron prefents her Children to him, to whom he graciously extends his Hand. The Legend is PONT MAX TR POT COS III: in the Area, SC; and in the Exergue LIBERTAS RESTITVTA. He cancelled the Arrears due to the Treasury for sixteen Years past, whether from private Persons in the City, in Italy, or the Provinces, publicly burning the Bonds in TRAJAN'S Forum. In this Act he is represented on the Reverse before us, with a Torch Pl. XXXI. 3. in his Hand, setting Fire to the obligatory Instruments; while the Romans before him hold up their Hands in the Fulness of Admiration. The Legend runs RELIQVA VETERA HS NOVIES MILLies ABOLITA. S C. The Debts thus abolished amounted to no less than seven millions two hundred fixty-five thousand fix hundred and twentyfour Pounds of our Money. He forbad the Effects of condemned Persons to be returned into his private Exchequer, and ordered them into the public Treasury. To the poorer Senators, he allowed VOL. II. T Stipends,

HADRIAN.

Stipends, proportioned to the Number of their Children. He exhibited a Shew of Gladiators for fix Days together; and on his Birth-day exposed a thousand wild Beasts, when an hundred Lions, and as many Lionesses, were killed. At the Theatre and Circus he gave Presents to the Men and Women separately, in missile Balls. These Things restored that Joy and Chearfulness to the City, which is represented on one of his Reverses, under the Figure represented on one of his Reverses, under the Figure of a Woman, with her Lap gathered, and a Cornuccopia in her Hand, to intimate that Plenty which breeds Hilarity. Before her is a Palm-Branch, the Symbol of Success: the Legend HILARITAS PR: in the Area SC; and in the Exergue COS III. His own Felicity, in the Happiness of the People, is expressed on another of his Reverses, in much the same Manner; only here the Figure has a Branch of Laurel in the right Hand, and a Caduceus in the left: the Legend FELICITAS AVG; and in the

Pl. XXXI. 4.

PLXXXI. Area S.C. But on another of his Medals, of the first Magnitude, in Bronze, the same Figure has the Cadúceus in her right Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in her left. And it is to be remarked, that on the

Pl. XXXI. 6. Obverse of Face of this Medal, the Emperor takes the Title of PP, or Father of his Country. His Promotion to this Dignity he imputes to the Providence of the Gods, being described on one of his

7 Reverses,

Reverses, with an Air of Devotion, reaching out HADRIAN. his Hand towards the Sceptre, which is brought to him by the Eagle of Jupiter, in his Talons: the Legend PROVIDENTIA DEORVM; and in the Pl. XXXI. 7. Area S.C. But Mr. Addison has given us a Reverse, inscribed by the Senate to the Felicity of this Emperor, the Device of which is a Ship carried on by Sails and Oars at the same Time:

- " Sive opus est, minimam velis bene currit ad auram, "Sive opus est remo remige carpit iter.
- The light Breeze carries her, if Sail she needs; " If Oars, with Rowers then her Way she speeds.

media Toda ex was part as lon "It is an Emblem of Happiness:

relation to the later the later S. En ego non paucis quondam munitus amicis, "Dum flavit velis aura secunda meis.

"Guarded with Friends I was, while Fortune's Gales

"Wanton'd auspicious in my swelling Sails.

"The Metaphor is the same in the Verses as in " the Medal; only the one is in Words, the other

" in Figures. The Idea is alike in both, though

" the Manner of representing it is different. Seve" ral Ships made Choice of some God or other for " their Guardians, as among the Roman Catholics

" every Vessel is recommended to the Patronage of " some particular Saint. The Figure of him was " placed T 2

HADRIAN.

" placed on one End of the Vessel that it patro-

- " Hammon numen erat Libycæ gentile carinæ,
  - " Cornigeraque sedens spectabat cærula fronte. Sil. Ital.

e ris of the line of the coin of the second

- " The Poop great Ammon, Libya's God, display'd,
  - "Whose horned Front the nether Flood survey'd."

The Vessel, figured on his Coin, bears the Triton; and the Legend FELICITATI AVG. is on the Sail. But on the Medal before us, it is over it upon the Margin: in the Area is the SC; and in the Exergue COS III PP. Neptune is the Guardian Deity, who is seated on the Poop, with the Trident in his Hand. Behind him is an Ensign rear'd, and at the Foot of it the Pilot sits, holding the Helm. At the other End is the Emperor, looking down upon the Vessel, and the Rowers underneath him. The Figures and their several Places are no where more distinct.

On the Declaration of War with the Sarmatians and Roxolanians, who had invaded Illyricum, he fent the Armies forward, and then set out for Moesia, appointing Martius Turbo temporary Governor of Pannonia and Dacia. This Expedition is signified on two Reverses, which shew him on Horseback: the Legend of one being PM TR P COS III S C; and underneath, EXPEDitio AV-Gusti:

Pl. XXXI. 8.

Pl. XXXI. 9, 10.

Gusti: of the other, COS III PP; and underneath, HADRIAN. SC. In Moesia he defeated the Enemy on their Return, who in their Flight swam across the Danube. The Roman Cavalry in the Pursuit took the River after them. This fo terrified them, that they fued for Peace, and had it granted. His Review of, and Adlocution to, the Dacian Army on this Occasion is represented on two Reverses also. On the one he appears on Horseback with three Soldiers and their Eagles before him, representing so many Legions, and they are called EXERCITVS DACICVS. S C. On the other he is on Foot, haranguing them from the Suggestum. But here the Figures are four; the one on the Side reprefenting the Auxiliaries. His Success is intimated by a Reverse of Gold, whereon he appears armed Pl. XXXI. 13. with Helmet, Spear, and Shield, with the Legend PM TR P COS III: and by another of the same Pl. XXXII 14-Metal, with a Victory alate, with a Palm-Branch on the Shoulder, and holding out a Wreath of Laurel with the right Hand; and by a Denarius, the Re- PL XXXI. 15. verse of which exhibits the Goddess Roma, seated, with a Victory in one Hand, and an Olive-Branch in the other, to intimate the Peace which enfued. He now escaped a Plot laid for his Life by Nigrinus, which was to have been executed while he was facrificing. In this Plot, Palma, Celfus, and Lufius, were:

PL XXXI.

11, 12.

HADRIAN. were Accomplices, concerning whom he wrote to the Senate, who immediately condemned them all to die. This caused Murmurings; and the Emperor, to clear himself, swore that they had not fuffered by his Orders. He now returned to Rome; and, to wipe off all Aspersions, gave a double Congiary to the People, who had already received three Pieces of Gold a Head. This Liberality is celebrated on some of his Medals of Silver by a fe-21. XXXI. 16. male Figure pouring Coins in great Plenty from her Cornucopia, with the Legend LIBERALITAS AVG. COS III.

He now took a Journey into Campania, conferring Benefits wherever he passed. He next went into Gaul, relieving every where the distressed. His Arrival there is celebrated on one of his Me-M. XXXI. 17. dals; the Legend of which is ADVENTVI AVG GALLIAE S.C. Gallia, or "France, has a Sheep "by her," fays Mr. Addison, "not only as a Sacrifice, but to shew that the Riches of the Coun-"try confisted chiefly in Flocks and Pasturage:

> - pinguia Gallicis " Crescunt vellera pascuis. Hor.

* Fat Fleeces in the Gallie Pastures grow.

&quot;She carries on her Shoulders the Sagulum, or

&quot; fmall Cassock, that Virgil speaks of as the Ha-

&quot; bit of the ancient Gauls.

" Aurea cæsaries ollis, atque aurea vestis:

Wirgatis lucent sagulis.

HADRIAN.

"The Gold dissembled well their yellow Hair;

" And golden Chains on their white Necks they wear;

" Gold are their Vests.

She is drawn in a Posture of facrificing for the " fafe Arrival of the Emperor. We find on the " feveral Medals struck on Hadrian's Progress " through the Empire, that at his Arrival they offered a Sacrifice to the Gods for the Reception " of fo great a Bleffing." He then passed into Germany, where he inured the Soldiers to Hardiness and Discipline by his own Example, marching on Foot, with his Arms, for twenty Miles together at a Time, leading altogether a military Life amongst them, and sustaining himself with fat Bacon, Cheese, and Posca, or Water-Wine, a Liquor made by an Infusion of Water upon the Grapes after the first Expression. This Strictness is acknowledged on his Medals of Gold and Bronze. On the first he is represented in the Toga or Civil Gown, Pl. XXXI. 18. marching before them, three Soldiers with their Enfigns marching after him in Order: in the Exergue, DISCIPLINA AVG. On the latter he is in the military Habit, and is followed by four; the foremost representing his Legate or Lieutenant: the Legend is the fame, with the Addition of the

HADRIAN.

S C. His next Vifit was to Britain, where Julius Severus commanded. Camden remarks, that "the " Britons had certainly freed themselves from the

" Roman Yoke, if HADRIAN had not come hither

" in Person, who seems to have defeated them.

Pl. XXXI. 19.

" For in a Coin of his we see a General with three "Soldiers, which I suppose to represent the three

" Legions of Britain, with this Inscription, EXER-

" citus BRITANNICVS; and another, with this

"Infcription, RESTITVTORI BRITANNIAE;"

Pl. XXXI. 20. and another, whereon we fee Britannia with her right Foot upon a Trophy, a Spear in her Hand, and leaning her left Arm upon a Shield. For here he made many Regulations, and raised a Wall eighty Miles in Length, to check the Incursions of the Barbarians. Here he displaced Septimius Clarus, his Captain of the Guards, and Suetonius Tranquillus the Historian, his Secretary, for using the Empress Sabina with too little Reverence, without bis Orders. This feems to be an Intimation, that she was rarely used with proper Regard by himfelf, or those about him. Indeed she complained much of the Bitterness of his Behaviour towards her; which, Victor fays, induced her to put an End to her own Life. Yet we have her Head in Gold, with the Infcription SABINA AVGVSTA HADRI-ANI AVG PP; and on the Reverse, a Concord feated,

The state of the state of feated, with the Patera in her Hand, and around CONCORDIA AVGusta. But this is no more than the usual Compliment. But one of her Medals in Bronze of the first Magnitude celebrates her pl. XXXII. I. Chastity, the Figure of the Goddess PVDICITIA being exhibited on the Reverse, seated and veiled, having her long Garments drawn around her in close Modesty: the Legend PVDICITIA; and in the Exergue, S.C. We see the same Figure on a Reverse of the younger Faustina. Temples were erected to this Deity:

Templa Pudicitiæ quid opus statuisse puellis, Si cuivis nuptæ quidlibet esse licet? TIBULL.

Since Wives, whate'er they please, unblam'd can be, Why rear we useless Fanes to Chastity? Addison.

How her Posture and Dress become her, you may see in the following Verses:

Ergo sedens velat vultus, obnubit ocellos;

Ista verecundi signa Pudoris erant.

Alciat.

She sits, her Visage veil'd, her Eyes conceal'd;

She sits, her Vilage veil'd, her Eyes conceal'd;
By Marks like these was Chastity reveal'd. Addison

Ite procul vittæ tenues, insigne Pudoris,

Quæque tegit medios instita longa pedes.

OVID.

Hence the smooth Fillets on the Forehead bound, Whose Bands the Brows of Chastity surround, And her coy Robe that lengthens to the Ground.

ADDISON.

Vol. II. U Laftly,

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

HADRIAN.

Lastly, she is represented in the Habit of a Roman Matron, and Matronæ præter faciem nil cernere possis, Cætera (ni Catia est) demissa veste tegentis.

Hor.

The modest Matron's Face is seen alone, For all the rest is cover'd with a Gown.

CREÉCH:

Pl. XXXII. 2.

Her Denarius, inscribed SABINA AVGVSTA, has for its Reverse the Venus Genetrix, with a Branch of Myrtle in one Hand, and the Golden Apple in the other: the Legend VENERI GENETRICI. Here the Figure is erect, and shews itself freely; the Countenance is open, the Neck bare, the Feet in View, and the Robe loose and flowing; forming a Sort of Contrast to the preceding. But how far it is applicable to this Empress must be left to others; since she confessed the Endeavours which she used to prevent her being with Child by one of so morose and sour a Disposition. This Imputation, however, was mutual, and there seems to have been a Want of Complacency on both Sides.

From Britain he returned hastily into Gaul, on Account of a Sedition at Alexandria. This was occasioned by the Eagerness of the Inhabitants to have, every one, the new-found Apis in their own Possession. He now raised a Basilic of wondrous Workmanship, at Nemausus, in Honour of Plo-

V130.7

TINA. Thence he proceeded to Spain, and wintered HADRIAN. at Tarraco, where he restored the Temple of Au-GUSTUS, at his own Expence, and held an Assembly of the State. His Presence and Munificence here is recorded on two of his Reverses. The first has the Genius of Spain decumbent, with an Olive- Pl. XXXII. 3. Branch in her Hand, and crowned with a Wreath of the same, as described by Claudian:

——— Flavis dum prima Minervæ Nexa caput foliis.

Minerva's Leaves enwreath'd around her Head.

At her Foot is a Rabbit, an Animal with which this Province abounded. Catullus therefore calls it Cuniculosa Celtiberia, Rabbit-bearing Celtiberia. We read of a whole Town in Spain undermined by them; and the learned Bochart is of Opinion, that from them the Country took its Denomination; the Word 150, Sepan, signifying a Rabbit in the Phanician Language, to which the Greeks adding their usual Termination, called it Σπανια, whence the Word HISPANIA, furrounding the Figure. In the second she is on her Knees, with the same Ani- Pl. XXXII. 4. mal at her Feet, and is graciously raised by the Emperor, who extends his Hand for that Purpose: the Legend RESTITVTORI HISPANIAE. While here, he gave the Germans a King, and repressed

U 2

the

Pl. XXXII. 5.

HADRIAN. the Motions of the Moors. Supplications were now made for his Return, which are recorded on a Silver Coin by an Altar, before which stands an officiating Priest, with a Patera in his Hand, having the Legend VOTA PVBLICA. After this he went through the leffer Afia, and traversed the Islands to Achaia. Here he was initiated in the Eleufinian Mysteries, and his Beneficence was such that the Greeks reared his Statue of Parian Marble. in the Temple of Jupiter. It is acknowledged also. on the Reverse before us, where Achaia is on her Knees before the Emperor. "She has an Urn be-" fore her," fays Mr. Addison, " with a Sprig of " Parsley rising out of it. This alludes to the " Numean Games, in which a Garland of Parsley "was, the Victor's Reward. One Reason for it "was, doubtlefs, because it always preserves its. "Verdure; and is therefore called by Horace the " vivax apium, or long-lived Parsley." Thence he failed to Sicily, and ascended Mount Ætna, to see the Sun rife there, as various, as he was faid to do, in his Colours as the Rainbow. This Island too. Pl. XXXII. 6. appears on his Coins, in the same Attitude, and is raised by him in the same Manner. She holds out an Handful of Wheat, and is crowned with a Garland of it. For she abounded with this Commodity, and was therefore called the Granary of Rome. Here the now returned to Rome, but quickly after set Sail for Africa. On his Arrival there it rained, after a Drought of five Years. This exceedingly endeared him to the People of those Provinces, who also shared his usual Munificence. Hence we have, on several of his Coins, the Figures representing Africa and Mauritania. On that before us, the former is Pl. XXXII. 7. decumbent, and quoiffed (as Mr. Addison calls it) with the Head of the Elephant, to shew that this Animal is the Breed of the Country.

Et vastos Elephantes babet, sævosque leones, In pænas fæcunda suas, parit borrida tellus.

MANIL:

Fruitful in its own Plagues, the defart Shore Hears Elephants and frightful Lions roar.

The Scorpion is also proper to the Country, for which Reason she holds it in her Hand: and the admirable Fertility of it is pointed out in the Cornucopiæ which she bears, and the Basket of Wheat which stands before her:

Frumenti quantum metit Africa. Hor:
And Corn as much as Afric measures out.

Mauritania is described by a Moor, holding his Pl. XXXII. 8. Horse, without a Rein, and having in his Hand the Wand

HADRIAN. Wand with which they were used to direct and govern them, according to Claudian;

Virga regit.

A Wand directs their Courfers, which disdain The servile Usage of the curbing Rein.

No Prince ever travelled over so many Countries with like Expedition. Returning to Rome again, in the Year of the City eight hundred and seventy-four, he erected and dedicated a most magnificent Temple to the Fortune of the City. This Ceremony was performed on the 21st of April, or the Eleventh of the Calends of May, which was the Birth-day of the City, formerly called the Parilia, or Palilia, now Romana. The Rejoicings were extraordinary; and the Circensian Sports exhibited by Decree of Pl. XXXII. 9. the Senate. All this is expressed on one of his Medals of Gold, by a female Figure, representing the Fortune of the City, and distinguished by her Wheel, who is feated at the Foot of the Meta; or Obelisk of the Circus Maximus: the Legend is ANN DCCCLXXIIII NAT. VRB R CIR CON; i. e. Natali urbis Romæ Circenses Concessi. (Vide Ammian. Marcellin. Gronov. p. 103, ad Notam, f.) He now passed thence into the East, taking Athens in his Way. Here he discharged the Office

of

of Archon, cloathed in the Habit of the Country, HADRIAN. and celebrated the Feast of Bacchus magnificently. He now dedicated the Works begun by him before (as the Temple of Olympian Fove, in which he placed a Serpent brought from India, and an Altar to himself;) permitted the Athenians to build their Temple called Paphellenion, instituted Sports on that Occasion, and presented them with a large Sum, an annual Supply of Corn, and the whole Territory of Cephalenia. In Afia he consecrated many Temples, denominated from himself Hadriana. His Arrival in Capadocia is fignified by a Soldier, in the Habit Pl. XXXII. io. of the Country, with a Standard in his Hand: the Legend CAPADOCIA. Here he purchased a Number of Slaves, for the Service of the Camp; and gave a friendly Invitation to the Kings and Rulers of those Parts, and to Cosrobes among the rest; whose Daughter, formerly taken Prisoner by TRAJAN, he released. To those who came, he behaved so generously, as to make the rest regret their Absence. He severely punished the Procurators and Governors in Fault. The Levity, Dicacity, and Petulance of the Antiochians, he could not bear with; and had Thoughts of disjoining Phænicia from Syria, that their City might not continue the Metropolis of fo many others. He now passed through Judæa, in his Way to Egypt. On one of his HADRIAN. his Coins this Province is represented as sacrificing to the Gods on his Behalf, and to congratulate his Arrival. The Altar is before her, and on each Side of it a naked Child, with Palm-Branches (the usual Symbol of the Country) in their Hands. The Em-Pl. XXXII. 11. peror himself is in the Attitude of one who is giving a serious and strict Charge to the Person facrificing. For at this Time he forbad them to facrifice to any other than the Gods of the Nations, and to circumcife their Children: the Legend is ADVENTVS AVG IVDAEAE S.C. He restored Ferusalem, in which he planted a Colony, and called it Ælia Capitolina. Where the Temple of Solomon had stood, he raised another to Jupiter. All this exasperated the Yews, and laid the Foundation of a dreadful War. They repaired their Forts and Cities, and made subterraneous Passages for their Defence, with furprifing Industry. At length their Numbers became extremely formidable. Severus, afterwards Emperor, was recalled from Britain, to command against them; who, by attacking them in separate Bodies, and intercepting their Convoys, at length entirely ruined them. Fifty of their Castles, and nine hundred and eighty Towns, were utterly destroyed. In Excursions and Engagements, five hundred and eighty thousand of them were slain, besides an infinite Number that perished by Fire, Sickness, Sickness, and Famine; so that Judea was in a HADRIAN.

Manner desart.

When he came to Pelusium, he facrificed to Pompey, and repaired his Monument. Here in the Practice of his Magic Rites, standing in Need of a voluntary Life, his favourite Pathic Antinous offered himself to Death; whom he therefore held in such Honour afterwards as to build a City on the Spot, which he called by his Name. Statues and Temples he erected to him almost all the World over, and affirmed a new Star, which appeared, to be the Soul of Antinous. No wonder then that Medals of the feveral Metals were struck to perpetuate his Memory. Those of Gold have his Head alike on Pl. XXXII. 123 both Sides, without any Inscription. In Bronze there are many of him, and of all Sizes. Some of them give his Head plain, with ANTINOOC HPOC, Pl. XXXII. 13. Antinous Heros, having a Bull (the Animal facrificed to him, as to Jupiter and Augustus) for the Reverse, with NEIKOMHAEIA H MHTPOITOAIC, Nicomedia Metropolis. Others, his Head crowned with the Lotus, Egypt having been the Scene of this Action, with ANTINOOY HPWOC, Antinoi Herois; while the Reverse shews him on Horseback, with the Caduceus in his Hand. For he is sometimes represented as Mercury, as Bacchus sometimes, and sometimes as Pan.

Vol. II. X His

HADRIAN. His Arrival in Egypt is intimated on several Pl. XXXII. 14. Coins, some of which have for their Reverse the Nile decumbent, leaning on his effluent Urn, crowned with Reeds, and holding a Cornucopiæ, to intimate the Fertility and Plenty flowing from him,

Pl. XXXII. 15. or distinguished by an Anchor. In others, Is sits leaning on a Canopus, having the Sistrum in her

PI.XXXII. 16. Hand, and the Ibis before her. In others, the Nile is described as before, having the Word NILVS over him, but with the Crocodile resting upon his

Pl. XXXII. 17. Knee: for this Animal, which abounded in the Nile, was even worshipped by the Egyptians.

Egyptus portenta colit, Crocodilon adorat.

Mad Egyps worships Monsters, and adores. The Crocodile.

In others we have the Symbol of ALEXANDRIA, Pl. XXXII. 18. with Ears of Corn in her Hand, and the Harvest before her. In the Museum of this City he spent his Time agreeably, proposing and expounding Questions in Philosophy. And having now travelled over all the Roman World, he was complimented as the Restorer of it, by Medals struck at Rome, by Order of the Senate, on which a semale Figure kneels before him, with an Imperial Crown upon her Head, and a Globe on her Lap, whom he raises from the Ground. The three Divisions of the Globe, Europe, Asia, and Africa, are se- HADRIAN. parately before her; and the Legend is RESTITV- Pl. XXXII. 19. TORI ORBIS TERRARVM. For he had raised some Structure, and exhibited Games in almost every City. But though his public Works were infinite, and in all Places, he inscribed his Name no where but on the Temple of TRAJAN. At Rome he repaired the Pantheon, the Septa where the Suffrages were taken, the Basilic of Neptune, many Temples, the Forum of Augustus, and the Baths of AGRIPPA. He erected the Ælian Bridge, which is figured on the Reverse before us (but we must Pl. XXXII. 20. not omit to inform our Readers, that the Genuineness of both this, and the Meta Sudans of NERVA, is questioned by the Antiquaries of Rome) and his own intended Mausoleum, near the Tiber. He removed the Temple of the Bona Dea, as he did the huge Colossus of Nero, standing and suspended as it was, with the Assistance of twenty-four Elephants; and emptied the Lake Fucinus, by deepening the Canal of CLAUDIUS.

of

In this Reign an Inundation of the Tiber happened, and Famine, Pestilence, and Earthquakes, were frequent, which the Emperor remedied to the utmost of his Power. The last, he supposed that his Piety and Sacrifices (for he was exceedingly superstitious) had at Length got the better of. For which

HADRIAN. which Reason we find a Figure representing the Pl. XXXIII. 1. Earth on some of his Denarii, with the Legend TELLVS STABILITA.

For his public Works, and his Munificence, which had extended to all Countries, but was particularly manifest at Rome, he was flattered as the Restorer of the Golden Age. This imputed Revolution of Time is described upon one of his Pl. XXXIII. 2. Medals of Gold in a very extraordinary Manner, by the Figure of a venerable Person standing within a great Circle or Wheel, which, with the Constellations thereon, he has brought round with his right Hand, while he holds the Globe in his left, with a Phænix perched upon it. The Legend is a Continuation of his Titles PM TR P COS III and underneath, SAECulum AVReum. Mr. Addifon has taken particular Notice of this. "It was," fays he, " an Opinion among the Ancients, that "the Phænix renewed herself at the Beginning of the Great Year, and the Return of the Golden "Age. The Person in the Midst of the Circle is " supposed to be Jupiter, by the Author that has " published this Medal, but I should rather take it " for the Figure of Time. I remember to have " feen at Rome an antique Statue of Time, with a "Wheel or Hoop of Marble in his Hand, as « Seneca:

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

brook and fillulars, young Months Day

.

The tright is the same

- man de saines have and entre with a Super-

Æ 10 A OTCOS "Seneca describes him, and not with a Serpent, as HADRIAN.

"he is generally represented:

ce _____ properat cursu

"Vita citato, volucrique die

"Rota præcipitis volvitur anni.

Herc. Fur.

" Life posts away,

- " And Day from Day drives on with swift Career
- " The Wheel that hurries on the headlong Year.
- " As the Circle of Marble in his Hand represents
- " the common Year, so this that encompasses him
- " is a proper Representation of the Great Year,
- " which is the whole Round and Comprehension
- " of Time. For when this is finished, the hea-
- " venly Bodies are supposed to begin their Courses,
- " anew, and to measure over again the several
- " Periods and Divisions of Years, Months, Days,
- " &c. into which the Great Year is distinguished:

- "To fum up, therefore, the Thoughts of this
- " Medal. The Infcription teaches, that the whole
- "Design must refer to the Golden Age, which it

&quot; --- Consumpto, magnus qui dicitur, anno

&quot; Rursus in antiquum venient vaga sidera cursum:

&quot; Qualia dispositi steterant ab origine mundi. Auson

&quot;When round the Great Platonic Year has turn'd,

&quot; In their old Ranks the wand'ring Stars shall stand, &quot; As when first marshall'd by the Almighty's Hand.

HADRIAN.

1 7

" lively represents, if we suppose the Circle that " encompasses Time, or Jupiter, to signify the " finishing of the Great Year; and that the Phænix

"figures out a new Series of Time. So that the " Compliment on this Medal to HADRIAN is in all "Respects the same that Virgil makes to Pollio's

"Son, at whose Birth he supposes the Annus

" Magnus, or Platonical Year, run out, and re" newed again with the Opening of the Golden

" Age."

« Magnus ab integro sæclorum nascitur ordo:

" Jam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna:

" Et nova progenies cælo demittitur alto.

A 2 179 molf in red toddlegadilleren n

Ec. 4.

"The Time is come the Sibyls long foretold,

" And the blest Maid restores the Age of Gold,

" In the great Wheel of Time before enroll'd.

"Now a new Progeny from Heav'n descends."

LAUDERDALE.

We see the Phænix also on three Medals of the Pl. XXXIII. 3. Emperor Constans, on one of which she stands on the Cælestial Globe, with the Legend FELix TEMPorum REPARATIO. As they had thus the Art of restoring what Part of Time they judged proper, we shall be the less surprized to see the Foundation of the City brought round again, by finding the old Story of the Wolf giving Suck to Pl. XXXIII. 4. Romelus and Remusion one of his Medals of Gold.

Pl. XXXIII. 4. Romulus and Remus on one of his Medals of Gold, with with COS III; or, a Soldier with his Accoutre- HADRIAN. ments, on the March, upon his Denarius, inscribed Pl. XXXIII. 5. ROMVLO CONDITORI.

The Fatigues of HADRIAN had brought upon him a tedious Illness, which was rendered extremely dangerous by an extravagant Bleeding at the Nofe, from which a Dropfy enfued. He therefore adopted L. Ceionius Commodus, to whom he gave the Name of ÆLIUS CESAR; though he also was troubled with an Evomition of Blood. We have his Head impressed on Gold, with L AELIVS CAESAR, and a Concord for the Reverse, seated, with a Patera in Pl. XXXIII. 6. her Hand, and a Cornucopiæ fixed near her: the Legend TR POT COS II.; in the Exergue CON-CORDia, to express their perfect Union and Agreement. But his Denarius bears a Piety in long Pl. XXXIII. 7. Robes, veiled, with a Patera in her Hand, and an Altar before her, distinguished by the Word PIETAS in the Area, intimating his filial Duty towards his adopting Father. He was fent to govern Pannonia, and in that Station behaved well. There is a Medal of him in Bronze, of the first Magnitude, the Reverse of which exhibits the Figures of Fortune, with Pl. XXXIII. & her Helm resting upon a Globe, to signify his unexpected Exaltation to the Empire of the World; and of Hope, cloathed in her white Robe, but having a Crown upon her Head, as fulfilled,

and

The same Figure (the Crown excepted, which in that Place would have been improper) has been already given on a Medal of CLAUDIUS. This Deity, for such she was,

Hæc Dea, cum fugerent sceleratas numina terras, In Dîs invisâ sola remansit humo. OVID.

When other Deities hence wing'd their Way, On Earth this only Goddess deign'd to stay.

had two Temples erected to her at Rome; one just without the Porta Carmentalis, and the other in the Olitorium, or Herb-Market. And she is robed in White, Te spes et albo rara Fides colit Velata panno.

Hor. Od. 1. 1. 35.

Thee, Fortune, Hope, and Faith, alas! how rare! Enrob'd in White, attend with duteous Care.

because all Petitioners for Dignities were so cloathed: whence they were said to be Candidati. The Image of Hope on this Medal, paying her Regard to Fortune, seems to have been copied from this Passage of the Poet. Another of his Reverses has the Figure of PANNONIA, holding a Banner, with the same Legend, TR POT COS II. There PLXXXIII. 10. is a Medal of the same Size and Metal, of his Wife LVCILLA, having a Crown upon her Head, whereon whereon she is stiled AVGVSTA, as he was in- HADRIAN. vested with the Tribunitial Power: on the Reverse of which she is feated as IVNO, the Confort of Jupiter, with S C. But her Denarius has the Pl.XXXIII.11. VENUS VICTRIX, resting her left Hand upon a Shield, and holding a Victory in her right.

But however grievous the Sickness of HADRIAN was, his intended Successor died before him. He then adopted Arrius Antoninus, on Condition that he also should adopt two others, Annius Verus, and MARCUS ANTONINUS VERUS, whom HADRIAN pleasantly and deservedly called Verissimus. After this, his Disorder became so troublesome, that he earnestly wished for Death, and called for Poison or a Sword in vain. He had before put Servianus, and his Grandson Fuscus, who was also his own great Nephew, to Death, though the one was ninety Years of Age, and the other but eighteen: and the Pains of his Disease now rendered him more cruel; fo that many illustrious Persons were ordered to be executed, who were in general faved by the more merciful Disposition of his Successor. At length, by an improper Regimen, he hastened his own End, having lived feventy-two Years, five Months, and feventeen Days, and reigned twenty-one Years and eleven Months. The Senate so deeply regretted the Loss of their worthy Members, who had been cut Vol. II. off off by him, that it was with great Difficulty they consented at last to his Deisication, at the earnest Request of Antoninus. This Ceremony is im-XXXIII. 12. plied on one of his Reverses, which represents him holding the Sun and Moon in his Hands, as being, in the Language of Medallists, sideribus receptus, or taken up to Heaven, the starry Mansions, and the Seat of Gods: the Legend ÆTERNITAS AVGVSTI. S C.

62

LADRIAN.

203

> His Person was tall and genteel, and his Hair curled. He was the first of the Roman Emperors that wore his Beard long, to conceal some natural Escars in his Face. His Habit of Body was robust; but nothing was ever so various as his Disposition, austere and joyous by Turns, gay and grave, lascivious and cold, sparing and liberal, a most artful Disfembler, naturally cruel, yet merciful. He gave every Thing to his Friends, yet listened to every Whisper against them; so that at last he held them, even those whom he loved best, as his Enemies. It is strange that, though he was himself a good Orator and Poet, and versed in all the Arts and Sciences, he looked upon the Professors of them with Derision and Contempt, yet rewarded them at the same Time. His dying Verses, translated by Mr. Pope, are well known. He was greatly beloved by the Soldiers, for his Care of and Liberality towards wards them. He officiated as Pontifex Maximus, which few Emperors had done, notwithstanding the Title, and very diligently patronized the Roman Rites. His Memory was incredible; for he could give the Names of all the Veterans that he had ever discharged; and his Faculties so strong, that he would read, distate, give Audience, and converse with his Friends, at the same Time. And upon the whole it may be justly said, that whatever were his Failings, they were greatly alleviated by his Sedulity, Providence, Magnissicence, and Skill. His last Settlement of the Succession upon Antononius, evidenced his cordial Regard for the Commonwealth, and was the richest Blessing that he could confer upon it.

MINOR PROPERTY STATE OF THE PROPERTY O

T. AURELIUS FULVIUS BOIONIUS ANTONINUS PIUS.

NTONINVS Pivs.

ANTONINUS was furnamed Prus, either for having faved the many eminent Persons, whom Hadrian, in the Torture of his Illness, had doomed to Death; or from the immense and insinite Honours which he paid to the Memory of his adopting Father; or for the extreme Care and Diligence with which he prevented his making away with himself; or for his own Clemency and extraordinary Sweetness of Disposition; or it may be for all these concurring Reasons, as well as his Strictness in the Exercise of religious Duties; for he performed no Sacrifice by a Substitute, while himself himself was in Health. But there is a Medal of Antoninvs him, struck in or after his third Consulate, which Pl.XXXIII.13. feems to hint that his filial Piety had laid the Foundation of this amiable Title. It bears his Head plain, and is well executed, with ANTO-NINVS AVG PIVS PP; and on the Reverse, Æneas carrying his Father on his Shoulders, and leading Julus in his Hand: the Legend TR P COS III. He had been the last Year, on his Adoption, invested with the Proconsular and Tribunitial Authority, and was now the fecond Time Conful, when his first Care was to confirm the Acts of his Predecessor. We therefore see the FIDES PVB- PLXXXIII.14. LICA on the Reverse of one of his earliest Coins, with the Legend TR POT COS II S C. This Figure has been already taken Notice of in the Reign of DOMITIAN. Another ascribes his Impe- PLXXXIII.16. rial Power, which is symbolized by the Thunder and Lightning of Jupiter, TO THE PROVIDENCE OF THE Gods; and another, intimating also his Esta- PLXXXIII.16. blishment, has his laureate Head, with ANTONI-NVS AVG PIVS PP, and the Wolf on the Reverse, giving suck to Romulus and Remus, with TR POT COS S C. This Surname of PIVS, as it feemed to draw the Veneration of the People, was: from him assumed by the succeeding Emperous, with the Addition of FELIX, which two Words.

Pivs.

ANTONINVS are expressed on their Coins by the Initials P.F. His Regard for all good Men, and particularly for the Senate, was most cordial, and that illustrious Body looked up to him as the Restorer of Rome.

Pl. XXXIII.17. On the Coins decreed to him, he is represented as their Good Genius; or tutelary Deity, like Apollo, with the Lyre and Patera; or as the Genius of the Senate particularly, with the Sceptre in one Hand, 21. XXXIII. 18. and Ears of Corn, the Emblem of their Plenty, in the other. For whereas, by a Law of CALIGULA, a Moiety of their Estates devolved to the Emperor on their Demise, Antoninus granted them the Power of disposing of the Whole as themselves should judge proper. With a View to him as their Restorer, they have marked out upon his Pl. XXXIII.19. other Coins the Circumstances of their Origin; as the Sow, with her numerous Brood, having just farrowed beneath the Oaks. The Story is told by Dionyfius of Halicarnassus, and by Virgil in the eighth Æneid.

Litoreis ingens inventa sub ilicibus sus, Triginta capitum fatus enixa, jacebit; Alba, solo recubans, albi circum ubera nati. Hic locus urbis erit, requies ea certa laborum: Ex quo ter denis urbem redeuntibus annis Ascanius clari condet cognominis Albam.

Which line the Shore, beneath yon Oaks reclin'd, A Sow, with thrice ten young ones, shalt thou find,

All white and spotless, stretch'd upon the Soil;
That be the City's Spot, the Rest from Toil:
Hence, in the Space of thrice ten circling Years,
Fair Alba there, of fairest Name, appears,
And the sam'd City young Ascanius rears.

ANTONINYS Pays.

One of them contains the facred Shields of Numa, PLXXXIII.20. with the Legend IMPERATOR II. S.C.; and underneath ANCILIA. Another has the Genius PLXXXIV. 1. of the River, leaning on his Urn, near the Stump of a Tree, with a Reed in one Hand, and a Sceptre in the other: the Word TIBERIS over it; and in the Exergue S.C. And another shews Mars, dis-PLXXXIV. 2. tinguished by his Attributes, descending naked upon Ilia, for the Production of Romulus.

Mars videt banc, visamque cupit, potiturque cupitâ, Et sua divinâ surta fefellit ope. Ovid. Past.

Mars with a Lover's Eye her Charms furvey'd, And, by his Pow'r divine, deceiv'd the sleeping Maid.

The Assessment of the Duty usually paid on these Promotions, and called the Coronary Gold, he remitted entirely to Italy, and one Half of it to the Provinces. He made it his Business, indeed, to moderate all Impositions upon the People, and render them as light as was consistent with the Exigences of Government. To this End he spared not his own Fortune, which was immense, while he husbanded the Imperial Revenues, so as to leave the public

ANTONINVS public Treasury sull, and his private Coffers empty. Those, who had been preferred by HADRIAN, he continued in their Places, so long as they behaved well; infomuch that some Governors presided in their Provinces for seven, others for nine Years together; some Officers at home continued such for twenty Years, and some for their whole Lives. But all these were of exemplary Behaviour in their respective Departments; nor did he elevate any, whose Characters would not bear the nicest Scrutiny. In the next Year he was a third Time Conful, and had for his Colleague his adopted Son M. AURELIUS. Pl. XXXIV. 3. This is evident from the Denarius, which bears on one Side his laureate Head, inscribed ANTONINVS AVG PIVS PP TR P COS III; and on the other the plain youthful Head of AVRELIVS. CAESAR. AVG. P II. F. COS. Between this and his fourth Consulate many important Events occurred; which are mentioned in no Order, or not at all, by the Historians. Such is that of a King appointed by him over the Quadi, in Germany, which is celebrated on Pl. XXXIV. 4. the Reverse before us, the Legend of which is REX QVADIS DATVS S C. In this Interval the Brigantes in Britain revolting, fell upon the Genunians, who were Allies of the Romans; but were defeated by Lollius Urbicus, with the Loss of a great Part of their Country. Hence we see the

Genius

Genius of the Island, seated upon a Rock, and ANTONINVS weeping, with her Shield laid by, and named BRI-TANNIA, in the Emperor's third Consulate. The Pl. XXXIV. 5. fame Commander made a new Wall of Earth, by which he removed the Barbarians still farther northward. For this Antoninus, on another Reverse, Pl. XXXIV. & is stiled IMPERATOR II, a Victory alate holding a Shield, inscribed BRITAN. Several other Wars were finished by his Legates; none of which were begun by himself, though many were prevented by his Virtue and Authority. Hence the Reverse Pl. XXXIV. 7of a like Victory driving a quadrigated Car, and in the Exergue VICTORIA AVG. His Care of the military Establishment for these Services is intimated by the Adlocution in the Reverse here copied, Pl. XXXIV. 8. with IMP VI COS III; and in the Exergue PRO-VIDENTIA AVG: and by another, exhibiting a Pl. XXXIV. 9. Soldier on the March, with all his Furniture on his Shoulder, and a double-armed Spear in his Hand, with TR POT COS III S C. A Medal, struck Pl. XXXIV. 10. about the same Time, exhibits a fine Description of Italy, taken Notice of by Mr. Addison. It is fymbolized under the Figure of a Woman, "having " a Cornucopiæ in her Hand to denote her Fruit-"fulness:

Magna parens frugum Saturnia tellus. VIRG.

&quot; Great Parent of the Fruits, Saturnian Land.

Antoninvs Pivs.

- " and a Crown of Towers on her Head to figure
- " out the many Towns and Cities that stand upon
- " her. Lucan has given her the like Ornament:
  - " Turrigero canos effundens vertice crines.
  - " A tow'ry Crown her hoary Temples bound.
- 66 She holds a Sceptre in her other Hand, and fits
- on a Globe of the Heavens, to shew that she is
- the Sovereign of Nations, and that all the In-
- " fluences of the Sun and Stars fall on her Domi-
- es nions.
  - "Orbem jam totum victor Romanus habebat,
  - " Quâ mare, quâ tellus, quâ sidus currit utrumque. PETRON.
  - "Now Rome fole Empress reigns from Pole to Pole,
  - " Wherever Earth extends or Oceans roll."

The Legend is TR POT COS III: in the Area S C.; and underneath ITALIA.

As M. Aurelius had shared the Emperor's third Consulate, so was he intended to be the Partner of his fourth. This Designation is expressed on a Sil-PLXXXIV.11. ver Medal, which bears the Head of him, with AVRELIUS CAESAR COS II D, Consul iterum designatus. The same Reading is on the Reverse, with the Figure of PEACE, having a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and an Olive-Branch in the other. Therefore, in the seventh Year of his Reign, Anto-

NINUS.

NINUS PIUS, for the fourth Time, was Conful with ANTONINUS M. Aurelius, who now enjoyed that Honour the . fecond Time. He had married ANNIA GALERIA FAUSTINA, the Aunt of M. Aurelius, who had been declared Augusta: With this Title she appears upon her Medals of Gold, having a beautiful Pl.XXXIV.12. Aspect, and the Hair braided round upon the Crown of her Head; whereas that of the younger FAUSTINA is tied behind. The Inscription is FAUS-TINA AUG. ANTONINI AUG. P. P. The Reverse is a Concord feated, holding a Patera in her right Hand; the Legend being CONCORDIA AVG. Behind the Figure of the Goddess stands the Statue of her Daughter upon a Pedestal, as the Pledge of their Agreement. She was very liberal in the Education of female Children. For which Virtue the Piety of the Emperor is also celebrated on two of his Reverses: on one of which this Piety is im- Pl.XXXIV.13. pressed, with a Globe in one Hand, a Child in the other, and two more underneath: and on the other, with two in Arms, and a like Number be- PLXXXIV.14. low. The Legend of both is the fame, PIETATI AVG. COS. IIII. S C. The Emperor also continued the Education of the Girls, in Honour of the Empress, calling them the Faustinian Maidens. By her he had four Children, two of each Sex. Of the two Sons, History is filent. But we have the Head

Pl.XXXIV.15.

ANTONINUS of one of them on a Reverse of his Mother, with Μ. ΓΑΛΕΡΙΟΣ ΑΝΤΟΝΙΝΟΣ ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡΟΣ ΑΝ-TONINOY YIOZ. Marcus Galerius Antoninus Imperatoris Antonini Filius. This was first published by Tristan, from whom Patin copied it. But there is also one in the Pembrokian Collection. Both the Sons undoubtedly died young. One of the Daughters was given in Marriage to Syllanus, but lived not long. And the other, named Annia Faustina, was now married to M. Aurelius. The Empress FAUSTINA the Elder died in the third Year of her Husband's Reign. Her dissolute Life had occasioned great Sorrow to the good Emperor. Notwithstanding which, she was deified by him, honoured with a Temple and Priests, and with Statues of Gold and Silver. Many are the Testimonies of her Con-PLXXXIV.16. fecration. On her Medals of Gold she is called DIVA FAVSTINA, having on the Reverse of some a Ceres veiled, with two Torches, and the Title Pl. XXXIV.17. AVGVSTA: on others, a Piety standing before an Altar, who is termed the PIETAS AVGustæ: on Pl. XXXIV.18. others, an Eternity veiled, holding a Patera in the right Hand, and in the left an Helm, placed on a Cælestial Globe; which is faying, that she had exchanged her earthly for an heavenly Diadem, which the would enjoy for ever. But the Reader will find this Eternity differently described on Coins, though:

though the feveral Defigns have the fame Intention. Antoninus On a fine Medal of Bronze, of the first Magnitude, she is veiled, with DIVA AVGVSTA FAVSTINA; the Reverse of which exhibits the Goddess Cybele, crowned as usual, and enthroned, with a Patera resting upon the Knee, and a Lion on each Side, with the Legend MATRI DEVM SALVTARI. Again, she is represented as Ceres, with Ears of Pl.XXXIV.20. Corn, seated on her Car, and drawn by two Elephants. Another has a different Eternity, with a Pl.XXXIV.21. Phænix in her Hand, and the Word AETERNITAS. S C: while a fourth gives us the magnificent Pl.XXXIV.22. Temple erected to her, with her Statue in the Center of it, and the Legend AETERNITAS. S C.

This Marriage was celebrated with general Joy:
On one of the Emperor's Reverses in Gold we see Pl. XXXV. 12.
the elder Faustina, as Geres, with Ears of Corn, endowing her Daughter with the Empire of the World, the Globe of which she has put into her Hand. This is suitable to the Answer, which
M. Aurelius afterwards gave to those who advised him to repudiate her. "If so," said he, "we must "return her Fortune, and that is the Roman Em"pire." The Legend is LAETITIA COS IIII.
He gave a Congiary to the People, and a Donative to the Soldiers, on this Occasion. This Generosity

ANTONINVS is recorded on several Coins, by a semale Figure, distinguished as LIBERALITAS, having the Lap gathered, and holding in one Hand a Banner, marked VI, for the Soldiery, intimating the Number of Pieces of Gold given to each; and in the other a Tessera, marked: signifying the Congii of Corn distributed per Head to the People. Others

PIVS.

Pl. XXXV. 3. Shew her standing by the Side of the Emperor, with her Cornucopiæ, while he from his Throne is making the Distribution: the Legend LIBERALITAS IIII. S.C. Public Spectacles were exhibited in the Amphitheatre, in which Elephants, Rhinoceroses, Crocodiles, River-Horses, Tygers, and strange Beasts from all Parts of the World, were let loose, and an hundred Lions at once. This Sort of Generosity is properly distinguished as Muniscence, from its Ety-

Pl. XXXV. 4. mology; and is also represented as a Goddess, with a Sceptre in one Hand, and a Patera in the other, having a Tyger standing by her, with MVNIFI-CENTIA AVG. S.C. COS IIII. On a different

Pl. XXXV. 5. Coin, we have the fame Legend, with the Figure of an Elephant only.

Soon after this the Moors rebelled, but were driven to a Corner of Mount Atlas; and many Nations, the Jews particularly, were defeated by his Governors and Lieutenants. Rebellions were fuppressed also in Egypt and Achaia. On which of these these Accounts we see him with a Torch in his Antonin's Hand, in his quadrigated triumphal Car, with COS. IIII S C in the Exergue, cannot be faid. The same Pl. XXXV. 6. Uncertainty remains, with respect to the triumphal Arch, which appears on one of his Medals, the Pl. XXXV. 7. Columns of which are crowned with each a Victory; at the Entrance of which is placed his Statue, with the Roman Eagle in his Hand, having the Legend. COS IIII S C. But a celebrated Victory there was, as is further evident from another Coin in Bronze, on which this Deity herself is driving the quadrigated Car, and around her TR. POT. COS IIII: in the Exergue of which we read VICToria AVGusti. S C. We have also on one Reverse a Pl. XXXV. 8. peculiar Fortune, representing this fickle Goddess as constant and obsequious to him in all Things. She is decorated with the Cornucopiæ; and has in her right Hand the Helm and Prow of a Ship, intimating the past Success and prosperous Return of the Legions. She is here entitled the FORTVNA. OPSEQUENS; and has in the Exergue the Senatorian Sanction S C. The Orthography of that Age in the Epithet is remarkable, and appears also in Gruter's Inscriptions. In the ninth Year of his Reign, he invested his Son-in-law with the Tribunitial Power, whose Morals were most engaging, and whose Fitness for Government

Prvs.

Antoning's Government was most conspicuous. And the same Year, M. Aurelius had a Daughter born to him, who was named Lucilla; and in Process of Time became the Wife of L. VERUS. FAUSTINA brought him feveral other Daughters afterwards, and five Sons, the two eldest of whom, Commodus and ANTONINUS GEMINUS, were Twins. These two last accordingly, inferted each in his Cornucopiæ, form Pl. XXXV. 9. one of the Reverses of Antoninus in Bronze, of the first Magnitude, with the Legend TEMPORVM FELICITAS, and S C in the Area.

שפינדון מפרי

In his fourteenth Year, we find fuch Peace and Plenty reigning, as to give Occasion for the striking Pl. XXXV. 10. of a new female Figure on one of his Denarii; who stands in a comely Attitude, and decently arrayed, with Ears of Corn in the left Hand, and resting the right upon the Helm of Government: under-2 neath she is entitled TRANQuillitas; and round the Verge is TR POT. XIIII. COS IIII. It would have spoken a Sort of Insensibility in them, if the Christians had not taken Advantage of this calm Interval, and excellent Disposition of the Emperor, to bring their Cause before him. Therefore Justin, who afterwards received a Surname from his Martyrdom, presented his Apology for them. This was graciously received, and procured a general Letter in their Favour, which suspended the Rage of Persecution for some Time. His Goodness and ANTONINVS Vigilance were fuch as repaired, in less Time than can be well imagined, the Damages sustained by those distressful Events which happened in his Reign. So that an Inundation of the Tiber; a Fire, which confumed 340 Houses at Rome; a Scarcity there of Wine, Oil, and Corn; the Fall of the Circus; an Earthquake, which destroyed several Towns in Afia, and in the Island of Rhodes; with the Conflagrations; which laid in Ashes the best Part of the Cities of Antioch, Narbonne, and the Forum of Carthage; seem to have fallen out rather for the Illustration of his unbounded Generosity, and paternal Tenderness, than for the Punishment of the Sufferers. Hence were Coins struck in Honour of Pl. XXXV. 11. him by the Rhodians, bearing the Head of their Colossus, with the Word PODION; and by the Antiochians, with the Figure of their God Lunus. Pl. XXXV. 12. For the Ancients had their masculine as well asfemale Moon. Behind his Shoulders we fee the Crescent for his Attribute. And as this Deity was supposed to preside over Child-bearing, a Cock is placed at his Feet; which Animal was thought to facilitate it. In one Hand he bears a Wand, as the Enfign of his Divinity; and in the other a Victory, in Honour of the Emperor. In the Legend he is called MENSIS, the Name, as Pa-VOL. II. tin Aa ANTONINVS tin alledges, by which Strabo makes Mention of Pivs. him.

His public Works were many. For he finished the Mausoleum of Hadrian, restored the Amphitheatre, the Pons sublicius, the Pharos, the Havens of Cajeta and Terracina, the Baths of Ostia, the Aquæduct of Antium, and the Temple of Juno Sispita at Lanuvium. He erected the Græcostadium, or Hotel for the Ambassadors of Greece; a magnificent Temple to his Predecessor; another to his Wife Faustina, which appears upon the Coins struck to her Memory, with the Legend AETER-

Pl. XXXV. 13. NITAS; another to the Fortunate Venus, occasioned probably by the happy Marriage of his Daughter, Pl. XXXV. 14. inscribed VENERI FELICI. S C; and another to the Divinity of the City, inscribed ROMAE AETERNAE.

The Wisdom of his Government was held in such Admiration by the barbarous Nations, that they laid aside their Ferocity, and submitted their Differences to his Arbitration. This is justly celebrated on a Greek Medal, which pays the highest Compliment to his Reign. It exhibits his Head plain, with the Inscription ATTOKPATWP Kaisap AIAios AAPiavos ANTWNINOC CEBasos, Imperator Casar

Pl. XXXV. 15. Ælius Adrianus Antoninus Augustus. The Reverse is Orpheus, crowned with Laurel, and taming the wild wild Beafts by the Power of his Harmony. The Antoninvs Bard is here, as the Poet has placed him; of Liver of Crine and Traile Concilio medius, turbæ volucrumque, sedebat. — feated in the Midst, among The Beafts and Birds, that liften'd to his Song?

The natural Enmity of the feveral Animals is sufpended, and they are all Attention.

> Quondam funera Conjugis Vates Threicius gemens, Postquam flebilibus modis Sylvas currere mobiles, Amnes stare coegerat, Junxitque intrépidum latus, Sævis Cerva leonibus, Nec visum timuit lepus Jam'cantu placidum canem. Boethius.

When once the widow'd Bard of Thrace With folemn Airs his hapless Case Sweetly bewail'd, the list'ning Grove, Enchanted with his Strains, could move; The liquid Floods forgat to flow, Such was the charmful Power of Woe! The spotted Hind enjoy'd the Song, Fearless her brinded Foes among; And Hares, attentive to the Sound, Sat dauntless by the placid Hound.

Mild and applauded as his Government was, all were not contented with it. For we read of one Attilius A a 2

ANTONINUS Attilius Tatianus proscribed for Treason by the Senate; the Emperor forbidding all Enquiry after his Accomplices, and shewing fignal Grace and Favour to his Son: and of Priscian, under a like Charge, who put an End to his own Life. Nor was any Senator capitally punished under him. Even one, who was a Parricide by his own Confession, was only exposed upon a desert Island, as unfit to converse with Men. For he used to say, with Scipio, that "the Preservation of a Citizen was more to be se esteemed than the Destruction of a thousand Ene-" mies."

On the Completion of the twentieth Year of his Reign, we find the promised Vows and Sacrifices paid for his fecond Decennalia. This is expressed on PL XXXV. 16. his Coins, by a Priest veiled, and standing before the Altar, with a Patera in his Hand, and the Legend VOTA SOLuta DECennalia II. COS IIII. At the same Time fresh Vows were made for the like prosperous Term to ensue. These are expressed in Pl. XXXV. 17. the fame Manner, only the Legend here is VOTA SVSCEPTA DEC III, with the Addition of the S.C.

> All continued peaceable, nor do we meet with any Thing particular till his twenty-third Year, when M. Aurelius a third Time, and L. Verus for the second Time, were Consuls. And then it was that this most excellent Prince was seized with ANTONINVS his last Illness. On this, or some such like Occasion, Vows were made, and Sacrifices offered, for his Recovery by many People. An Inscription found upon a Column at Messina, quoted by Patin, evidences the Concern of that Island, of which it was one of the principal Cities; as the Coins before us do of the Pergamenians and Niceans. The first has the Figures of Æsculapius, and of his Daughter Hygeia or Sanity. She is employed in feeding a Serpent in a Patera: the Emblem of Light, and Health, and Prudence. Of the latter particularly, fays my Author, who was himself of the Faculty, " because the Practice of Physic is the Art " of catching the Instant of Healing, which, as it " fwiftly flies away, requires an acute and prudent " Man." The Origin of this Emblem he refers. to the Mosaic Serpent, raised in the Wilderness. Æsculapius has the same entwined upon his Rod. But in the Legend; Patin differs from Vaillant. PLXXXV, 187. For, according to the last, it should run thus: EIII ΣΤΡΑΤηγε ΠΟΛΛΙΩΝΟΣ ΠΕΡΓΑΜΗΝΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟρων, Sub Præfecto Pollione Pergamenorum Templi-Curatorum. The Niceans also, in the second, have im-Pl. XXXV. 19. pressed the same Figure of Hygeia, attired and employed in the same Manner. The last-quoted Medallist has described a Number of Coins, belonging

Pivs.

Antoninus to other Cities, with the like Impressions. But neither Vows nor Sacrifices could avert the Doom, which brought upon the Roman Empire a Loss which it long and bitterly deplored. For, after a short Illness, he died in the seventy-fourth Year of his Age, and twenty-third of his Reign. On his Death-bed he recommended M. Aurelius, and his Daughter, to all present, and ordered the Golden FORTUNE, usually kept in the Bed-chamber of the Emperor, to be removed to his. To the Tribune he gave the Word Æquanimity; and then turning round, as to rest, expired.

He was ingenious, of a noble Afpect and Deportment, placid, eloquent, learned, sober, chaste; fond of Agriculture, Hunting, and Fishing; chearful and liberal; and all this with Measure, and without Oftentation. His Person was tall and comely, his Voice deep and fonorous, yet pleafant. At his Table was Opulence without Reprehension, and Frugality without Meanness. He loved not State, but lived as when a private Person; nor made any Journies, except to his own Lands in the Campania, saying, that "the Train of the "Prince, however moderate, was too burdensome "to the People." Shedding of Blood was his Aversion; and he might well be compared to Numa, whose Felicity, Piety, Security, and Religion, he made made his own. He was confecrated by the mourn- ANTONINVS ful Senate, with the Applause of all good Men, and all fuch Honours were paid to his Memory, as had at any Time been conferred upon the best of Princes. In Testimony of which we have for one Reverse a large Altar, inscribed DIVO PIO PI. XXXV. 20. SC: for another, the Funeral Pile and Act of PLXXXVI. 1. Consecration; and for another, the Pillar and Statue erected DIVO PIO S C. I shall mention but one Reverse more, which was struck in the Pl. XXXVI. 2. twenty-second Year of his Tribunitial Power, and consequently towards the latter End of his Reign, which illustrates the general Felicity of it. It shews us four Persons, who seem delighted with their respective Employments, and represent the different Seasons of the Year. Three of them are naked; one having a Basket of Flowers upon his Head; a second, with his Reap-Hook ready for the Harvest; and a third, with the Fruits of the Vintage. These need no Clothing in the Sunshine of Italy. But the fourth is warmly covered up and Pl. XXXVI. 3. guarded against the Inclemency of Winter: in the Exergue, COS IIII.: The same Device however is better expressed upon a rich Medallion, which the Reader will meet with in the Reign of Com-MODUS.

MANAGE STEEL STEEL

a the boar the water that

MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS.

THE RESERVE THE PARTY OF THE PARTY.

M. AVRELIVS.

AURELIUS was a third Time Conful, and in the fifteenth Year of his tribunitial Power, at the Death of Antoninus Pius, when he was declared Emperor, to the entire Satisfaction of all Men. All the Roman Coins, which bear his Image, had been hitherto struck off in the Style of AVRELIVS CAESAR AUGusti PII Filius, or AN-TONINI AVG PII F, with the Head plain. But Pl. XXXVI. 4. now we see them with the Head laureated, as in his Denarius annexed, and the Inscription IMP M AV-REL ANTONINVS AVGustus: the Reverse attributes his Exaltation to the Divine Providence, by an emblematic Figure, with a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, and

and the Globe in the right, denominated PROVidentia M. AVRELIVS. DEORUM TR P XV COS III. He had from his Childhood applied himself, with unwearied Diligence, to the Study of Philosophy, of which he had practifed all the Austerities, and thereby weak-TYXXXXXXX ened his Constitution. The Doctrine of the Stoics, which took most with him, was the severest of all. In this he made most eminent Proficiency, of which his Writings, yet extant, are Testimony sufficient. He wore the Habit of one, and is commonly distinguished by the Name of Antoninus the Philosopher. He embraced however the Profession, without the Vanity of it, and well understood one of its leading Principles, the Knowledge of himself. Conscious, therefore, of his own Infirmities, immediately on his Accession, he took L. Verus, his Colleague in the Consulate, to be his Partner in Empire also, as being young, robust, and fitter for military Service; to whom he contracted his Daughter LVCILLA. On this Account we find a Re-O JVEVE M verse in Gold of Verus, with the two Emperors Pl. XXXVI. 5. joining Hands, infcribed CONCORDIAE AV-GVSTORum TR P COS II. The same is in Bronze also, and of the first Magnitude. We have also the Figure of the Lady impressed on Gold, Pl. XXXVI. 6 with LVCILLAE AVGusta ANTONINI AVGusti Filiæ: the Reverse of which is a VENVS, with Pl. XXXVI. 7. Vol. II. Bb the

Pl. XXXVI. 9.

M. AVRELIVS. the Wand or Hasta pura in one Hand, and the Golden Apple or Globe in the other. We have also the Head of the present Empress on the same precious Metal, with FAVSTINAE AVG PII AVG

Pl. XXXVI. 8. FIL, shewing the same Venus on the Reverse, except that, instead of the Golden Apple or Globe, she holds in her right Hand the connecting Band, or Zone, which the Husband only was to loose.

> Felices ter et amplius Quos irrupta tenet Copula.

Thrice happy they, whom Love in pure Delights With his unbroken Band unites!

cal to Pan low at the plinted and specified

But this may refer either to her own or her Daughter's Marriage; though neither were eminent for their Fidelity. The Legend is LAETITIAE PVBLICAE.

Thus Rome, for the first Time, saw two Emperors jointly reigning. On feveral Coins, therefore, we observe the Heads of both, as on that before us. laureated: both have the Title of AVGVSTVS; and both have the Imperial Eagle, the Enfign of Majesty and Power, standing by them. This particular Coin was struck by the Colony of Berythus, in Phænicia, to record the mutual Agreement and fraternal Dominion of the two Emperors. Indeed their Union, their Authority, their Wealth, and an unexampled Generosity, were necessary towards M. Avreniva. their obviating the Calamities of the Times. For in the very next Year an Inundation of the Tiber did infinite Damage to the City, and the Country round about. A Famine enfued. Earthquakes were felt in divers Places. The Air was rendered unwholesome. The Parthian made open War upon them; having already destroyed the Army at Elegia in Armenia. A War in Britain also was unavoidable; and the Catti now broke into the Province in Germany. The natural Evils were mitigated, as much as might be, by a feafonable Supply of Grain, and an immediate Reparation of Damages. Against the Britons, Calpurnius Agricola was fent to command, and was attended with great and speedy Success. For on a Medal of this very Year, I find around the laureate Head of the elder Emperor, M AVREL ANTONINVS PIVS AVG BRITannicus. On the Reverse is the Circus, which was now restored by him, with PM TR P XVI IMP II: in the Exergue COS IIII PP. S C. But in the Exergue the Copier of the Medal has been guilty of an Error, by adding a Figure extraordinary to the COS. Such Errors are not infrequent in the Copiers of Coins; and fometimes excuseable, from the strange Alterations which the Injuries of Time have made upon the Coins themselves. This Emperor was never Conful B b 2 a fourth

Pl. XXXVI.

Pl. XXXVI.

M. Avrelivs. a fourth Time. A more pardonable Mistake occurs in another, which bears the same Head and Infcription, and was probably struck at the Beginning of the ensuing Year. The Reverse is a Victory alate, inscribing the Success upon a Trophy, near which stands a disconsolate Briton, with a Child upon the Ground: the Legend, as my Author gives it, is VICTORIA PM TR P XIIII COS III PP. S C. The Mistake is here in the Figures after the TR P, which, I conceive, were originally XVII; but the Bottom or Angle of the V being worn away, was taken by the Transcriber for !!. For in the fourteenth Year of his Tribunitial Power, he had not been three Times Conful. These Medals demonstrate that Aurelius had already assumed the Title of Father of his Country, contrary to the Affertion of Historians, who say that he declined it till the Return of Verus from the Parthian War. Aufidius Victorinus was to command against the Catti, and restrain the Enemy till the Troubles in the East should subside, and allow more Leisure for their effectual Chastisement. But against the Parthian it was judged necessary that one of the Emperors at least should march in Person.

> L. Verus therefore fet out for this Service, whom M. Aurelius attended as far as Capua. He had fcarce left him, when the other was taken ill at Canufium.

Canufium. Vows were made in the Senate for his M. AVRELIVS. Recovery; and Coins struck, with a Serpent, the Emblem of Health, rifing from an Altar, whom Hygeia, the Daughter of Æsculapius, is feeding from her Patera: the Legend SALVTI AVGVSTORum TR P XVII. COS III. This Medal of AURELIUS is in Gold, who flew to visit him. Those Vows were paid when he came back, and it was known that VERUS had failed. This latter, now finding himself at a convenient Distance, and no longer awed by the superior Virtue of Aurelius, gave himself up to Luxury and Debauchery, so that it was late in the Season before he arrived at Antioch. His March, and the Date of it, is described on the Coin before us, by a Representation of him on Horseback, with PROFECTIO AVG TR P III. S C. Having here collected his Forces, he committed them to the Care of his Lieutenants, whom he fent against the Enemy; but stayed behind himself, immersed in the most shameful Pleasures. But those brave Officers, it is probable, performed more real Services, because they were not interrupted by his Presence. Statius Priscus drove the Enemy out of Armenia, and made himself Master of all the strong Places in it: and Martius Verus, who succeeded him in that Charge, prevailed fo far as to oblige them to receive Sohemus for their King, by

Pl. XXXVI.

PI. XXXVI. 13.

the:

M. AVRELIVS.

the Appoinment of L. Verus, who at the same Time affumed the Surname of ARMENIACVS, and was faluted IMPERATOR a fecond Time. All this appears upon fome curious Medals, which were struck of him, both in Gold and Bronze. As they vary in some Respects, it may not be amiss to give both. The former have his laureate Head very fair, with L. VERVS AVG ARMENIACVS. On the Reverse is VERUS enthroned, attended by two of his Officers, and the destined Monarch standing before him: around the Verge TR P IIII IMP II COS II: in the Exergue REX ARMENiis DATus. The latter also have his laureate Head very fair, inscribed L AVRELius VERVS AVGustus AR-MEN will. On the Reverse he has three Attendants, and the King before him: around the Verge REX ARMENIIS DATVS IMP II TR P IIII COS II: and in the Exergue S C. On another of his Reverses, an Armenian Captive sits upon an Heap of Arms, at the Foot of a Trophy, and underneath ARMEN: the Legend as the first, with SC. On another, he is on Horseback, bearing down his Enemy; with the fame Legend. On his Denarius he appears also with the Title of ARMENIACVS, though with the Head plain; the Reverse of which shews him in the military Habit, armed with an

Helmet, resting his left Hand upon his Shield, and

having

Pl. XXXVI.

Pl. XXXVI.

Pl. XXXVI.

Pl. XXXVI.

Pl. XXXVI.

having the Hasta pura in his right: the Legend the M. AVRELIVS. fame as on the first. The like Title was conferred by the Senate on M. Aurelius, who had at least an equal Right to it.

Meantime Avidius Cassius, who commanded against the Parthians in Syria, defeated Vologefes, though at the Head of a very numerous Army, and made himself Master of Seleucia and Ctesiphon. The former he facked, and burned; and the Palace of the Parthian Monarchs in the latter he levelled with the Ground. But on his Retreat he lost a great Number of Men-by-Sickness and Famine: this Success produced several Medals. On one Reverse of Pl. XXXVI. VERUS we have no fewer than three Trophies, with TR P VII IMP II COS II; and in the Area, S.C. On another we see a Parthian seated upon Arms, at the Foot of a Trophy, with his Hands bound behind him, and an Altar before him, with TR PLXXXVI. POT VI IMP III COS II. S C. The Heap of Arms and the Altar intimate the same Thing, namely, the Peace that enfued. And it may not: be amiss to remark, with Mr. Addison, once for all, that on old Coins we often fee an Emperor, a Victory, the City of Rome, or a Slave fitting on an Heap of Arms, which always marks out the: Peace that arose from such an Action as gave Occasion to the Medal. The Captive here answers to

the

EJ-

M. AVRELIVS. the Figure of military Fury in the Temple of Fanus.

> - Furor impius intus Sæva sedens super arma, et centum vinctus abenis Post tergum nodis.— VIRG.

---- Within remains Imprison'd Fury, bound in brazen Chains; High on a Trophy, rais'd of useless Arms, He fits. DRYDEN.

Pl.XXXVII. 1. On another of Aurelius, a Shield is fixed against a Tree, on which a Victory alate, with a Palm-Branch in one Hand, has inscribed VICtoria PARthica: the Legend is TR POT XX IMP IIII COS III S C.

e Million million lessen of the Breinis

In the Midst of this War, M. Aurelius sent his Daughter Lucilla, with an honourable Retinue, into Asia, for the Completion of her Marriage with L. VERUS, to whom she had been before con-Pl. XXXVII. 2. tracted. On this Occasion we have her Denarius, with her Head, inscribed LVCILLAE AVGusta ANTONINI AVG F. and a Concord on the Reverse, seated, with a Patera in her Hand. This Lady is faid to have been a Dæmoniac, till difpossessed by Abertius, the Bishop of Hierapolis; to which City the two Emperors were great Benefac-Pl.XXXVII. 3. tors on that Account. On one of her Reverses we have a PIETAS standing before the Altar, veiled, and in a religious Attitude, with S C: on another, M. AVRELIUS. a VESTA standing, but depicted in a very unusual PI.XXXVII. 4. Manner, with a Bill or Reap-Hook in the Hand, having an Altar with the eternal Fire burning before her. It appears from other Coins that she had Children by VERUS; for a very noble one in Bronze, of the first Size, has a very fair Busto of her, with LVCILLA AVG ANTONINI AVG, with a Juno Lucina seated on the Reverse, bearing a new- Pl. XXXVII. 5. born Child upon her left Arm, and holding up a. Lilly, the Symbol of Hope, in her right Hand. The Legend is IVNONI LVCINAE; and in the Exergue, S C. And we have one Reverse, struck by Authority of the Senate also, whereon she is represented as the Mother of three Children, having one in her Arms, and two standing near her, with the Legend FECVNDITAS.

and

The Storm being over in the East, Verus rewarded and confirmed the neighbouring Kings, whose Fidelity he was assured of: amongst these we find on some of his Reverses, as well as on Pl.XXXVII.6. others of M. Aurelius, the Figure of Abgarus, King of Ofrohene, crowned with the Eastern Tiara, with the Legend BACIAEYC ABFAPOC, Rex Abgarus; and on one of his Denarii, Mention is made Pl.XXXVII.7. of one Mannus, an Arabian King, devoted to the Romans. For the Legend is BACIAEYC MANNOC Vol. II.

M. AVRELIVS. ΦΙΛΟΡΩΜΑΙΟC, Rex Mannus Romanorum Amicus. His next Care was to enrich his Friends with Governments, of whom Avidius Cassius was the most deserving. Him he left Commander in Chief of all the Forces in Afra. On his Return to Rome he. defired to share his Honours with M. AURELIUS. A Triumph was therefore decreed to both Emperors jointly; whose Heads are therefore adverse PLXXXVII. 8. on the same Coins, with AVTOKPATOPON CE-BACTON, Imperatorum Augustorum; and a Victory alate, with a Wreath and Palm-Branch, on the Reverse: and each of them was honoured with the additional Surname of Parthicus Maximus. This is Pl. XXXVII.9. evident, from a most beatiful Medallion of M. Au-RELIUS, inscribed Marcus ANTONINVS AVGustus ARMeniacus PARTHicus MAXimus TRibunitia Potestate XXIII. The Reverse is also a Victory alate, resting the left Arm upon a standing Column, having a Palm-Branch in the same Hand, and a Wreath in the other: the Legend COS III.

> But while VERUS was in the East, Victorinus must have gained very fignal Advantages over the Germans, notwithstanding the Silence of Historians; fince we find the good Emperor at Home affuming, even in the nineteenth Year of his Tribunitial Power, which was but the fifth of his Reign, the Title of Germanicus. This appears from an old Inscription, quoted

quoted by Goltzius, in his Titles, which runs thus: M. Avrelivs.
IMP. CAESARI. M. AVREL. ANTONINO.
PIO. FELICI. AVG. PARTHICO MAX. BRIT.
MAX. GERMAN. MAX. PONTIF. MAX. TRIB.
POT. XVIIII. COS. III. IMP. III. PP. PROCOS.
NVMINI MAIESTATIQVE EIVS. Yet upon his Coins we meet not with it till the twenty-ninth Year of his Tribunitial Power. Further Preparations, however, for the happy Conclusion, were most certainly at this Time made; since M. AuRELIUS appears on one of his Reverses, supporting himself the Imperial Eagle, with two Ensigns, on each Side of him; the Legend being TR POT
XIX IMP II COS III.

In an evil Hour did Verus arrive at Rome. For he brought the Plague with him from the East, which spread itself over the whole Roman World, and over all Nations which held Communication with it. To this were added Inundations, Earthquakes, and the most dreadful War that Rome had for several Ages been engaged in. The Insection made such Havock, that they were forced to carry out the Dead in Carts and other Vehicles; and the poorer Sort were interred at the public Charge. However, as the Marcomanni had taken the Field, and drawn to their Party all the neighbouring Kingdoms, as far as to Illyricum, and there was an immediate

Cc 2

196

M. AVRELIVS.

IO.

mediate Necessity for marching against them, notwithstanding the Pressure of the public Calamity, it was first judged proper to invest the two Sons of M. Aurelius, Commodus and Annius Verus, with the Title and Dignity of CESAR. As such they Pl. XXXVII. appear upon the Medal before us, where the eldest is distinguished by the Style of COMMODVS CAES. ANTONINI AVG. FIL. and the youngest by that of ANNIVS VERVS CAES. ANTONINI AVG. FIL.

In providing for this important War, the City was filled with Lustrations and Rites of every Kind and Country; and, what was peculiar to the Romans, the Lectisternia were practifed for seven Days together. On these Occasions an Entertainment was made for the Gods themselves, whose Statues were brought out and placed upon fumptuous Beds or Couches, as Guests, at Tables richly furnished, with each his Pulvinar or Pillow, on which he feemed to rest. In this Manner we see the Statue of FOR-TVNE fet out on the Reverse of one of M. Au-RELIUS's Coins. Of this Custom the Poet speaks, when he fays, Pl. XXXVII. II.

> - Nunc Saliaribus Ornare pulvinar Deorum Tempus erat dapibus, Sodoles. Hor.

Now be the Pillows of the Gods arrav'd With Pomp, and let their facred Feasts be stor'd With all the Dainties of a Salian Board.

M. AVRELIVS.

All Things being now ready, the two Emperors advaced to Aquileia together. The March and Expedition are recorded on two different Reverses of M. Aurelius, which shew this Emperor on Horseback, with his Spear in his Hand, and attended by a military Train: in the Exergue of the one is the Word PROFECTIO; of the other, EXPEDITIO AVG. S. C. Mr. Addison thought that he had found a Copy of the famous Equestrian Statue of this Emperor on a Reverse of Lucius VERUS, the Horse and Man in the Medal and the Statue being in the same Posture, and a Resemblance of Face, as he thought, to be distinguished: How far Fancy may have misled that excellent Author, I cannot fay; having never feen either of the Medallions which he speaks of in his Travels; p. 203. But Patin has given us a Coin of VERUS, with a Reverse, probably of the same Sort; the Legend of which is PROFECTIO AVG. TR. P III. But here there is certainly no Resemblance of Face; whereas in the former there is a real Likeness, as far as one may judge of such Profiles in Miniature. However that be, here their Alacrity and Proximity affected the Enemy with Dread. Some of them:

Pl. XXXVII. 12, 13.

M. Avrelivs. them retired beyond the Danube, and others sent deprecatory Ambassies: so that the Emperors returned to Rome for the Winter, though M. Au-RELIUS suspected that they meaned only to amuse and deceive him. And so it happened; for in the fucceeding Summer the War raged; and the Marcomans, affisted by the lazyges, the Quades, and Dacians, were routed; and M. Aurelius was faluted IMPERATOR for the third, as VERUS was for the fourth, Time. But this feemed only to exasperate the Foe, which made it necessary for the Emperors to return to Aquileia early in the Spring following. Yet the Violence of the Plague drove them homeward again; and VERUS died of an Apoplexy upon the Road, on their Return. M. Aurelius attended the Body to Rome, and interred it with great Solemnity. He even prevailed upon the Senate to deify the deceased; of which the Reverse before us is a Proof, which contains his Figure, drawn in a Car by four Elephants, with the Word CONSE-CRATIO. S.C. All the Good that can be faid of him is, that he had no Dissimulation or Cruelty; and was a kind Master to his Freedmen and Servants, who were the Ministers of his Vices. His Character in other Respects much resembling that of Caligula or Nego. He died in the ninth Year of his Tribunitial Power, and the fortieth of his M. AVRELIVS.

Age.

Some Advantages were gained over the Enemy, while Marcus was absent from the Army, sufficient to invest him with the Title of IMPERATOR for the fourth Time; though the next Campaign proved, upon the Whole, unfavourable to the Romans. For they were defeated with great Loss, and pursued by the victorious Enemy, even to the Gates of Aquileia. This filled all Italy with Consternation; infomuch that, the Troops being very much thinned with the Plague, it was judged necessary to admit Perfons of every Condition into the Army, and to engage a Body of German Mercenaries to affift them. But the Sinews of War were shrunk; and the Emperor would not hear of any further Burden upon the People in this Time of general Calamity. He therefore exposed to Sale all the rich Furniture of the Palace; not only the Pictures, Plate, and Jewels, but the very Robes of the Empress were fold. By which Means a fufficient Sum was obtained, and a formidable Army fet on foot. Before he marched at the Head of it, he disposed of his Daughter Lucilla once more in Marriage to Pompeianus, a young Equestrian, of most excellent Character. And about this Time 'tis probable that the Medals were struck, which represent FAUSTINA, loofely

M. AVRELIVS.

Pl. XXXVII.

loosely attired, as another Venus, endeavouring to withhold her Mars from the Toils and Dangers of the Field. The Legend is VENERI VICTRICI. S C. "This unluckily brings to Mind," fays Mr. Addison, "FAUSTINA'S Fondness for the Gla-"diator, and is therefore interpreted by many as " an hidden Piece of Satire. But, besides that " fuch a Thought was inconfistent with the Gra-"vity of a Senate, how can one imagine that the "Fathers would have dared to affront the Wife of "Aurelius, and the Mother of Commodus; or "that they could think of giving Offence to an " Empress, whom they afterwards deified, and to " an Emperor who was the Darling of the Army " and the People?" The Emperor now loft his second Son, Annius Verus, who died of an Abscess under the Ear, unskilfully managed. He now marched against the Enemy, and carried on a continual War for several Years against the Marcomanni, the Castobochi, the Quadi, the Iazyges of Sarmatia, and the Wandals, whom we now hear of for the first Time. Having gained a famous Victory, it was observed that many female Bodies lay dead in Arms. After the Defeat of the Marcomanni, he took the Surname of GERMANICUS; and this Success is celebrated on feveral Medals. On one we have VICToria GERManica IMP VI COS III S C. inclosed ridow!

Pl. XXXVII.

closed in a Wreath of Laurel. On another, a M. Avrelivs. Shield fixed against a Tree, and a Victory alate, in-Pl. XXXVII. 16. scribing upon it VIC GER; the rest of the Legend as on the other. A third has a Trophy, with a Pl. XXXVII. 17. Captive at the Foot of it; the Legend GERMANIA SVBACTA IMP VI COS III; and in the Area, S C. A fourth has a melancholy female Captive Pl. XXXVI.20, alone, fitting upon an Heap of Arms, with the fame Legend. A fifth has a Trophy with two Cap-Pl. XXXVII. tives at the Foot of it, and in the Exergue DE GERManis. And a fixth has the Rhine decumbent, Pl. XXXVII. 19. with a Reed in his left Hand, which he rests upon his effluent Urn, as he does the right upon the Prow of a Vessel, to signify the Navigation of his Stream.

Meantime an Infurrection happened in Egypt, at the Head of which was one Isidorus, said to be the strongest Man of his Time; but this, which rose to a considerable Height, was quelled at length by the Prudence of Avidius Cassius, who marched against the Insurgents. The Provinces of Spain were not less harrassed by the Moors, who invaded and plundered a great Part of the Country, but were at last expelled by the Commanders in those Parts.

Germany having been cleared of the Enemy, the Emperor now drove them from the two Pannonias, which they had feized. In the Course of this Suc-Vol. II.

D d cess

M. AVRELIVS.

cess he was very near being cut off with his whole Army by the Quadi. The Romans were inclosed amidst barren Mountains, and wonderfully preferved, when perishing with Disease and Wounds, and Heat and Thirst. A dreadful Tempest of Thunder, Lightning, and Hail, fell upon the Enemy, while a refreshing Shower of Rain revived their own fainting Spirits, and gave them Strength and Courage to refift and defeat the Multitudes that attacked them. This Deliverance is by some ascribed to the Power of Magic; by others, to the Piety of the Emperor; and by others, to the Prayers of the Christians in the twelfth Legion, called The Thundering Legion. The Thunder and Lightning, which is figured on one of his Reverses, struck by the Macedonians, is judged by feveral Writers to allude to this. The Legend is KOINON MAKEΔONΩN, Commune Macedonum. "He extorted by his Pray-" ers," fays Julius Capitolinus, " Thunder and "Lightning from Heaven against his Enemies, " and obtained Rain for his own People when pe-" rishing with Thirst."

Pl. XXXVIII.

Nam flammeus imber in hostem.

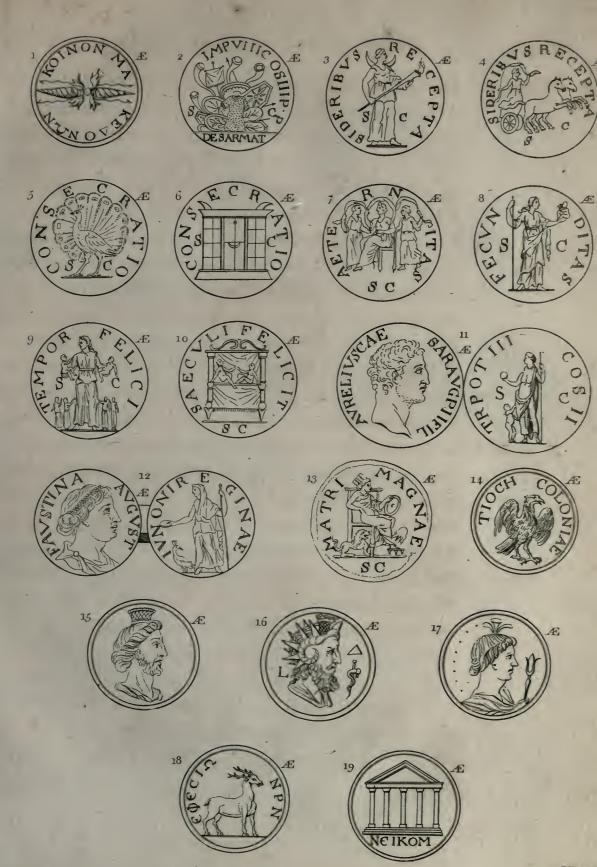

Decidit, hunc dorso trepidum sumante serebat.

Ambustus sonipes; hic tabescente solutus.

Subsedit galea, liquesastaque sulgure cuspis.

Canduit, et subitis fluxere vaporibus enses.

Tunc, contenta polo, mortalis nescia teli

.

M. AVRELIVS.

Pugna fuit. Chaldæa mago seu carmina ritu Armavere deos; seu, quod reor, omne Tonantis Obsequium Marci mores potuere mereri. CLAUDIAN.

For, with descending Show'rs of Brimstone fir'd,
The wild Barbarian in the Storm expir'd.
Wrapt in devouring Flames, the Horseman rag'd,
And spurr'd his Steed, in equal Flames engag'd:
Another, pent in his scorch'd Armour, glow'd,
While from his Head the melting Helmet flow'd;
Swords by the Lightning's subtle Force distill'd,
And the cold Sheath with running Metal fill'd.
No human Art its weak Assistance brought,
But Heav'n, offended Heav'n, the Battle fought.
Whether dark Magic, and Chaldean Charms,
Had fill'd the Skies, and set the Gods in Arms;
Or good Aurelius, as I more believe,
Deserv'd whatever Aid the Thunderer could give. Addison

This Victory gained him the Salutation of IMPERATOR the feventh Time, and FAUSTINA, who was with him, the Title of MATER CASTRORVM, or Mother of the Camp. For this Denomination appears upon some of her Coins quoted by Goltzius, but which the Author has not had the good Fortune to meet with. Upon this the Quadi delivered up their Prisoners, and submitted to his Terms, but broke through them almost as soon as made. They called in the Sarmatians to their Assistance, and induced the Marcomanni to join them again. Several other Nations likewise took Arms in their Behalf. They attacked the Emperor with their united

M. AVRELIVS.

Forces, who gained over them a compleat Victory. Their King Ariogeses was taken Prisoner, and banished to Alexandria in Egypt. The Marcomans now fued in Earnest for Peace, and obtained it. The Chiefs of the Sarmatian Iazyges, with their King at the Head of them, waited upon him, and implored his Mercy, giving Liberty to one hundred thousand Captives, whom they had taken. also delivered up eight thousand of their Cavalry; five thousand five hundred of whom were transported to Britain. On this Account he is denominated IMPERATOR the eighth Time, on one of his Reverses, which is filled with a mighty Heap of Arms: the Legend being IMP VIII COS III PP; and in the Exergue, DE SARMATis. There is another of the same Kind, and with the same Legend, except in the Exergue, where it is DE GER-MANIS. The rest of the Nations also, on their Application, obtained favourable Terms, and these were the more readily granted, because Avidius Cassius had revolted in the East, and set up for himself. He was a Syrian by Nation, and the Son of one Heliodorus, who for his Eloquence had been promoted to the Government of Egypt. But while the Emperor was preparing to go against him, Cassius was slain by his own Soldiers. He nevertheless marched into all the Countries that had concurred in the Rebellion,

Pl. XXXVIII.

lion, which he treated with all Humanity, putting M. AVRELIVS. no one Person to Death, and burning all intercepted Letters without reading them. For he had fuch an Aversion to Cruelty and Bloodshed, that he obliged even the Gladiators to make use of Foils instead of Swords. At a Village named Halala, near Mount Taurus, he lost his Wife FAUSTINA, who died there of the Gout, and whose Death he passionately lamented. She had been a Lady of very loose Character, but her Lewdness the good-natured Emperor either did not, or would not, see. He was indeed so far blind to her Failings, as to require her Deification of the Senate; fo that we have several Proofs of her Apotheosis. On one Reverse she is represented as Ceres, holding her Torch, and adorned with a Crescent, with the Legend SIDERIBVS RECEPTA. SC: or, as translated to Heaven in a bigated Car, with the same Legend. A third Reverse bears the Peacock with his Tail displayed, and the Word CONSECRATIO. S C. A fourth has an Altar, with the same In- Pl. XXXVIII. scription. And on a fifth she is seated, as in the Act of Conveyance to Heaven, and supported by a Goddess on each Side: the Legend AETERNITAS. S C. There are feveral other Coins of her, which were struck in her Life-time: one of which has for its Reverse a female Figure, with a Child in one Hand,

Pl. XXXVIII.

Pl. XXXVIII.

Pl. XXXVIII.

Pl. XXXVIII.

PL XXXVIII.

M. AVRELIVS. Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other, with the PLXXXVIII. Legend FECVNDITAS. S.C. On a fecond, she 9. appears with two Children in her Arms, and four more standing by her: the Legend TEMPORum FELICItas. S C. On a third, we fee two small Pl. XXXVIII. 10. Children laid upon a little Bed or Couch, with the Legend SAECVLI FELICITas. This alludes to the Custom of presenting their new-born Children in this Manner, in the Temple of Juno Lucina. And it should seem, both by the Impression and the Legend, as if the Birth of Twins had given Occasion to the striking of it. On a fourth, a very Pl. XXXVIII. curious one, of the first Magnitude, she is celebrated in the Character of VENVS, with the Golden Apple in one Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other; a Compliment due to her exquisite Beauty, and which bears the Sanction of the Senate. A Pl. XXXVIII. fifth shews her as the Spouse of the terrestrial Jupiter; for she is veiled, and has the Hasta pura in her left Hand, and a Patera in the right: at her Feet is her favourite Bird the Peacock; and the Legend is IVNONI REGINAE. And as the Mother of Gods on Earth, The appears on a fixth in Pl. XXXVIII. 13. the Character of Cybele, seated, with her Head turrited, a Patera resting on her Knee, and a Lion on each Side; and it is inscribed MATRI MAGNAE.

S C. In the Village where she died, the Emperor erected.

erected a Temple to her, which was afterwards de- M. AVRELIVS. dicated to Heliogabalus, transplanted a Colony thither, and named the Place Faustinopolis. He also made Provision for a new Set of Faustinian Maidens, in Honour of her. The Senate decreed Statue's of Silver, both to her and the Emperor, to be placed in the Temple of Venus at Rome; and an Altar to be raifed, at which all Virgins, when they married, were, together with their Spouses, to offer Sacrifice. They placed also her Statue of Gold in her usual Seat in the Theatre, around which the Emperor was to fee the principal Ladies seated, as often as he came thither, as in her Life-time.

. He was greatly offended with the Antiochians, who had fided with Cassius, their Countryman. At first, therefore, he disfranchised them, and deprived them of the public Sports, in which they delighted; yet soon after he not only forgave them, but visited their City. Hence the Coins struck there to his Honour, with an Eagle for the Reverse, and Pl. XXXVIII. ANTIOCHIAE COLONIAE. Marching thence into Egypt, he reformed the Rites of Scrapis at Pelusium, taking them out of the Hands of the Multitude, and committing them to the Care of the Priests and principal Persons. On this Account it may be, that the Reverse before us was struck, which PI XXXVIII. bears the Head of Serapis, crowned with a Congius

15:

M. Avrelivs. or Measure. When he came to Alexandria, he behaved as their Citizen, and as a Philosopher, in all their public Places: and though the Inhabitants had been the Well-wishers of Cassius too, yet he pardoned all, and even left his Daughter amongst them. He had also erected a Temple at Rome to their God Serapis; fo that his Figure, and that of Is, is frequent on his Coins. Many Cities in the East were restored and embellished by him, particularly Ephefus, Nicomedia, and Cyzicus, which had been ruined by Earthquakes. To express their Gratitude, we have Coins of him, published by the Ephefians, with a Stag for the Reverse; by the Nicomedians, with the Figure of their Temple; and by the Inhabitants of Cyzicus, with a black Heifer, being the usual Sacrifice to Proserpine, to whom

Pl. XXXVIII. 17.

Pl. XXXVIII. 16.

Pl. XXXVIII. 18.

Pl. XXXVIII. 19.

> their Island was facred. Vaillant describes another. of the first Size, which we have not seen, struck by the Perinthians, with a Victory in a bigated Car, holding the Reins in her right Hand, and a Palm-Branch in the left, with the Name of ANTEICVS for their President or Governor. When he came to Athens, on his Return, where he was initiated in the Eleusinian Mysteries, he paid great Honours to the Athenians, and fettled annual Stipends upon the Professors of the several Sciences.

On his Arrival at Rome, when, speaking to the People,

People, he observed to them, that he had been ab- M. Avrelivs. fent several Years, the Multitude immediately ingeminated the Word Eight, at the same Time holding up the four Fingers of each Hand. The Emperor, conceiving their Intention, smiled, "Tis "true," faid he, "the Number is Eight;" and afterwards accordingly distributed eight Pieces of Gold to each Person: a Liberality which they had never before experienced. He remitted moreover all Debts to his own or the public Exchequer for forty-fix Years past, without taking the fixteen Years of HADRIAN into the Account, and ordered all the Bonds relating to them to be burned in the Forum. And thus, though in the Management of his private Affairs he was very frugal, yet in necessary Articles he spared no Expence. Some Advantage gained by his Lieutenants now gave him the Title of Imperator the eighth Time.

He permitted his Son Commodus to share with him the magnificent Triumph which he had obtained on his Return, gave him the Title of Im-PERATOR, and destined him Consul for the ensuing Year, conferring upon him also the Tribunitial And with my Sandhard on the Late Power.

The Affairs of Scythia once more requiring his Presence in the Field, he married CRISPINA, the Daughter of Bruttius Præsens, to his Son with VOL. II. Ee Speed,

M. Avrelivs. Speed, and then marched with him against the Enemy. His Success was such as merited the Salutation of IMPERATOR the ninth Time, as we find by one of his Medals in Bronze, of the first Size, whereon his laureate Head appears, with the Infcription M. AVREL. ANTONINVS AVG. TR

Pl. XXXIX. 1. P XXXIII. The Reverse bears the Figure of Felicity, with the Lap gathered, implying Plenty, the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Caduceus in the other: the Legend FELICITAS AVG. IMP VIIII COS III PP. S C. Another Coin, of the same Year, is quoted by Goltzius, which calls him IMP X. For a Battle was fought, which continued the whole Day, when the Romans obtained a compleat Victory. Had he lived longer, he might probably have reduced all Scythia, but on the seventeenth of the Calends of the April following he died; not of his Disease, it is said, but of his Physicians, who by his Death made their Court to his Succeffor. However, in his last Moments, he recommended Commodus to the Officers; and to the Tribune, who came for the Word, faid, "Go to the " Rifing Sun, for I hasten towards my Setting." It is faid, that he wished to die, seeing the incorrigible Depravity of his Son. He died in the eighteenth Year of his Reign, and the fixty-first of his Age. His Ashes were conveyed to Rome, and on the Day of his Funeral no Tears were shed, no M. AVRELIVS. Lamentation uttered, all Men being convinced that he was returned to the Gods, who had only lent him for a Season. The Senate and the People therefore, of every Sex and Condition, decreed to him a Temple, Priests, and every facred Circumstance; which is also evident from the Reverse be- Pl. XXXIX. 2. fore us, with an Eagle having his Wings expanded, and a Globe in his Talons, around which is the Word CONSECRATIO:

He had no Art, but was at all Times the same undifguifed good Man. In all Things relating to good Government he was most attentive and diligent, neither speaking, writing, nor doing any Thing negligently. By his confiderate Prudence he commonly forefaw the Schemes of his Enemies, and by his Vigilance and Activity defeated them, notwithstanding his natural Weakness and Infirmities. These Excellencies, which were observed inherent in him even before the Death of his Predeceffor, are represented under the Figure of a Sphynx, Pl. XXXIX. 3. on which the Emperor, according to Tristan and Walker, or Minerva, according to Mr. Addison, is mounted. "The Athenians," fays this last, from Pausanias, "drew a Sphynx on the Armour of Pallas, by Reason of the Strength and Sagacity " of this Animal. The Sphynx therefore fignifies

E e 2

M. AVRELIVS.

"the fame as Minerva herself, who was the Goddes of Arms as well as Wisdom, and describes the Emperor, as one of the Poets expresses it,

" Studiis florentem utriusque Minervæ.

" ---- Vers'd in Arts and Arms.

"He will have it, that the Romans joined both De"vices together, to make the Emblem the more fignificant; as indeed they could not too much extol the Learning and military Virtues of this excellent Emperor, who was the best Philosopher and greatest General of his Age."

In legal Proceedings he was most assiduous, adding to the Fasti the judiciary Days, amounting to 230 in the Year. He took especial Care of the Ways and public Roads. No Prince paid more Deference to the Senate, or more Regard to the Wants of his People. Nothing was blamed in him: but his too great Lenity. For being without Fault himself, he did not chuse to enquire into the Faults of others, that he might not punish them. He was only unhappy in leaving fuch a Son behind, forwhose Instruction and Improvement all his unwearied Endeavours proved fruitless. And from this Time the Iron Age of Imperial Rome commences; fo great was the Change that enfued in the Circumstances of the Empire. His Image of Gold

Gold was erected in the Senate-House. And the M. AVRELIVS. Man who kept not a Statue of him in his House (whose Circumstances might afford it) was held to be a facrilegious Person. His Reign was so much admired, and his Name for that Reason so speciously assumed by some of his Successors, that it is somewhat difficult to diffinguish many of their Coins and Medals. Mercury seems to have been the favourite Deity of this Emperor, by whom we find a fuperb Temple erected to him, on four Termini, having the God with his proper Attributes in the Center of it. Amongst the Decorations above, Mr. Walker observes, that there are the Figures of Pl. XXXIX. 4. a Dog, a Cock, and a Tongue, as the Emblems of Fidelity, Vigilance, and Perfuasion, necessary to a Pontifex. The Legend is IMP-VI COS III; in the Area, SC; and in the Exergue, RELIGio AVGusti.

The Greek Coins of M. Aurelius are common of every Size: but those of the younger Faustina, which bear the Name of Annia, are rare.

him that I the annual of the second the Just of housest the same access to sail, only continui College, al il, concelengalerantely forms

Contain I am to recorded on his Critic. At the Lines.

The same

L. AELIUS

L. AELIUS AURELIUS COMMODUS ANTONINUS.

COMMODVS.

his Disposition at the Age of twelve Years. For, the Water of his Bath being over-heated, he commanded the Waiter to be thrown into the Furnace; nor would be pacified, till convinced by the setid Smell of a Sheepskin, thrown in to deceive him, that his Commands had been executed. At the Age of sourteen he was received into the Sacerdotal College, and, on taking the manly Gown, was declared Prince of the Youth, and presented with a Shield and Spear of Gold by the Equestrian Order. This is recorded on his Coins, in the same Manner that we have seen it on the Denarius of Commodus.

Nero, with the Mark of a Shield, with EQVESTER Pl. XXXIX. 5.

ORDO PRINCIPI IVVENTutis. The Pieces which come out cross-wise from behind the Shield are the Ends of the Spears. So Virgil of Marcellus:

The Youth, who leans upon his unarm'd Spear.

In the Year of the City DCCCCXXVII, when Calpurnius Piso and Salvius Julianus were Confuls, he was advanced to the Tribunitial Power, and the next Year was complimented with the Surnames of GERMANICVS, SARMATICVS, and triumphed with his Father. It appears from the Legend of the Coin before us, that he was then Conful, and Pl. XXXIX. 6. had the Title of PATER PATRIAE conferred upon him. It exhibits a Trophy, with two Captives at the Foot of it; and in the Exergue, DE GERManis: around the Verge, TR P II COS PP; and in the Area, S C. The next Year we find him entitled AVGVSTVS, his Head being laureated, with the Infcription L AVREL COMMO-DVS AVG. On the Reverse he is feated or en- Pl. XXXIX. 7. throned, holding a Rosebud in his Hand, with an Altar burning before him, the Legend being TR P III IMP II COS PP. In DCCCCXXXI he was Conful

COMMODVS.

Conful the fecond Time; and in the following Year his Father died. Thus, in the fifth Year of his Tribunitial Power, he became fole Emperor, and assumed the Prænomen of MARCVS, which we shall find continued upon his Coins till the eleventh Year of his Reign. Notice has been taken already of the last Words of his Father to the Tribune, "Go to the rifing Sun," &c. This Expresfion probably gave Occasion to the striking of a Medal at this Time, whereon Phæbus is represented Pl. XXXIX. 8. as beginning his Courfe. "His four Horfes," as Mr. Addison observes, " are breaking through the "Clouds, in their Morning Paffage; CHULL BURGER, SARIN

"Corripuere viam, pedibusque per aera motis
"Obstantes scindunt nebulas., Ovip.

"Their Way they urg'd, and with fwift Feet th: ough Air

" Cleave the refifting Clouds. at this chief the call bit, a tropic with the

"The Woman underneath is the Earth; as Ovid " has drawn her, fitting, in the same Figure:

" Sustulit omniferos collo tenus arida vultus,

" Opposuitque manum fronti, magnoque tremore

" Omnia concutiens paulum subsedit.

—— The Earth at length

" Uplifted to the Heavins her blafted Head,

" And clapp'd her Hand upon her Brows, and faid,

" (But first, impatient of the sultry Heat, Sunk deeper down, and sought a cooler Seat.)

The

"The Cornucopiæ in her Hand is a Type of her Commodys. " Fruitfulness. So much for the designing Part of the Medal: as for the Thought of it (fays he) " the Antiquaries are divided upon it." But had any of them adverted to this Circumstance in the Death of M. Aurelius, there had been no room for any fuch Difference of Opinion. Some very fine Medallions were also struck, having on one Side the laureate Head of the Emperor, with IMP COMMODVS AVG GERM SARM; and opposite to him that of the Empress, with CRISPINA AVGVSTA; and on the Reverse, a Representation Pl. XXXIX. 9. of the Marriage, with the Legend VOTA PVB-LICA. Other Memorials of this Lady shew her in the Character of Venus, as her Medal of Gold particularly, which gives her Head on the obverfe Side, with CRISPINA AVGVSTA, reprefents her PLXXXIX.10. on the other as Venus seated, with the Hasta pura in her left Hand, and a Victory alate in the right, with the Legend VENVS FELIX; or of Juno, as does the Reverse of her Denarius, which has that PLXXXIX.11. Goddess standing, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Patera in the other, with the Peacock before her, and the Legend IVNO REGINA; or of the Deity of Health, under the Figure of Hygeia, enthroned, and feeding the Serpent, with the Legend SALVS, and in the Area SC, on a Medal of PLXXXIX.12. Vol. II. Ff Bronze, COMMODYS. Bronze, of the first Magnitude. One of her De-PLXXXIX.13. narii gives her Head, with the fame Inscription, and on the Reverse an Altar blazing, DIS GENITALI-BVS. Whence we may conclude that there were Children by this Marriage, however short-lived.

Commodus, on the Death of his Father, was with much Persuasion prevailed upon to continue for a while in Pannonia, that he might not feem to desert the War. This had a good Effect. For the Success which attended his Arms against the Quadi, gave him the Title of IMPERATOR the third Time, and induced both them and the Marcomanni to fue for Peace, which was granted. This is celebrated as the Effect of his military Prowess and Prudence, by Medals, which have his laureate Head. with AVREL COMMODVS AVG; and on the PLXXXIX.14. Reverse a Pallas, armed with Helmet and Shield, holding a Patera in her right Hand, and an Altar before her; the Legend of which is IMP III COS II PP. S.C. He was now faluted IMPERATOR. the fourth Time, entered upon his third Consulate. and, returning to Rame, triumphed once more. All Pl.XXXIX.15. this is commemorated on the Reverse, which shews him in his quadrigated Triumphal Car, with the Legend TR P VI IMP IIII COS III PP. SC. The next Year the Success of his Generals abroad honoured him with the Title of IMPERATOR the fifth

fifth Time; and in the following he became a COMMODVS, fourth Time Conful.

It had been usual aforetime to bring Corn to Rome from the opposite Coast of Africa. But Com-MODUS appointed a Fleet, with proper Curators, for the regular and constant Conveyance of it from that Quarter; that in case the expected Convoy from Alexandria should at any Time fail, a Supply might not be wanting. This Providence is commemorated on a Coin, which represents him with a Cornucopiæ PLXXXIX.16. in his left Hand, and the Figure of Ceres in his right. At his Feet is a Measure of Wheat, and behind him a Ship with Rowers: the Legend ANNona AVGusti TR P VIIII IMP VI COS """.

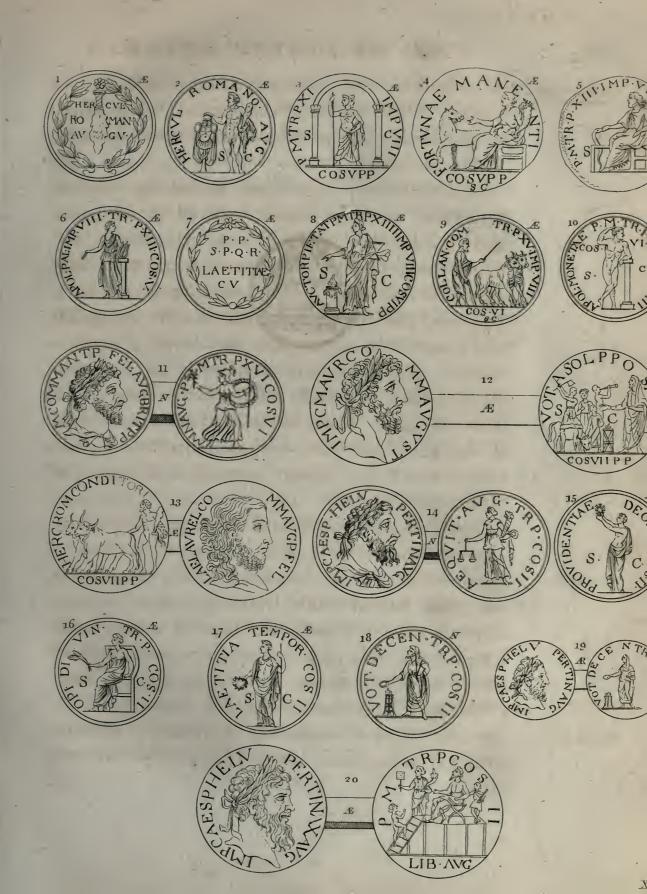

The Northern Barbarians now broke through the Wall in Britain, and made dreadful Ravages in the Province, having cut off the Roman General and his Army. Against them Ulpius Marcellus was commissioned, a Commander brave, abstemious, and vigilant. The Particulars of his Success we are not acquainted with. That it was great, is evident, from the Reverse struck the next Year, which exhibits a Victory alate, and feated, with a Shield before her, whereon the Success is supposed to be inscribed. The Legend is PM TR P X IMP PLXXXIX.17. VII COS IIII PP: in the Area SC; and in the Exergue VICTis BRITannis. Hence it appears Ff 2 that feventh Time on this Occasion; as it will, from other Coins, that he took upon him the Surname of BRITANNICUS.

While Things were thus proceeding abroad, Commodus at home discarded his Father's Friends, and bade adieu to all salutary Counsels. His Cruelty and Debauchery were such as made him odious to all Men. This encouraged his Sister Lucilla, and several Senators, to conspire against him; and who, on the Discovery, were all put to Death. The Empress Crispina also, for imitating his Lewdness, was first banished to Capreæ, and there executed. Some of the most eminent Persons of the Republic were condemned to Death, and others to Exile, under pretended Charges of Treason.

The Emperor now entered on his fifth Consulate, when we find his Care of the Frumentarian Supply again celebrated on his Coins. The Inscription around his laureate Head is unusual, if it be faithfully copied. I suspect, therefore, that in the AV a Stroke is wanting to the last Letter, and that it should be AN, and the Whole thus read, Marcus COMMODVS ANtoninus FELIX AVGustus BRitannicus. The Reverse is a Ship under full Sail

Pl.XXXIX.18. tannicus. The Reverse is a Ship under full Sail, with S C in the Area, and underneath PROVIDen-

and the second second second

tiæ AVGusti: the Legend PM TR P XI IMP VIII COMMODYS. COS V PP. Another Reverse represents him as Hercules with his Club, having his right Foot on the Prow of a Ship. Egypt, with her Sistrum, presents to him an Handful of Corn; and before the Prow is the Head of an old Man, supposed to be Africa: the Legend also PROVIDENTIAE AVG. For this Emperor was proud of being called the Roman Hercules. Statues were erected, and Sacrifices offered, to him in this Character. As fuch he is figured on one of his Reverses, with a PLXXXIX.19-Patera in his Hand, and an Altar before him; and this bears the S.C. On a Medal in Bronze, of the first Magnitude, his Head is covered with the Lion's Skin, and around it L. AEL AVREL COMM AVG P. FEL. The Reverse bears the Herculean Club, Pl.XXXIX.20. Bow, and Quiver; the last being inscribed HO-NORI: underneath SC: the Legend HERCVLI ROMANO AVGV to. Two other Reverses have, the one, the Club, furrounded by a Wreath of Lau-Pl. XL. I. rel; the other, Hercules himself, with his right Pl. XL. 2. Hand upon a Trophy; the Legend of both being the same with the former. At this Time some Coins were struck of him, which have for the Re- Pl. XL. 3. verse the Figure of Janus, under an Arch, with the Hasta pura in his right Hand, and the Legend PM TR P XI IMP VIII COS V PP S C. What particular

Pl. XL. 4.

COMMODYS, particular Janus this was which Commodus erected or restored, can only be surmised. For, besides those in his two Temples, there were several Figures of him in Rome. Horace makes Mention of the bighest, the middle, and the lowest Fanus. There was another before the Entrance of the Senate-House, to which, as Dio Cassius says, Didius Ju-LIANUS was going to offer Sacrifice, when he was disturbed by the Exclamations of the People. And * the Erection or Restitution of this was probably the Occasion of the Coin in Bronze before us. Another very curious Reverse was now struck, in Compliment to the supposed Steadiness of the Emperor's Fortune. For it shews the Figure of this Deity, as Apelles used to paint her, seated, with a Cornucopiæ in her left Hand. Her right she holds out in a foothing Manner to an Horse that is passing by, who placidly turns back his Head to her. The Legend is FORTVNAE MANENTI: in the Exergue COS V PP. S C. It is extraordinary, that amongst the three-and-twenty different Fortunes, enumerated by Alexander ab Alexandro, there is no Mention of the Fortuna manens; and we can only conjecture it to have been one of the three, of doubtful Name, at the Porta Collina. Yet the Lyric Poet had probably an Eye to this particular Deity, in the 29th Ode of his third Book,

Fortuna

COMMODVS.

Fortuna læto fæva negotio et

Ludum infolentem ludere pertinax,

Transmutat incertos honores;

Nunc mihi, nunc alii, benigna:

Laudo Manentem. si celeres quatit

Pennas, resigno quæ dedit, et meâ

Virtute me involvo, probamque

Pauperiem sine dote quæro.

Hor.

But Fortune, ever-changing Dame,
Indulges her malicious Joy;
Constant she plays her haughty Game,
Proud of her Office to destroy.
To-day to me her Bounty flows,
Instant on others she the Bliss bestows.

The FORTUNE REMANENT I praise;
But if she shake her rapid Wings,
I can resign, with careless Ease,
The Gifts her worthless Favour brings,
Then folded lie in Virtue's Arms,
And honest Poverty's undower'd Charms.

FRANCIS.

He gave to the several Months of the Year the Names which he assumed himself; beginning with fanuary, which he called Amazonius, Invictus, Felix, Pius, Lucius, Aelius, Aurelius, Commodus, Augustus, Herculeus, Romanus, Exsuperatorius. Of the first and last of these Names he was, according to Dio Cassius, particularly fond. And we find on one of his Denarii his laureate Head, with M COMM ANT PIVS FEL AVG BRIT; and on the Reverse the Figure of Jupiter the Pre-eminent, seated, with the Hasta pura in his lest Hand, and a Patera in the right;

COMMODVS. right; the Legend being IOVI EXSVP PM TR P XII IMP VIII COS V PP. It may be that the Fanus also, which we have just now taken Notice of, may bear some Relation to himself, as the Regulator of the Year. From some Coins struck in the Course of the succeeding Year, it seems that either the pestilential Disorder, which had long raged, began now to subside, or that they were owing to the Recovery of the Emperor himself from some Malady. For we are informed by Galen, that he had cured him of a troublesome Disorder of his Jaws. And it might be to express his Gratitude to this Physician that the Figure of Esculapius, feated, and feeding the Serpent, was stamped upon fome of his Reverses, with PM TR P XIII Pl. XL. 5. IMP VIII COS " " S C. Another has the Figure of Hygeia feated, and employed in the same Of-Pl. XL. 6. fice, with SALVS in the Exergue. On another is the Figure of Apollo, the supposed Arbiter of the Fate of Man, not armed with his Bow as fuch, but fice, with SALVS in the Exergue. On another is the Figure of Apollo, the supposed Arbiter of the Fate of Man, not armed with his Bow as such, but having in one Hand his Harp, resting on a Column, and his Plectrum in the other, as heightening the general Joy. He is here called the Palatine Apollo, as the Guardian of the Imperial Palace, in which he had a Temple dedicated to him by Augustus, with a magnificent Portico and Library; whence Propertius,

.

Musa, Palatini referamus Apollinis adem.
Sing we the Palatine Apollo's Donne.

Commodvs.

And,

Scripta Palatinus quæcunque recepit Apollo. Hor.

————— What Works foe'er

(Became the Palatine Apollo's Care.

And on another we read, inclosed in a Wreath of Laurel, P. P. S. P. Q. R. LAETITIAE C. V. Patris Patriæ Senatus Populus Que Romanus Lætitiæ Consulis Quintum.

Pl. XL. 7.

Several extraordinary Occurrences had lately passed. Perennis, the favourite Minister, had, by his oppressive and iniquitous Practices, incurred the public Odium; and was, upon a general Charge of aspiring to the Empire, cut off, with all his Family. He was fucceeded in that dangerous Post by Cleander, one of the Emperor's Freedmen, who, far from profiting by the Fate of his Predecessor, rather exceeded him in Haughtiness, Venality, and Cruelty. His Authority was therefore short-lived. The Emperor was forced to deliver him up, in Consequence of a popular Insurrection, which could not otherwise be quelled; and his guiltless Family, as was usual, perished with him. It is remarkable, that in this his last Year, no fewer than twentyfive Confuls were created, by the arbitrary Pleasure Vol. II. Gg of COMMODYS. of this Minister. Meantime a large Body of Deferters, headed by one Maternus, wrought great Distraction in the Provinces of Gaul and Spain. Finding themselves at last hard pressed by Niger, who marched against them with an Army, they divided, and in separate Parties entered Rome, with Defign to affaffinate the Emperor, and feize the Government. But a timely Discovery being made, the Scheme was defeated, by the Execution of their Leaders. To which Deliverance it may be, that the last-mentioned Coin may be more applicable.

> Great Discontents had arisen amongst the Troops in Britain, which PERTINAX was fent thither to appease, and which he accomplished, at the extreme Hazard of his Life. Severus was now recalled from Pannonia, and made Governor of Sicily. He was accused at the same Time of consulting the Astrologers with ambitious Views, but was acquitted by his Judges, and his Calumniator crucified. The Plague now broke out afresh, and made great Havock, especially at Rome. And Abundance of People perished in every Part of the Empire, by fmall Needles, infected with Poifon, which were artfully cast at them by malicious Persons, or such as were hired for the Purpose; an Evil which had been complained of also in the Days of DOMITIAN.

The fixth Confulate of Commodus was deeply Commodus. stained with the Blood of his own Kindred, and of the most illustrious Persons, both in the Provinces and at Home. The fuperb Temple of Peace, with all its rich Contents, was reduced to Ashes by a Fire, which forung out of the Earth. Not only the adjoining Buildings, but the Temple of Vesta, and a Part of the Palace, were confumed by it. After having raged impetuously for several Days, it was extinguished by a Flood of Rain, which the People looked upon as providentially fent from Heaven on Purpose. And on this Occasion the Emperor himfelf was recorded as an Example of Piety. For he is figured on his Coins, in an Attitude of Devotion, with the Altar burning before him, with the Legend AVCTOR PIETATis PM TR PXIIII IMP VIII COS VI PP. SC. For this Compound of all Iniquity, who did not scruple to profane the Places held most facred, with his Murders and Impurities, yet made great Pretensions to Piety and Religion. For he made many Additions to the Circensian Games, which was considered as an Act of Piety. In the Zeal of his Devotion, he would frequently, in the Habit of the Victimarian, flay the Beast himself; and was so observant of the Isac Rites, as to shave his Head, as the Priests did, Gg 2

Pl. XL. S.

DE LIZE

COMMODY'S. and bore the Statue of Anubis himself, in their public Processions.

The great Ambition of Commodus was to have every Thing called by his own Name. Accordingly, not the Months of the Year only, but the Age, the Senate, the People, and Rome itself, he was defirous of having fo distinguished. Hence Pl. XL. 9. the City is represented on his Coins as his proper Colony, by a Husbandman driving a Yoke of Oxen at Plough, with the Legend COLonia Lucii ANnii COMmodi TR P XV IMP VIII. COS VI. S C. And these mad Counsels he pretended to have re-Pl. XL. 10. ceived from Apollo, whom, from his advising, he denominates Moneta on his Coins. For there we behold him naked, leaning his left Arm on a Column, with his right Hand upon his Head, and the Legend APOLlini MONETAE PM TR P XV IMP VIII. COS VI. S C. The next Year Minerva feems to have been his favourite Deity, as she forms Pl. XL. 11. the Reverse of one of his Medals of Gold then struck, armed with Helmet and Shield, having the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Branch of Laurel in the other, and being called the MINerva AVGusti PM TR P XVI COS VI. In that which followed, > he affumed the Fasces a seventh Time, and chose for his Colleague HELVIUS PERTINAX, who became > > his

10 T. 12

his Successor, and was then Governor of the City. Commoders. And now Vows were paid for the Health of the Emperor, with the usual Pomp of Processions and Sacrifices, as expressed upon the Medal before us, which presents his laureate Head, inscribed IMP C M AVR COMM AVGVST, Imperator Cæfar Marcus Aurelius Commodus Augustus. The Reverse has the Pl. XL. 12. whole Apparatus of a Sacrifice, with the proper Ministers and Music attending, and the Occasion is expressed on the Margin by VOTA SOL PRO SAL PR, Vota soluta pro Salute Principis. In the Exergue COS VII PP, and in the Area S C. This is the last Coin on which the Prænomen of Marcus appears: for he had now resumed that of Lucius, which properly belonged to him. On the next, therefore, struck the same Year, for it was the last of his Life and Reign, we read L AEL AVREL COMM AVG P FEL. The Reverse of this Medal Pl. XL. 13. is only a Confirmation of his incorrigible Folly, as it exhibits Hercules with his Club, and a Yoke of Oxen before him, as the Founder of a Colony, being appropriated in the Legend HERCuli RO-Mano CONDITORI. Walker, in his Explanation of a Coin, which we have not met with, observes, that Rome was anciently composed of four Villages, Romula, Velia, Germalum, and Forum: that the Quarter of Germalum, Germanum, Cermanum, and Cermenum.

COMMODYS. Cermenum, for so it is differently written, being defolated by the Plague, and re-peopled by Com-MODUS, gave him fome Colour for stiling the City his Colony, or the Colonia Commodiana. He was now chiefly employed in exemplifying the Herculean Character which he had taken upon him. His Skill in Archery was wonderful, for which that Hero had been also famous; at the Sword he had few Equals, and to the Exercise of the Club his Strength was well adapted. He was therefore continually shewing his Address at these Weapons, either in the Amphitheatre or the Palace. While a Panther was feizing a Man, he pierced him with an Arrow fo feafonably and dextroufly, that the Beaft fell dead, and the Man remained unhurt. A Number of infirm Persons were gathered together, and disguised as Monsters, that he might destroy them with his Club. He fought amongst the Gladiators as one of their Number; and slew an incredible Multitude of People, being more delighted with his Success this Way than if he had gained a Victory in the Field. It were tedious, and at the fame Time very difagreeable, to recount the many Instances of his wanton Cruelty, in which he equalled or exceeded the most infamous of his Predecessors. On the last Day of the Year, he resolved upon the Death of the two Senators, whom he had appointed to the Fasces, intending to appear himself the next Commonvs. Morning in the double Character of Conful and Gladiator, attended in Procession by Gladiators only. This Scheme he discovered to Marcia, his favourite Mistress, to Lætus, the Captain of the Guards, and EcleEtus, his Chamberlain. All these most earnestly disfuaded him from the Execution of his Purpose, insomuch that he grew violently enraged; and, when he left them, wrote down their Names, and the Names of many other Persons of Distinction, as destined to Slaughter. The Tablet, containing these Names, Marcia observed soon after in the Hands of a Boy, with whom he would fometimes divert himself; and, after reading the Contents, presently made the other two acquainted with their common Danger, who naturally enough determined to prevent him. This they attempted by Poison, which not answering their Purpose immediately, they strangled him, with the Assistance of Narcissus, the noted Wrestler.

COMMODUS was of proper Stature, and of a fair and manly Aspect; but his Eyes twinkled like those of a drunken Person, and his Speech was confused. His Custom was to singe his Beard, either to avoid the Danger of a Barber, or to make the Hair spring up the softer. Notwithstanding his Atchievements in the Amphitheatre, he was afflicted with a Rupture,

1413509

COMMODYS. ture, the Tumor of which was evident enough through his filken Robes. His Liberality to the Public was expressed in frequent Congiaries; at one of which he distributed 725 Denarii to each Person; which Sum is computed at 70 Gold Ducats. In other Respects he was avaricious, his Extravagancies keeping the Treasury very low. He murdered all his Relations, and 24 of the most illustrious Persons of the Empire. And his Lust was as fierce as his Cruelty: for he violated his own Sisters, and the Vestal Virgins, and kept a Seraglio. of 300 Women, and an equal Number of Catamites. Yet this unnatural Tyrant, of execrable Memory, was afterwards deified by the Emperor Severus. For the present, however, the Senate with one Voice declared him the Enemy of his Country, of the Gods, and of the Senate; ordered his Statues to be pulled down, his Name to be erased from all Inscriptions, his Body to be dragged by the Hook, and cast into the Tiber, and the Months of the Year to be restored to their ancient Names. But his Body was privately buried by Night, and afterwards removed by his Successor to the Monument of Hadrian. There are many Colony Coins of him; both Greek and Latin, which are trite and common; but all those of CRISPINA are rare and valuable.

sound wises for history, Date statute

PUBLIUS HELVIUS PERTINAX.

OMMODUS being dead, Eclectus and Lætus PERTINAX. waited on Pertinax, and with Difficulty perfuaded him to attend them to the Prætorian Camp, where, on the Recommendation of Lætus, and the Promise of a Donative, he was declared Emperor; it being given out amongst them, that COMMODUS had been carried off by an Apoplexy. He then hastened to the Senate, which was assembled in the Night, and was received with great Applause. All the Imperial Honours were conferred upon him, and he was stiled Prince of the Senate, according to ancient Usage. The Title of Augusta was decreed to his Wife, as was that of CASAR to his VOL. II. Hh Son.

PERTINAX.

Son. But he rejected both, and would gladly have relinquished the Authority vested in himself. His Son he judged too young; and his Wise was a petulant Woman, whose Fondness for a Musician gave him no room to assure himself of her Fidelity. Yet we find her acknowledged by this Title in some Provincial Coins. In that before us she is a graceful Figure, with the Inscription TITIANH EBACTH, Titiana Augusta. The Reverse is one mounted on Horseback, the common Symbol of the Heliopolitans; but whether the Coin was struck at Heliopolis in Egypt, or a City of the same Name in Cælo-Syria, as I rather judge, is uncertain; but that it was at one of them, the HAI, Heli, leaves us no rooms to doubt.

Extraction. For his Father, Helvius Successus, was a Woodman, and had been commonly called Pertinax from his obstinate Continuation of that laborious Employment for many Years; which Name he was so far from being ashamed of, that he gave it to his Son. He found Means, however, to procure for him a good Education, and he afterwards earned a scanty Maintenance by instructing others. At length, betaking himself to the Army, his Merit by Degrees recommended him to the highest Commands; so that he was appointed to the Consul-thip, and enjoyed that Dignity in Absence, and was PERTINAX. now Conful the fecond Time, as well as Governor of the City, at the Death of Commodus. The excellent Management of his private Concerns, and his Experience in public Affairs, added to his unwearied Diligence, gave all Men the justest Hopes of a most happy Administration. And indeed, for the short Time that he continued it, their Expectations were fully answered. For his Justice, Equity, and Moderation, endeared him to all good Men, and were worthy to be recorded, as they are, on Medals of Gold, made much more estimable by the Impression of his laureate Head, inscribed IMP CAES P HELV PERTIN AVG. His Equity appears personified on the Reverse, with her Cornucopiæ and an equal Balance, termed in the Legend AEQVITas AVGusti TR P. COS II. His Advancement from the lowest to the highest Estate, he piously ascribed to the Providence of the Gods, which we see on one of his Reverses holding up a Globe for his Acceptance, with the Legend PROVIDEN-TIAE DEORVM COS II. S C. The Divine Affistance, which he thus acknowledged, is expressed on another of his Coins by a female Figure, seated, and holding out Ears of Corn, with OPI DIVIN. TR. P. COS II. S C. This divine Ops was the fame with Cybele or Rhea, and fignified the Earth, Hh 2 which

Pl. XL. 14.

Pl. XL. 15.

Pl. XL. 16.

PERTINAX.

Pl. XL. 17.

which was deemed the Mother of the Gods, and which, as frugiferous, is depicted with Ears of Wheat. The general Joy which it occasioned is also represented by the Symbol of an youthful Goddess, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Wreath in the other, entitled in the Margin LAETITIA TEMPOR. COS II. S C. For the public Rejoicing, according to Zonaras, was fo great on this Occasion that the People strewed the very Streets of the City with Wreaths or Garlands. In the Capitol he offered the usual Sacrifices, and his Vows to the Gods, for an happy Decennial Government, as is expressed in the Frontispiece of this Reign, on one of his Medals of Gold also, and his Pl. XL, 18, 19. Denarius; on the Reverse of which he is veiled, and offering, with the Altar before him, and VOTis DECENnalibus TR. P. COS II. S C.

At his Accession the Treasury was so exhausted, that he found in it no more than a Million of Sefterces; yet by the Sale of his Predecessor's Effects, he collected as much more as enabled him to discharge his Promise to the Prætorian Cohorts, and to distribute to the People an hundred Denarii per Man. This is recorded in the usual Manner. The Emperor is enthroned, and attended by his Captain of the Guards, and his Minister, who makes the Distribution, with a Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and dritter the 7 10 1

Pl. XL. 20.

the Tessera duly marked in the other, while one is PERTINAX. ascending to receive it. In the Margin he is stiled PM TR P. COS II; and in the Exergue we have LIBeralitas AVGusti. About the same Time an immense Quantity of Gold was recovered from some Barbarian Deputies, who were stized upon the Road and brought back, as they were conveying it to their own Country, being the Price of their Friendship. This was done by Order of Lætus, who dismissed them with a Charge that they should acquaint their Principals, "that PERTINAX was Emperor," to whose Reputation they were no Strangers. But neither was Lætus satisfied with the Power that he enjoyed, nor they of the Imperial Houshold with the Justice and Oeconomy, nor the Prætorians with the Frugality, Strictness, and Activity of the Emperor; nor consequently did the first of these find it difficult to engage the last in a Conspiracy against him. About two hundred of them broke into the Palace with their drawn. Swords, to whom PERTINAX, faying that "Flight did not become an Emperor," too confidently exposed himself, upbraiding their undutiful Behaviour in such convincing Terms, that most of them, ashamed of their Purpose, were sheathing their Swords, when one of them, a Tungrian, whose Name was Taufius, more infolent than the rest, darted PERTINAX. darted his Spear at his Breast: "This," faid he, " the Soldiers fend you:" on which others rushed forward and dispatched him. Eclectus died by his Side, after having flain two of the Soldiers in his Defence. Thus fell PERTINAX, in the fixty-eighth Year of his Age, after a short Reign of eighty-seven Days only. He was afterwards deified, and his Son was made the Flamen or Chief Priest of his Father.

> He was a venerable old Man, with a long Beard and curled Hair; of full Habit, and a Belly somewhat prominent; of stately Height, moderately eloquent, and rather gracious than liberal. He was accused of Avarice, but his Virtues were many; and, had he lived longer, might have restored the Empire to its ancient Lustre. His Death was therefore much lamented by the Senate and People.

> the fire of the Meaning and making all the will be and the state of t the best of the same of the same and the nearly spile, a first made . College Shoot made

- That he had to be a substitute of the substitu

the restrict the second second second second per sett a company of the set programme distribution of the state of th

Daniel Bridge Charles of the Bullet Co.

BELL OF STATE OF

M. DIDIUS SEVERUS JULIANUS.

HE Soldiers, who flew PERTINAX, Ruck his Head upon a Pole, and carried it to the IVLIANVS. Camp. The Cohorts, feeing this, and not knowing whom to pitch upon for a Successor, determined to fet the Imperial Authority to Sale, and proclaimed. from the Ramparts that they would dispose of it to the highest Bidder. Sulpicianus, the Father-in-law of PERTINAX, and Governor of Rome, was then in the Camp, whither he had been fent on the first News of the Mutiny, and offered himself. But DIDIUS JULIANUS, the wealthiest Man in Rome, hastening thither, and greatly outbidding him, was declared Emperor, and attended to the Senate in.

the.

DIDIVS IVLIANVS.

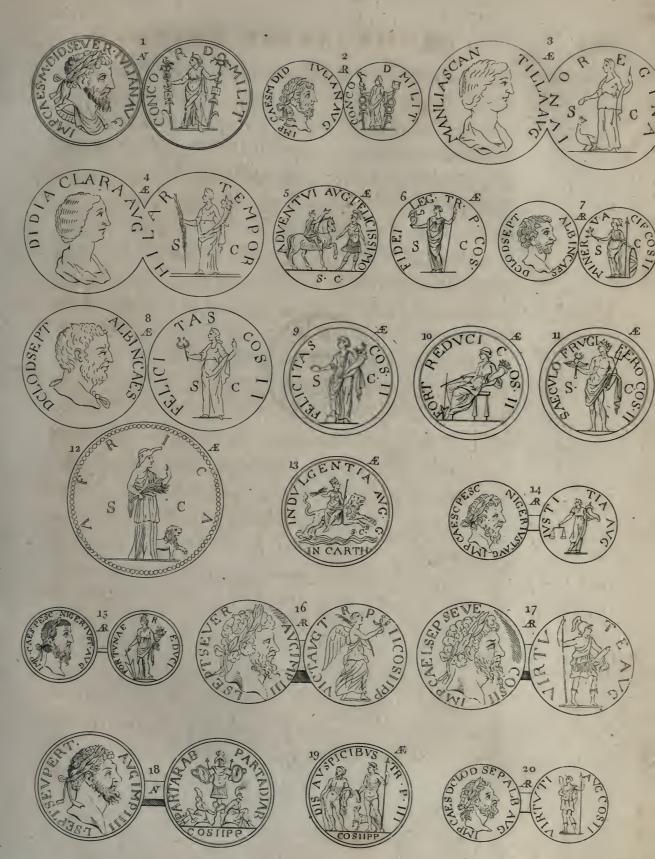

Pl. XLI. 1.

Pl. XLI. 2.

the Evening by a numerous Escorte of them, with their Enfigns displayed. Being confirmed by the Senate, he repaired to the Palace, and gratified at once his Ambition and Appetite with a princely Entertainment. His imperial Fortune, distinguished by the Helm in her right Hand, and the Cornucopiæ in her left, is honoured on the Reverse of the Frontispiece. But the Concord of the Prætorian Cohorts, to which he really owed his Advancement, is celebrated on his Medal of Gold; the Obverse of which shews his laureate Head, with IMP CAES. M. DID. SEVER. IVLIAN. AVG. while she appears on the Reverse with an Eagle-in one Hand, and an Enfign in the other, entitled CONCORDia MILITum. His Denarius corresponds with this, of SEVER. is omitted in the Inscription, At the same Time the Title of Au-GUSTA was decreed both to his Wife MANLIA SCAN-TILLA, and his Daughter Didia CLARA, by whom his own Ambition was too inconfiderately stimulated. Accordingly we have the Head of the former in Bronze, of the first Magnitude, with MANLIA SCANTILLA AVG; the Reverse of which is the Queen of Heaven, with the Sceptre, Patera, and

Pl. XLI. 3.

Peacock, called IVNO REGINA. SC; and of the latter, with DIDIA CLARA AVG. having for Pl. XLI. 4. the Reverse a female Figure, with a long Palm-Branch

A STATE OF THE REAL PROPERTY.

Branch in the right Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in the left, expressive of her own internal Satisfaction, denominated HILARitas TEMPORum. S. C. Their Denarii agree with these. Nothing prevailed with the Prætorians so much, his Money only excepted, in Behalf of Julianus, as his Promise to renew, on all Occasions, their Remembrance of Commodus, whose Name therefore they gave to him; and it is found on one of the Coins mentioned by Goltzius, in his Index.

On the next Day the Senators waited on him with much Dissimulation. But the People in general were under great Concern, and took no Care to conceal it, infomuch that, while he was facrificing, they exclaimed aloud against him, calling him "Parricide," and faying, that "he had ftolen "the Empire;" and when he endeavoured to pacify them with Promises of Money, they were the more vehement, crying out, that "they would have none " of it." He then ordered the Soldiers to fall upon those who were nearest. This did but exasperate the Multitude, who took Arms, and flocked from all Quarters to the Circus. Here they passed the Night and the next Day fasting, till, wearied out with Toil and Watching, they departed to their own Homes. His Behaviour after this was mean. He foothed and flattered the Senate, and the great Vol. II. Men, Ιi DIDIVS VLIANVS. Men, promised and gave largely, became exceedingly obsequious to all he met, frequented the Theatres, gave many Entertainments, and omitted nothing which might conciliate the Affections of others. But to Men of Experience, this immoderate Assentation looked suspicious.

At this Time there were at the Head of the Roman Armies three Persons, very eminent; Seve-Rus, who commanded in Illyricum; NIGER, in Syria; and ALBINUS, in Britain. The first was the most potent and the most prudent. Foreseeing what would happen on the Death of Julianus, he made it his first Care to engage the Friendship of ALBINUS, who was nearest. This done, with fix hundred felect Men, he fet out for Rome, travelling Night and Day, being followed by the rest of his Forces with all Diligence. His Intentions being known, Julianus obliged the Senate to declare him a public Enemy. He then made great Preparations for his Defence, and fortified the Palace. Lætus and Marcia were put to Death by his Orders. Several Youths were flain by him for Magical Purposes. Many Persons were hired to affassinate Severus, who had now entered Italy, and made himself Master of Ravenna. They who guarded the Passes went over to him. And the Prætorian Cohorts, on whom the Emperor chiefly depended, funk under their Labours, and were deadfully Dibivs frightened at the Rumor of his Approach. A Se- IVLIAN nate was therefore convened; and, at the Request of Julianus, Severus was declared his Partner in the Empire. Meantime the Prætorian Cohorts, to whom Severus had by his Letters offered Indemnity on their Submission, and the delivering up all those concerned in the Death of PERTINAX, seized the Affassins, and gave Notice of what they had done to Messala the Consul, who immediately fummoned the Senate to meet in the Temple of Minerva. The Fathers, without Delay, passed Sentence of Death on Julianus, who was beheaded in the Palace; declared Severus Emperor; and decreed Divine Honours to Pertinax. He suffered in his fixty-first Year, after having reigned fixtyfix Days; and his Body was delivered to his Wife and Daughter for Interment. with the second libraries with and activities

Land Miles ported their plift , with a state Circles at their modificacilles havened. Article and still nothern to read Builting to me the to the country of the state De return (o the Chic, he blighted, and pur of the ele palace with the cities as a while the walled

LUCIUS SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS.

SEVERVS.

SEVERUS, now Emperor, instantly took Vengeance on the Murderers of Pertinax. On his Approach to the City, he ordered the Prætorian Cohorts to attend him without their Arms. He upbraided them in the bitterest Terms with their mutinous Disposition, their heinous Rebellion and Cruelty to their most excellent Emperor. After which he banished them an hundred Miles from Rome. He then advanced to the City, at the Head of his Troops, armed, and on Horseback. When he came to the Gates, he alighted, and put on the peaceful Garb of a Citizen, in which he entered, the whole Army following. Our Historian calls it the most magnificent Sight that he had seen. The S. Severvs. whole City was adorned with Flowers, and Wreaths of Laurel. The richeft Vestments of the Citizens were exposed. The Splendor of the Illuminations, the Odour of the Incense every where dispersed, and the Acclamations of the People, were such as cannot easily be described. His Arrival is celebrated on one of his Coins, which shews him mounted, and Pl. XLI. 5. pointing to the City, being conducted by a Soldier, representing his Army: the Legend ADVENTVI AVGusti FELICISSIMO. The Fidelity of his Legions is represented with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Victory in the other, with FIDEI LEGionum TR P COS. He swore that no Senator should suffer Death by his Command; and recommended a Decree, that both the Emperor, and they who should assist in taking away the Life of a Senator, should, together with their Children, be declared public Enemies. But how frequently himself offended against this Law, is too notorious. Like Meall buildents the street was a

One of his first Cares was to raise a Monument to Pertinax, whose Name he assumed, and to confer upon him all the Honours which could be paid to a deceased Emperor. In the next Place, to keep Albinus quiet, he named him CASAR, and appointed him his Colleague in the Consulate for the second plant; Time,

Pl. XLI. 6.

Pl. XLI. 7.

Pl. XLI. 10.

Pl. XLI. 11.

S. Severvs. Time, the next Year. As such he appears on his Denarius, with Decimus CLODius SEPTimius AL-BINus CAESar; with the MINERva PACIFica on the Reverse, inferring the Prudence of Severus in giving, and his own in accepting, this Title. She is armed with Helmet, Spear, and Shield, and holds a Branch of Laurel in her right Hand! On a Medal of 12 - 12 12 Bronze, of the first Size, he bears the same Title; Pl. XLI. 8, 9. but on the Reverse is the FELICITAS COS II. S.C. holding out the Caduceus. Another has the same Figure treading on a Globe, with a Cornucopiæ and Patera, having the fame Legend. Others are dedicated FORTunæ REDVCI COS II, feated, and distinguished by her Cornucopiæ and Helm. And others are infcribed SAECVLO FRVGIFERO COS II, with the SC also, having the Figure of Mercury with a radiated Crown, the Trident in one Hand, and the Caduceus in the other. This Deity was particularly worshipped in Gaul, as the Genius of the World, the Author of Wealth, Felicity, and Fecundity of every Kind; therefore stiled Frugifer: and bearing the Trident, as well as the Caduceus, to point out the prolific Nature of Fishes, the Wealth of the Sea, and the Security of Commerce.

Severus was an African by Birth, for which Reason we find the usual Symbol of that Country on his Coins, crowned with the Head of the Elephant;

Pl. XLI. 12.

phant; the Lion stalking by her. His Indulgence S. SEVERVS. to Carthage on this Score, which he presented with all the Privileges of an Italian City, is particularly celebrated on his Coins; which exhibit the Genius of that City wearing a radiated Crown, mounted on a Lion, and bearing the Thunder in her Hand: the Legend INDVLGENTIA AVGusti Casaris IN CARTHaginem. He now marched against NIGER, who had affumed the Purple in Syria; around whose claureate Head we read IMP. CAES. C. Pl. XLI. 14. PESCennius NIGER IVSTus AVG; having a Justice on the Reverse, in Allufion to his Name, entitled IVSTITIA AVG, with a Cornucopiæ and an equal Balance. Another is inscribed FORTVNAE RE-DVCI, with her usual Attributes. There are several Greek Medals of NIGER, with the Name of IOYCTOC, Fustus, one of them very fine, in the Pembrokian Collection; but Vaillant will have it, that all these are fictitious, while those that have the  $\Delta$  or  $\Delta$ IK, for  $\Delta$ 122005, are allowed to be genuine. In this Contest, after various Turns of Fortune, the Army of NIGER was entirely defeated, and Antioch surrendered. Himself fled thence towards the Euphrates, but was overtaken by his Pursuers, and his Head carried to Severus. This Success is perpetuated on some Silver Medals, having a Victory Pl. XLI. 16. alate, with a Palm-Branch and Wreath, called VICToria

Pl. XLI. 13.

Pl. XLI. 15.

TI 251.5 YE

S. SEVERVS. VICToria AVG. TR P II COS II. PP; and on Pl. XLI. 17. others, with the Figure of Marsthe Avenger, having the Legend VIRTVTE AVG. Of all the Cities which took Part with Niger, none distinguished themselves so much as the Byzantines, who obstinately refused to submit, even after the Death of NIGER. They fustained a three Years Siege, and were reduced to the eating of human Flesh, before they would furrender. Severus was then in Mesopotamia; but by his Orders, all its strong Fortifications and superb Edifices were destroyed, its Privileges taken away and transferred to the Perinthians, its Garrifon massacred, and its Inhabitants sold into Slavery. While the Siege was carrying on, Severus led his Forces against the Oshroenians, Adiabenians, and the neighbouring Arabians. His Success in these Quarters is recorded on a Medal of Gold, whereon his laureate Head is inscribed L SEPT SEV PERTinax AVG IMP IIII; having on the Reverse a Trophy, with two Captives at the Foot of it, and on their Heads the Caps which distinguish the Eastern Nations on Medals: the Legend is PARTá ARABiá PARTá ADIABene: in the Exergue, COS II PP. It was gained, as other of his Coins would perfuade us, under the Auspices of Hercules and Bacchus, the first the Subduer of Tyrants, the last the Conqueror of the East. These

Pl. XLI. 18.

OF THE THE OWNER OF THE

The state of the s

The second secon

two Divinities therefore appear upon his Coins with S. Severvs their proper Attributes; Hercules with his Club in Pl, XLI. 19. the right Hand, and the Lion's Skin upon his left Arm; Bacchus with his Thyrsus, and Cantharus or Jug, and a Panther standing by him, with the Legend DIS AVSPICIBVS TR P III COS II PP. Severus was a Stranger to Mercy. The Wife, Children, and Relations of NIGER, were first banished, and then put to Death. All of Senatorian Rank, who had borne Arms, fuffered the same Fate, besides a vast Multitude of common People. Others of Rank were banished, and their Estates confiscated. The City of Antioch was stripped of its Dignity and Privileges, and subjected to Laodicea. The rest of the Cities, which had declared for him, were punished with heavy Fines.

Having thus disposed of NIGER, he determined to get rid of Albinus at any Rate. This he attempted by the basest Treachery, sending Persons to affaffinate him, yet pretending the tenderest Friendship. On the Discovery of this, Albinus took the Title of Augustus. On his Denarius therefore his Head is laureated, with the Title of Pl. XLI. 20 IMP CAES D CLOD SEP ALB AVG, having on the other Side his Figure in the military Habit, with the Hasta pura and Herculean Club, inscribed VIRTVTI AVG COS II. Another in Silver gives VOL. II. Kk him os Julia Mi.

Pl. XLII.

I JAME

SEVERVS. him the same Title, with the GENIVS COS II on its Reverse, holding the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in the other, with the Imperial Eagle standing by him. When he had made the necessary Provision, he passed into Gaul, and his Proceedings were at first so favourable as to alarm SEVERUS greatly. This Emperor immediately left the East, and hastened to meet him. Both Armies came to a decifive Action in the Lyonois, where Albinus was defeated, and slew himself. His whole Family suffered, as Niger's had done before; as did all his Partizans of any Note, and their Effects were feized by the Conqueror. His Friends and Correspondents at Rome were now in dreadful Consternation. Severus produced in full Senate the Letters which had been written to his Competitor. In his Speech he extolled the Severity of Sylla, Marius, and Augustus, as the wisest Provision for their own Security, and condemned the Humanity and Moderation of Pompey and Cafar as idestructive Weakness; highly cried up the Virtues of Commodus, whom he obliged them to deify, and reproved them sharply for defaming so excellent an Emperor. Notwithstanding this, he absolved thirty-five principal Senators of the Party, at the same Time that he condemned nine-and-twenty others; and, amongst them, Sulpicianus, the Father-.ni

II in-

25

in-law of PERTINAX. In the Spring of the fuc- S. SEVERY ceeding Year, which was the fixth of his own Reign, he conferred upon his eldest Son, Bassianus Caracalla, the Tribunitial Power, with the Title of Augustus, obliging him to assume the Name of M. Aurelius Antoninus; and on Geta, the youngest, the Pontificial Dignity, and the Title of CESAR. On a Medal of Gold we have therefore the laureate Head of the former, with M. AVRELIVS ANTON. AVG. and the plain Head of the latter on the Reverse, with P SEPT. GETA CAES PONT. He then set out for the East once more, taking them both with him: for during his Absence the Parthians had invaded Mesopotamia, and laid Siege to Nisibis. On his Approach they retired; yet he marched forward, and made himself Master of Seleucia and Babylon, which the Enemy had deferted, and afterwards of Ctefephon, which he gave up to Plunder. Here the Slaughter was dreadful, and one hundred thousand Persons were made Slaves. This gained him the Surname of PARTHICVS MAXI-MVS; whence we fee on the Reverse of his Denarius PART MAX PM TR P X, furrounding a Trophy, with two Eastern Captives at the Foot of it, as before; and on a Medal of Gold, the laureate PLXLII. Heads of the two Emperors (for he was willing that his Son should share the Honour) entitled IMPP Kk 2 BRA INVICTI

Pl. XLIF.

Pl. XLII.

INVICTI PII AVGG; and on the other Side a

2,52

SEVERYS.

1. XLII. 5.

Victory, with a Palm-Branch and Wreath, called VICTORIA PARTHICA MAXIMA. In this Expedition he was affifted by Abgarus King of the Edessenians, whose Head is therefore on the Reverse of one of his Greek Coins, whereon he is stiled ΒΑCIΛευς ΜΕΓας ΑΒΓΑΡΟC, Rex Magnus Abgarus. Returning from the Parthians, to whom he granted Peace, and a Part of Armenia, he laid Siege, once and again, to the little City of Atra in Arabia, which baffled all his Attempts. While he was thus engaged, he put to Death Lætus and Crispus, two of his chief Officers. He now came back to Palestine, where he published an Edict, prohibiting the Propagation of the Jewish and Christian Religions; which kindled the Flame of a general Persecution. Thence he passed into Egypt, visiting all the Curiofities of that Country. On his Arrival at Rome he triumphed with his eldest Son; on which Occasion the Coin may have been struck, which bears a Victory driving a bigated Car, with VICTORIAE AVGG. We find the same Reverse on the Coins of both his Sons. The next Year they shared the Confulship also; and then it was that the Medal of Gold was struck, which bears on the one Side the Head of Severus radiated, and of his Empress Julia Domna, with CONCORDIAE AETERNAE;

Pl. XLII. 6.

Pl. XLII. 7.

1, 122220 / 0

and

and on the other, that of CARACALLA, laureated, S. SEVERVS with ANTONINVS PIVS AVG. PON TR P IIII. The Congiary, which he gave to the new Prætorians and the People, confisting of ten Pieces of Gold to each Person, took up an immense Sum, and is recorded on one of his Coins, which shews the Imperial Family concerned in the Exercise of this Liberality, which is called the FELICITAS SAECVLI. The like Reverse is on the Coins of both his Sons also. The magnificent Shews, likewise, which had been exhibited on his Return, in which an hundred wild Beafts were slaughtered every Day, for feven Days together, and on one of them an Elephant, deserved to be commemorated in the same Manner. Hence on a Silver Medal we Pl. XLII. 9 have the Figure of this Animal, with MVNIFI-CENTI " Dio Cassius tells us, that on this Occasion a Machine was erected in the Midst of the Amphitheatre, in the Fashion of a Ship, which contained within its Cavity four hundred wild Creatures, and was fo contrived as to let them out all at once; fo that, on the sudden Opening of it, out rushed Lions, Panthers, Ostriches, Wild Asses, and Buffaloes, to the great Diversion of the Spectators. This also was so singular as to be reprefented on a Coin of Silver, which has his laureate Head, inscribed SEVERVS PIVS AVG; with the Figure

PLELE TO

Pl. XLII. 8.

Pl. XLII. 10.

5. SEVERVS. Figure of the Machine itself on the Reverse, and the wild Animals running from it; the Legend of which is LAETITIA TEMPORVM, Taight of the

The next Year the Honour of the Fasces was conferred on his great Favourite Plautianus. This Man betrayed the Meanness of his Extraction by his fastidious Carriage in his Exaltation. He became as absolute a Minister as Sejanus himself had been, and made a worse Use of his Power. He even castrated an hundred Roman Citizens of Birth, to fit them for the Service of his Daughter PLAUTILLA, whom the Emperor made choice of as a Wife for his Son CARACALLA. She does not appear to have been a Lady of extraordinary Beauty by her Medal of Gold, with PLAVTILLA AVGVSTA, and a Concord feated for the Reverse, with a Patena and double Cornucopiæ, denominated CONCORDIA AVGG: But the Reverse of her Denarius shews her giving her Hand to the young Emperor, with the Legend PROPAGO IMPERI. In Bronze, she is the VENVS VICTRIX, with the Palm-Branch and Shield, holding the Golden Apple in her Hand. On the Shield is figured a Lion, speaking the Importance of her Conquest; and before, is a feeing Cupid, to intimate the Judgment of his Choice. Men swore by the Fortune of her Father, and Statues without Number were crected to him.

But

Pl, XLII. 12.

Pl. XLII. 11.

Pl. XLII. 13.

C ... 1

But the Haughtiness and Perverseness of his Daugh- S. SEVERVS, ter was fuch at last, that the young Emperor vowed Destruction to them both. He suffered accordingly the Fate of most great Favourites, being put to Death, by his Orders, even in the Presence of his Father. PLAUTILLA was banished to Sicily, and perished also, by his Command, soon after the Death of Severus.

The Sæcular Games were now celebrated the eighth Time with the usual Solemnities, and are recorded on a Reverse, which has the Figures of Hercules and Bacchus, his auspicious Deities, distinguished as before, supporting a Table, on which we read COS III LVDos SAECulares FECit. S.C. For the Worship of these Deities, he afterwards raised a very large Temple, a Part of which appears on one of his Coins, with the Figure of Pl. XLII. 14. Hercules resting on his Club, between two Serpents, having around it PM TR P XV COS III PP. Many other Edifices he founded or restored; amongst which, the Septizonium, and Baths called by his Name; taking great Pains to decorate and adorn the City: so that on one of his Coins is the Figure Pl. XLII. 155 of Roma feated, armed with Helmet, Spear, and Shield, and holding a Victory in her right Hand, in the Legend of which the Emperor is complimented Pl. XLII. 16, with the Title of RESTITUTOR VRBIS, S.C.

S. SEVERVS.

-Pl. XLII. 17.

ALEC 19

At this Time the Coin, which had been lessened in Value under some of the preceding Emperors, underwent a new Regulation, as appears from a Reverse of the Emperor, on which three Persons are seen, with a Cornucopiæ in their lest Hands, and Scales in their right, with the Legend MONETa AVG COS III. S.C.

On the Fall of Plautinus, the young Emperor, and his Brother GETA, who were Confuls together in the following Year, like Boys just freed from the Tyranny of a severe Master, rushed into all Manner of Licentiousness. Their Violation of Chastity, their iniquitous Exaction of Money, and their Familiarity with Gladiators and Charioteers, gave a fad Presage of future Misery. Yet in all their Proceedings, they were ever at Variance. If one of them took a Fancy to this Man, the other joined his Adversary. Even in their common Exercises, their Emulation was remarkably contentious and fierce. After an Interval of two Years, they were Confuls again together; when GETA also received the Tribunitial Power, and the Appellation of Au-GUSTUS. For Severus judged it necessary to take them with him, thus invested with equal Power, as his Affistants in Britain, where the Roman Forces had of late Years fuffered greatly, and had even been obliged to purchase of the Natives a Cessation of Hostilities. But first it was necessary to promote S. Severvs. a Reconciliation between the two Brothers, and it was supposed to be effected. Public Vows and Sacrifices were also offered for their future Agreement. Hence we have the laureate Heads of both Pl. XLII. 13. adverse, with CONCORDIA AVGVSTORVM; and the public Devotion represented in the Temple of Concord on the Reverse, while a Wreath is placed on the Head of each of them, as they are offering. The same desirable Event is figured on two Reverses of GETA; on the first of which the Emperor Pl. XLII. 19. joins their Hands; and on the last they appear also with their Hands joined, and are crowned in that Action by Hercules and Bacchus.

On their Arrival in the Island, GETA was left to govern the fouthern Part of it, already under the Dominion of Rome, and somewhat less than a Moiety of the Whole, assisted by the famous Papinian; while Severus and Caracalla marched against the Mæatæ and Caledonians. But these, without coming to a pitched Battle, fo harraffed the Romans with continual Skirmishes, cutting off all Stragglers, and watching all Opportunities, that they lost no fewer than fifty thousand Men. Severus, however, marched to the Extremity of the Island, and on his Return obliged the Enemy to come to a Treaty with him, whereby they furrendered a Part of the Country; VOL. II. L1 and

Pl. XLII. 20.

Pl. XLIII. I.

S. SEVERVS. and he built a Wall from Sea to Sea, in order to fecure the Roman Frontier. In this Expedition he had employed himself mostly in cutting down the Woods, levelling Hills, making the Fens paffable, and building Bridges. One of these last, it is prefumed, may be intended in the Reverse before us; for it has all the Appearance of a Bridge railed on both Sides, over which the Soldiers are passing, defended by Towers at each End. But Patin is positive that it is a Port or Harbour, from the Likeness of it to that which is on Trajan's Coins, and the little Vessel before it, and from its confifting of a fingle Arch; whence he concludes it to be the Harbour of Cæsarea, in Palestine, which Severus restored. To which may be answered, that the Harbour on Trajan's Coin is shut up with a Chain, to, and within, which the Vessel is moored; but that here there is no Chain, but the Boat, agitated by the Rowers, seems to be passing underneath it, to intimate the Depth of the Stream; that the Haven of Cæsarea must have been opened long before; and that, by the Date of this Legend, it is evident that the Coin must have been struck in Consequence of this very Expedition. But that, if, in the Opinion of accurate Judges, it can only be designed for an Harbour, it should rather be looked! for at one End of the Ishmus, between the Friths of Forth and Clyde, at the Place called Camelot, where S. SEVERVS (as Camden fays) there are the Vestigia of a little City, and where the common People believe there was formerly a Road for Ships, and where an Anchor was found some Years ago. The Success of Severus here is commemorated on feveral Coins, which call him SEVERVS PIVS AVG BRITannicus, having the usual Victory on the Reverse, with VICTORIAE BRITANNICAE. Others have two Victories holding a Shield against a Tree, under which are two Captives bound. The same Victory we meet with, as labove, on a Reverse of CARA-CALLA. And as GETA had kept his Part of the Island in Peace, and assisted his Father with the necessary Supplies, we read on his Coins also, Pl. XLIII. 3. around his laureate Head, IMP CAES PISEPT GETA PIVS AVG BRIT, and fee on the Reverse the fame Victory, treading on a Globe, and in- Pl. XLIII. 4. fcribing, on a fixt Shield, the same Legend. But on one he wears a radiated Crown, and the inscribing Victory on the Reverse sits upon a Trophy, with a small round Shield under Foot, such as, according to Tacitus, the Caledonians made use of.

XI

In this Expedition, nothing grieved Severus fo much as the licentious Behaviour of his eldest Son, who would, he feared, be the Murderer of his Brother, whenever it should be in his Power; and who ditte /

Pl. XLIII, 2,

L1 2

had

S. SEVERVS. had lately attempted the Life of his Father. It should seem, however, from the Frontispiece of this Reign, and the Date on the Reverse, that he had at this Time brought about at least a pretended Reconciliation between them. However that be, he had fcarce rested from his Toils, before the Enemy, in Contempt of the late Treaty, committed fresh Hoftilities. This fo enraged him, that he frictly charged his Troops to spare neither Sex nor Age. But, in the Midst of his further Preparations for the War, he died at York, of the Gout, after once more recommending Union to his Sons, and causing the Speech of Micipsa, in Sallust, to be read to them. He was then near fixty-fix Years of Age, and had reigned seventeen Years, eight Months, and three Days. AD and, in I am and id I am and

> He was married to his second Wife before he came to the Empire. This was Julia Domna, fometimes inscribed Julia simply, sometimes Julia Pia, and at others Julia Pia Felix Augustan Being much given to judicial Aftrology, and understanding that this Lady was, by her Horoscope, to be the Wife of a King, he was not eafy till he obtained her. She was a Lady of Beauty and great Parts, but haughty, libidinous, and cunning. Her Figure upon her Medal of Gold, intitled IVLIA DOMNA AVG, is agreeable enough. On the Re-

Pl. XLIII. 5.

Liell

verse

verse she is the VENVS GENETRIX, seated, with S. SEVERVS the Hasta pura, Patera, and a Cupid before her. On her Denarius she is IVLIA AVGVSTA; and the Reverse bears the Figure of HILARITAS, with Pl. XLIII. 6 a long Palm-Branch, and the Hasta pura. There is a fine Reverse of her explained by Mr. Addison: Pl. XLIII. 7 "Her Head is crowned with Towers, in Allusion " to Cybele, the Mother of the Gods, and for the " fame Reason that Virgil compares the City of "Rome to her:

- " Felix prole virûm, qualis Berecynthia mater
- " Invehitur curru Phrygias turrita por urbes,
  - " Læta Deûm partu.

of Belleville

- " High as the Mother of the Gods in Place,
  - " And proud, like her, of an immortal Race:
    - "Then when in Pomp she makes a Phrygian Round,
- "With golden Turrets on her Temples crown'd. DRYDEN.
- "The Vine issuing out of the Urn speaks the same
- " Sense as that in the Pfalmist, Thy Wife shall be
- " as the fruitful Vine on the Walls of thy House.
- " And the four Stars on the Globe represent her
- " four Children," For she had two Daughters, as well as two Sons, by Severus. On feveral more the is also complimented as Cybele, the Mother of the Gods; on others, as the parturient Juno, who is also the Patroness of Childbed Women, seated, Pl. XLIII. with a new-born Child on her Arm, and the Flower of the Lotos in her Hand, a Tree of great Antiquity, which grew in the Area of her Temple at Rome, and was visited with great Veneration: the Pl. XLIII. 9. Legend is IVNONI LVCINAE. S.C. On others she is the LVNA LVCIFERA; as they compared the Emperor to the Sun. As such she shines upon the Roman World with reslected Light, and is Pl. XLIII. 10. sometimes drawn by Horses, as here; and sometimes by Steers, as on a Reverse of Caracalla, to denote her Influence over the fruitful Earth. And Pl. XLIII. 11. on others she is offering Sacrifice before the Ensigns, and denominated MATER CASTRORVM, the Mother of the Camp.

LATEL III III OBJECT

Severus was a Lover of the liberal Arts, and had himself an excellent Understanding; strict in the Administration of Justice, and rigidly punishing all Offences, for he knew not how to pardon; cruel and avaricious, yet destroying no Man for his Wealth; kind to his Friends, most bitter to his Enemies, and careless of what the People said of him. Having corrected many Abuses, and enacted many wholesome Laws, he was better spoken of when dead than living: so that what was said of Augustus, was also applied to him, that he ought not to have been born, or not to have died. His Coins are very numerous, and most of them trite and common. Dr. Mosgrave, in his Belgic Antiquities, reckons them at eighty. But Vaillant has S. Severvs.

OF IMPERIAL ROME.

produced a Catalogue of his Greek Coins only, which exceed that Number by upwards of two hundred.

and down length of VOLUME AND UNITED to good

KINES S

ALIGNA THE PARTY OF THE A

prehed a Conference Light Cins of

BASSIANUS CARACALLA, OR

M. AURELIUS SEVERUS ANTONINUS.

ARACALLA.

1. XLIII. 12.

ARACALLA was in the fourteenth Year of his Tribunitial Power, and had been thrice Conful, when his Father died. Though Geta was Joint-Emperor, he took the whole Administration upon himself, made Peace with the Enemy, and deserted all the Fortifications which his Father had raised. The Father's Death seems to have been Matter of Joy to the Elder, and perhaps to both; since the FORTVNA REDVX seated, with her usual Attributes, which we see on the first-struck Coins of Caracalla, with FORT. RED PM TR

P XIIII COS III PP. forms also a Reverse of GETA, CARACALLA with TR P III COS II PP. Others were intended Pl. XLIII. 1 to publish their Fitness for Empire, as we see the former enthroned, and musing upon the Branch of Laurel, which he holds, with the most considerate Thoughtfulness; and the Prudence of the latter celebrated under the Symbol of Minerva, feeding a Pl. XLIII. 1. Serpent entwined around her Olive-Tree, with the Owl perched upon her Shield, and a Sphinx at her Feet. What I have termed a Sphinx, Dr. Molgrave calls a Griphon; and thence conjectures that Animal to have been facred to Minerva. Patin has passed over this Figure unnoticed, though he has fully evinced the Mistake of Tristan with respect to this Coin. But whosoever shall with Attention consider the last Coin but one, which we have produced under the Reign of M. Aurelius the Philosopher, will fee the Propriety of the Sphinx on that which is before us, and that all the Figures of it are strong Emblems of Wisdom. But CARACALLA shewed little Wisdom in the early Dismission of his old Domestics, the most eminent of whom he put to Death. He would readily have dispatched his own Brother too, but that he feared the Army, to whom Geta was dear. Yet the two Brothers expressed a mutual Benevolence, while they acted with all Contrariety. They had separate Bodies of Vol. II. M m Guards,

CARACALLA.

Guards, which looked upon each other as declared Enemies, and on their Arrival at Rome divided the Palace between them. The eldest, therefore, finding all his Schemes abortive for the Destruction of his Brother, pretended a vehement Defire of being fincerely reconciled to him by the Mediation of their Mother, entreating her, that to this End they might have a Meeting in her Presence, and in her Bedchamber; which was appointed accordingly. Here GETA met him, and was flain in the Arms of his Mother, by some Soldiers placed in Ambush for the Purpose. 'Tis even affirmed, that he embrued his own Hands in his Brother's Blood. This Tragedy completed, he ran towards the Prætorian Camp, crying out all the Way, that "there "was a Conspiracy against him." When there, he was out of Breath with the same loud Complaint; and, before he gave them any Particulars, took Care to affure them, that he came thither with a full Resolution to live and die and share all his Treasures with them. And he did indeed distribute an immense Donative amongst them, making two thousand five hundred Denarii to each Man. It is probable, that to carry on the Diffimu-Jupiter the Preserver; for such we find delineated on his Coins, with IOVI SOSPITATORI. The

Pl. XLIII. 15. lation, he erected a Temple on this Occasion to next Day in the Senate he spake but little, and to CARACALLA the same Purpose; but at his Departure declared all the Exiles restored, whatever their Crimes might be. Thus, though he cleared the Islands of Villains, he foon filled them again with more innocent Persons, and slew in a short Time no fewer than twenty thousand Men and Women, of the Domestics and Soldiers of Geta, as he met with them in the Palace, many illustrious Persons besides, and Papinian amongst the rest. It was instant Death but to mention the Name of GETA. He next, to keep the People in Good humour, applied himself to the public Sports, in which an Elephant, a Rhinoceros, and other wild Creatures, were flaughtered. And these are commemorated on his Coins by the Pl. XLIII. 16 Figure of the first of these Animals, with PM TR P XV COS III PP. S C. But he was chiefly delighted with the Blood of the Gladiators, one of whom he obliged to fight three different Antagonists, and, when he fell by the last, honoured with a pompous Funeral.

The next Year he entered upon the Confulate for the fourth Time, and triumphed over the Britons, as is expressed in the Reverse before us with Pl. XLIII. 17. the quadrigated Car, wherein he stands, displaying the Sceptre and Eagle, while a Victory places the Wreath upon his Head, having the Legend PM TR

P XVI

Mm 2

CARACALLA.

P XVI IMP II COS IIII PP S C. He had before taken upon him the Surname of Britannicus, which we find on his Denarius of the same Year; the Title round his laureate Head being ANTO-NINVS PIVS AVG BRITannicus. The Reverse Pl. XLIII. 18. has the Figure of his favourite Deity Serapis, standing, with PM TR P XVI COS IIII PP. He pretended to emulate the Glory of Alexander the Great, using the same Arms and Furniture, erecting many Statues of him, and collecting a Body of fixteen thousand Macedonians, which he called the Phalanx of Alexander. The Macedonians, pleased with the Distinction, struck Coins in Honour of him, at the Charge of the Community, with an Alexander and Bucephalus on the Reverse, inscribed KOINON MA-ΚΕΔΟΝΩΝ ΝΕΩμορων Β. To the Soldiers he was kind; cruel and oppressive to all others. For, besides innumerable other Exactions, he compelled the Senators, who attended him, to build Houses and fumptuous Inns for him on the Road, at their own Expence, and even Amphitheatres and Circos, where he wintered or expected to winter, many of which he never faw. His first Excursion was into Gaul, where his Cruelties were fuch as rendered him truly detestable. Here recovering from a grievous Fit of Sickness, he imputed his Return of Health to the Benignity of Esculapius, whose Image is impressed upon his Coins, in the Act of raising CARACALLA. him, with the Legend SALus GENeris HVMani; Pl. XLIII. 19. but punished with Death the Physicians who attended him. Being pleased with the Dress of the People, he assumed the long Vest usually worn by them, and known by the Name of Caracalla; which Fashion he carried with him to Rome the next Year, and was thence commonly spoken of by the same Name. He had scarce returned, before he found it necessary to march against the Cenni, a Celtic Nation; of whom at last he shamefully purchased the Liberty of a quiet Retreat through Germany. Yet on this Occasion he assumed the Title of Germanicus, as the Reader may observe on the Frontispiece of this Reign; the Reverse of which is a Compliment to his Mother, representing her as the LVNA LVCIFERA, drawn by Steers. We have Pl. XLIII. 20. his Adlocution to the Army in this Expedition, wherein he displayed Courage enough, but no Generalship. His Coin, as all Things else belonging to him, was adulterated. For, instead of Silver and Gold, he provided for us (fays Dio) Lead filvered over, and Brass gilded. With the pure Metals he purchased the Forbearance of the Barbarians. From Germany he marched through Dacia into Thrace, and crossed the Hellespont. He had a sickly Habit of Body, and a disturbed Imagination, being haunted with

Pl. XLIV. 2.

CARACALLA. with dreadful Visions of his Father and Brother. But at Pergamus, a City famous for the Worship of Esculapius, he hoped for a Cure of all his Maladies. His present Regard for this Deity is expressed on feveral of his Coins. One of them has the Figure of the God with his knotty Staff, on one Side, intimating the Difficulties of the Medical Practice; and the Serpent, the Emblem of Light and Health, on the other: the Legend """ TR P XVIII COS. Pl. XLIV. 1. HII PP. S C. Another has the same Figure, with the Serpent entwined around his Staff, and the little Telesphorus standing by, the Son of Esculapius and Salus, wrapped in a warm Cloak, to intimate the Necessity of keeping Convalescents warm, and treating them as Children. This little Deity was also held in great Veneration by the Pergamenians: the Legend is the same with the former. He is said on his Arrival at Ilium to have personated Achilles, as much as he did Alexander before. But I should rather judge this to be a Mistake; for, besides the Improbability of it, we have Coins struck by the Iliensians at this Time, which compliment him under the Character of their HeEtor, the professed Enemy of Achilles, as this was of the reputed Ancestors of the Romans. These have his laureate

Head, with Αντοκρατωρ ΚΑΙσαρ Μαρκός ΑνΡηλιος ANTONINOC; and for the Reverse, Hector armed Pl. XLIV. 3. with

HE IMPERIAL ROME

begin Belgion, Shield, and Speak, and thin the Maye Shake start the trail of the bold the said of the palied on William of Vice miles where he extremed his observations of the same standard bits of the same standards though any shows the mentions of the last after the transfer of the second Stein Vel principal and the same and the same of the Sor to I also to the second of rund or got a reflect to the second 1200 13 with Helmet, Shield, and Spear, attacking the Navy CARACALLA of the Greeks, and stiled ΕΚΤΩΡ ΙΛΙΕΩΝ. He passed the Winter at Nicomedia, where he exercised his Macedonian Phalanx, and in the Spring marched thence for Antioch. The Privileges of this last City had been transferred by his Father to the Laodiceans; who, to court the Favour of the Son, struck some fine Medallions, expressing the Devotion of the whole Community of Asia to the Person of the Emperor. These have his laureate Head, with Pl. XLIV. 4. ATT. KAI M. ATP. ANTONEINOC CEB. The Afsembly of the Community of Aha forms the Reverse, wherein Lælius Pigres, the principal Asiarch, is crowning those who conquered at the solemn Games which were performed in Honour of it. The Legend is ΛΑΙΛΙΟΌ ΠΙΓΡΗΟ ΑCIAPXIEPEUS ANEΘΗΚΕΝ, Lælius Pigres, principal Aharch, published or consecrated it. Another Reverse has the Mother of the Pl. XLIV. 5. Gods, the Great Deity of Asia, crowned with Towers, and feated between two female Figures, representing Phrygia and Caria: in the Exergue of both, ΛΑΟΔΙΚΕΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ. The Laodiceans are called NEΩKOPOI, as having the honourable Charge of these devotional Solemnities.

The Antiochians received him with all possible Honour, and he stayed amongst them for some Time, enjoying the Delights with which that Place abounded.

CARACALLA.

Pl. XLIV. 6.

Pl. XLIV. 7.

abounded. The Coins, which they struck of him, have, some of them, for the Reverse the Genius of the Colony, with a double Cornucopiæ and Patera, stiled the GENius COLoniæ ANTIOCHensis; others, the God Lunus, as described in the Reign of Antoninus Pius. The Reason given by Casaubon for the Moon's being worshipped as a Male Deity is, because in the oriental Languages it is both Male and Female. But the Greeks also had their MHN, Mensis or Lunus, as well as CEAHNH, Luna; and Orpheus calls it θηλύ τε και άρσεν, Male and Female. The Cock on the Coin was facred to this Deity, as a Time-keeper by his Crowing. The Account which Spartian gives of this Matter is pleasant. " It is," says he, "a received Opinion " amongst the People of Carrhæ," (where was a famous Temple of this God) "that they, who " look upon the Moon as Female, are doomed to "be the Slaves of Women; but that they, who " regard it as a Male Deity, will be Masters of their "Wives, and superior to all female Arts." A Crescent appears behind the Shoulders of Lunus, and the Victory in his Hand holds out a Wreath. The Legend is COLonia CAESarea ANTIOCHIA. From this Place he dispatched his Favourite Theocritus, the Son of a Slave, at the Head of an Army, es of the best of the same

b.Sowode

was foundly beaten.

He now fet his Face towards Egypt. For, having heard that the Alexandrians derided him on many Accounts, but chiefly for having flain his Brother, he marched thither, pretending great Affection for them; and when the principal Citizens in folemn Procession attended him in the Suburbs, he received them graciously, invited them to an Entertainment, and there slew them. He then entered the City with his Troops prepared for Action. The Inhabitants were forbidden to stir out of their Houses, the Soldiers were properly stationed, and the Carnage began. Besides the Alexandrians, a vast Number of Strangers were put to the Sword, as well as of those that came with him, who could not be distinguished. The Bodies of the slain were thrown into deep Pits dug for the Purpose. All Strangers, known to be fuch, were expelled the Place, Merchants excepted, whose Effects were pillaged. The Wealth of the City was partly plundered, and partly lost. All this while he continued in the Temple of Serapis, whence he issued his Orders. But this was a trifling Profanation, when we consider that in this Temple, and to this God, he confecrated the very Sword with which he flew his Brother. It was, perhaps, in Consequence of VOL. II. Nn his

Pl. XLIV. 8.

Pl. XLIV. 9.

CARACALLA. his Familiarity with this Egyptian Jupiter, that the neighbouring Colony of Ptolemais chose it for the Reverse of one of his Coins, crowned with a Bushel, and wielding the Scepter, with COLonia PTOLemais. This done, he abolished all their Diversion and Fraternities, divided the City into two Parts with a Wall and Towers, and cut off the Communication between them by a Garrison planted in each. Such, at Alexandria, were the Feats of this Italian wild Beast: for by this Name, the Oracle is faid to have spoken of him. And he was fo well pleased with the Appellation, that it became the Device of one of his Reverses, on which he is fymbolized by the Figure of a Lion, with a radiated Crown upon his Head, and Thunder in his Jaws: the Legend being PM TR P XVIIII PP. S C.

He next made War upon the Parthians, because their King Artabanus refused him his Daughter in Marriage, by making a fudden Irruption into the Country bordering upon Media, which he laid Waste, demolished several Castles, took Possession of Arbela, where he destroyed the Sepulchres of the Parthian Kings, and scattered their Bones. He met with little or no Resistance, for the Inhabitants fled to the Mountains, and across the Tigris, to prepare for their Defence. Of this he gloried, as a mighty mighty Exploit; remarking, in his Letters to the CARACALLA. Senate, that a Lion descending from the Mountains had fought for him. This might be a further Reason for the Device last mentioned. He was therefore gratified with the Title of PARTHICVS, an Honour which he much coveted; and this pretended Success was commemorated on Medals of Gold, by a Trophy, with two Captives at the Foot of it, and a Victory feated, who is inscribing upon Pl. XLIV. 10. a Shield VOtis XX, the Legend being PM TR P XX COS IIII PP; and in the Exergue VICtoria PARThica. Hence it appears, that the twentieth Year of his Tribunitial Power being now brought round, the Vota Vicennalia, public Sacrifices, and Supplications, were made for the further and profperous Continuation of his Reign.

He took great Delight in Chariot-driving, faying, that he imitated the Sun in his Manner of doing it. Hence he is figured on a Reverse in Bronze, in a PLXLIV. 11, radiated Crown, as driving furiously the four Horses of the Sun, with the Legend PM TR P XX PP SC: and upon one in Gold, he shines as the orient Pl. XLIV. 12, Sun, radiated, and pointing forward in like Manner with one Hand, while he holds the Whip in the other. Yet not wholly content to personate Apollo, we find him on another Reverse in Gold, struck Pl. XLIV. 13about the same Time, as bearing the same Legend, Nn2 reminding

CARACALLA. reminding the World that he was still the Substitute of Jupiter, whose Image is enthroned, with the Patera in his right Hand, and the Hasta pura in his left.

> The Parthians were making the necessary Preparations to revenge the late Infult, when CARACALLA was flain by one of his own Soldiers. He had perfidiously deprived King Abgarus both of his Liberty and Dominions, which he made a Roman Province. and fettled a Colony at Edessa, the Capital; for on one of his Coins the Genius of that City is reprefented as a Queen, with her Head turrited, and the Legend ΚΟΛωνία ΕΔΕCCA. From this Place he was journeying towards Carrha, to pay his Devotions to their God Lunus, when his Fate overtook him. An African had foretold that MACRINUS (who was then joint Captain of the Prætorian Guards with Adventus) and his Son Diadumenianus, were deftined to be Emperors. The Man was fent to Rome, where he declared the same Thing before Maternianus, Commander of the City Guards, who wrote an Account of it to the Emperor, which was delivered to the Empress Julia, at Antioch. But a like Account was forwarded directly to MACRINUS, from his Friend Ulpius Julian, then Cenfor. So that MACRINUS, having received his Advices first, faw the Necessity of perishing, or preventing it by the two of the Emperor. He therefore engaged two of the Tribunes, and some Soldiers, one of whom was Martialis, a discontented Veteran, in a Conspiracy against him. On the fixth of the Ides of April, then, as he rode, having been obliged, by a Call of Nature, to dismount, Martialis advanced forward, as to speak to him, and with a small Dagger gave him the mortal Stab. Thus fell. Caracalla, in the thirtieth Year of his Age, after having reigned, since the Death of his Father, six Years, two Months, and as many Days.

Pl. XLIV. 14.

MARCUS OPELIUS SEVERUS MACRINUS.

ACRINVS.

Tyrant could well be worse, was yet exceedingly beloved by the Soldiers in general; to enrich whom he had impoverished all the Roman World beside. One of them had pierced Martialis with an Arrow, and slain him. This prevented all Discovery; otherwise Macrinus had scarce succeeded. As it was, they spent two whole Days in Deliberation, and then declared him Emperor. In Return he made them a very large Donative, as did his Son Diadumenianus, to whom was given the Name of Antoninus, with the Title of Cæsar, and Prince of the Youth. As such he appears on his Denarius, with Marcus OPELius ANToni-MACRINVS nus DIADVMENIANus CAESar. On the Reverse Pl. XLIV. 15 he stands between an Eagle and two Ensigns, with PRINCeps IVVENTVTIS. The same we have in Bronze. But on one Reverse, with the same Le- Pl. XLIV. 16 gend, an Eagle and Enfign are fixed behind him, and there is the SC in the Exergue; for this Dignity was confirmed to him by the Senate. Himself took the Name of Severus; and on one of his Coins, mentioned by Goltzius, is that of Aurelius also. On the Reverse of his Denarius, where he Pl. XLIV. 17. stands with an Enfign in one Hand, and a Manipulus in the other, we find him invested with the Titles of PONTIFex MAXimus TRibunitiæ Potestatis COSul, & PP Pater Patrie. And in the Frontispiece, copied from his Medal of Gold, which calls him IMPerator Caesar Marcus OPELius SEVerus MACRINVS AVGustus, doing grateful Justice to the Fidelity of the Army, which had raised him to that envied Height; who on the Reverse rests her Pl. XLIV. 18. Foot upon a Casque or Helmet, while she holds fast an Eagle and an Ensign, and is termed the FIDES MILITVM. On another Reverse in Bronze, Pl. XLIV. 19. as on a Denarius likewise, we see his Acknowledgments to Jupiter the Preserver, who is figured standing, with the Hasta pura in his left Hand, while the Emperor stands safely shielded under his right Arm, the

MACRINVS.

the Hand of which grasps the Thunder; and the Legend is IOVI CONSERVATORI. Person of much Good-Nature, he wrote kindly to the Empress Julia, then at Antioch, and in no Respect abridged her of her State, till informed of her Attempts upon the Soldiery. She was then ordered to leave the Place. This she could by no Means brook, but beat her Breaft fo as to aggravate a Cancer there; by the Spreading of which, and her own Wilfulness, she died starved. His Predecessor he deified, to please the Army. Inscription of his Confecration-Medal in Goltzius is, DIVO ANTONINO MAGNO.

The Senate readily confirmed the Choice of the Army, not so much considering who should succeed, as whom they were delivered from. For they judged any Emperor preferable to the last. They conferred upon him, therefore, the usual Honours, declared his Family Patrician, his Son CESAR, and his Wife Nonia Celsa, a Woman of lewd Character, Augusta.

The Parthian Monarch was now advancing to the Roman Territories. To him MACRINUS fent Ambassadors, informing him of the Death of Ca-RACALLA, to whom only the late Hostilities were to be imputed. But that Prince infifted upon the Reparation of all that had been demolished, the Surrender

render of the Country as far as to the Euphrates, MACRINV and the Indemnification of his Subjects. As these Terms could not be complied with, both Sides made Haste to finish the Dispute by the Sword, and the Parthians were superior in two Encounters. Their King, however, who thought to have carried all before him, grew cooler from the Resistance which he met with, fo that a Peace was granted to, or rather purchased by, MACRINUS; for it cost him an immense Sum to Artabanus and his principal Courtiers. Yet this was looked upon, and perhaps justly enough, as equivalent to a Victory. In Consequence of it, the Surname of Parthicus, and a Triumph, were decreed to him. Hence on one of his Reverses we have a Victory, seated upon an Heap Pl. XLIV. of Arms, with a Shield resting upon her Knee, and the Legend VICToria PARTHica PM TR P II PP S C; and his Triumph on another, which Pl. XLV. 2 shews him in his quadrigated triumphal Car, with a Branch of Laurel in his Hand, and a Victory behind him, with a Palm-Branch in one Hand, and with the other placing a Wreath upon his Head; although Circumstances did not admit of his enjoying that Honour at Rome.

This done, he repaired to Antioch, where he made many excellent Regulations, but seems to have been somewhat too severe in the Punishment Vol. II. 00

MACRINUS. of Crimes. Yet merciful he was; and even favourable, to several who conspired against himself. His great Failing was, that, being of mean Descent, he paid too little Regard to Persons of Rank and Family, though of transcendent Worth; and preferred chiefly fuch as were of low Degree and little Merit. And, to conceal in some Measure his: original Meanness, he affected now an extraordinary Delicacy and luxurious Way of Life; for he had fome Reason to think himself established, being at Peace with the Parthians, respected by the Senate, and having no Competitor. Several Coins were therefore struck, recording the Security and Felicity of the Times. Of the first Sort is the following, with his Pl. XLV. 1. laureate Head, and IMP CAES M OPEL SEV Pl. XLV. 2. MACRINVS AVG, having on the Reverse a Goddess, standing, with the Hasta pura, and resting her left Arm upon a standing Column. We have the Pl. XLV. 3. fame Figure upon another Reverse, and there it is explained by the Legend SECVRITAS TEMPO-RVM. But on another, this imaginary Deity is Pl. XLV. 4. crowned with the Diadem and enthroned. Of the latter Sort is that which bears the Figure of this Felicity, with the Hasta pura in her left, and the Pl. XLV. 5. Caduceus in her right Hand, being named the FELI-CITAS TEMPORVM. But this supposed Felicity and Security bred Danger; for, in Confidence . thereof, thereof, he grew extremely rigid to the Soldiers MACRINV in Point of Discipline, resolving to reduce them to the ancient Pay, by admitting no new ones upon other Terms; obliging them to encamp in Winter, and inuring them to Hardships, such as CARACALLA had estranged them to. This raised a Spirit of Discontent and Mutiny amongst them, which was much heightened by Whispers, that he had contrived the Death of his Predecessor. Of this Spirit, MASA, the Sister of the late Empress Julia, took Advantage. Her Wealth, Experience, Address, and Intrepidity, were all extraordinary. She now lived at Emela, in the Neighbourhood of the Camp, with her two Grandsons, Avitus about fourteen Years old, and Alexianus about ten. Here was a magnificent Temple of the Sun, called in the Language of the Country Elagabalus, to whom the eldest of them was constituted Priest. He had a most graceful Person, and was viewed with much Regard by the Soldiers, who frequented the Temple. But their Devotion for him rose immensely, when they were informed that he was the Son of their late Emperor, by her Daughter Sozmias, and that she had both the Power and Will to reward liberally all those who should distinguish themselves in his Favour. This was sufficient. She and her Grandson were conveyed to the Camp, where he

0 .

002

was

the Name of MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS.

Against these Revolters, MACRINUS dispatched Julianus, a Captain of the Guards, with a chosen Body of Troops; who murdered their Commander, and went over to the Enemy. On this he declared his Son DIADUMENIANUS Augustus, and endeavoured to confirm his Troops by a fresh Largess. The young Man was now twelve Years of Age, well made, of exquisite Beauty, and a most engaging Aspect. On the Reverse before us, he appears as the Public Hope, holding out the Lilly in his right Hand, and tucking up his Robe with the left, as making Haste to gratify the general Expectation. The Legend is SPES PVBLICA. But alas! this was but decorating the Victim. For it was scarce done, before the Camp at Apamea declared also for Avitus; who, with this Accession of Strength, marched instantly for Antioch, and was met by MACRINUS, at the Head of the Prætorians. In this Action the Revolters were upon the Point of being defeated; but the Battle was quickly restored by the aftonishing Courage of the young Avitus, and of his Mother and Grandmother, who shared the Danger, and by their Behaviour Arangely inspirited the Troops. On this Turn, MACRINUS was defeated by his own Timidity. He turned his Horse and

PL XLV. 6.

and fled; and his Forces, feeing themselves deferted, and being courted at the same Time with large Promises, declared at length for Avitus. Macrinus and his Son, being soon after discovered, were put to Death, and their Heads presented to the Conqueror. From his Election by the Army, to this satal Battle, was an Interval of one Year, two Months, and three Days. His Coins of the smaller Size are pretty common, but the larger very valuable, as are all those of Diadumenianus. This Emperor has not had common Justice done him by his Biographer, Julius Capitolinus.

and for the line forces from a tele-

VARIUS AVITUS BASSIANUS ELAGABALUS,

O R

MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS.

ELAGABALVS.

Antioch, and wrote to the Senate, promising to conform, in all Things, to the Example of Augustus and Marcus Antoninus, whose Name he had assumed. From them therefore he received the usual Honours, and appears accordingly on Medals of Gold, with his Head laureated, and the Inscription IMP CAES M AVR ANTONINUS AVG, having on the Reverse a Victory, entitled VICTORIA ANTONINI AVG. The Battle was gained on the seventh of June; and on the first of the next ELAGABALVS. Month he took upon him the Office and Dignity of Conful. As fuch he entered Nicomedia, where he wintered, in his triumphal Habit, on the Day of the votive Games. His Arrival at Rome is celebrated on the Reverse before us, which shews him on Horseback, pointing to the City, with AD-VENTUS AUGUSTI. S.C. He had promifed, and he kept his Word, entirely to forget what had passed at Rome before the Death of MACRINUS, where himself and his Family had been declared public Enemies. But he was not fo favourable to those, who in the East had scrupled to submit at first to his Authority; since, for this Reason, he had put to Death the Governors of Arabia, Syria, and Cyprus. The City of Tarsus, which had sided with Macrinus, was divested of its Honour as a Metropolis, and its Privileges were transferred to Anazarbus, as appears by a Reverse of Julia Cor-NELIA PAULA, one of the Wives of this Emperor. Augustus had been particularly favourable to this City, for which Reason the Inhabitants for some Time called it Dio Casarea; and, to shew their Gratitude, impressed upon this Coin the Sign Capricorn, with a Globe beneath it; which was the Device of Augustus himself, who thought that he was born under this Sign to the Government of the World.

Pl. XLV. 7.

Pl. XLV. 8.

Pl. XLV. 9.

ELAGABALVS. World. The Legend, which has greatly perplexed the Medallifts, is ANAZAPBEΩN ΜΗΤΡΟΠολίτων AMK; which Vaillant in one Place reads anaon moun Κιλικιας, and renders Prima Sola Cilicia, as having the fole Primacy of Cilicia: but this is not Medallic Language, nor is the Word ἀπασα any where used in this Sense. But in his Epochs he seems to consider it, not as an Initial, but as a Numerical, and reads it Primæ; which is contrary to all Medallic Rule and Method. It is better, therefore, to concur with Tristan, and Patin after him, who read it AMaviung Kidikias; and so it is the Coin of the Anazarbites, the Metropolitans of Cilicia Amanica. But there is a further Knot, which these two last Antiquarians have declared themselves unable to untie. For in the Area are the Letters T B, which Vaillant reads Γραμματι Βελης, explaining it Senatus Consulto. But I believe it will not be possible to bring one Instance, from the whole Treasury of ancient Coins, to justify this Reading. But if we will but allow the Γ to be an L inverted, the Explanation then is ready, and it is the second Year of the Emperor's Reign.

He introduced the Worship of his God at Rome, as is expressed on one of his Silver Coins, which exhibits the Deity, seemingly no other than a Globe or Dife, or, according to some, a black Stone, round on one Side, and fashioned gradually thin on ELAGABALVS. the other, like a Wedge, furrounded with Standards, in a quadrigated Car, with the Legend SANCTo Pl. XLV. 10. DEO SOLI; and in the Exergue, ELAGABAL. The Deity thus denominated was the Sun, to which the Orientalists imputed the Creation of the World. Famblichus says of him, that έποιησε τες κοσμες, he made the Worlds; and on the Egyptian Obelifc, interpreted by Ammianus, he is called the o etisns της διχεμενης, Conditor Mundi. This agrees perfectly with the Name here given, which Herodian fays is Phænician, and therefore must be the אל בכל, El Gabal, Deus Creator; whence the Emperor himself came to be denominated ELAGABALUS; by which Name we shall henceforth speak of him. Of this Deity he ordered himself to be confirmed the Priest by a Decree of the Senate. In this Habit and Office we fee him upon feveral of his Coins. In that before us, he is facrificing to this Luminary, which appears above the Arm that holds the Patera. The Reader is defired to remark, that the Legend of this is PM TR P V COS IIII PP. His Denarius, which was struck the Year before, has the same Figure; except that, instead of the Herculean Club in the first, he bears in this a Branch of Laurel in his left Hand. In another Denarius there is the same Figure, with a Bull at the Foot of the V.ol. II. Altar,

round

Pl. XLV. 11.

Pl. XLV. 12.

Pl. XLV. 13.

ELAGABALVS. Altar, as in the first-mentioned, only here the Legend is INVICTVS SACERDOS AVG. One in Bronze accords with this, only the Victim is wanting, and the Legend is SACERDos DEISOLIS ELAGAbali, with the S C. To the Temple which he erected for his God he conveyed, or endeavoured to convey, the Palladium, the eternal Fire, the Ancilia, and all that was held facred in Rome; as he did also the Statue of Urania, the Goddess of the Carthaginians, which he fent for on Purpose. For, pretending that his God wanted a Wife, he made Choice of this Mate for him, and made this fantastic Marriage the Occasion of exacting nuptial or dotal Contributions throughout all the Dominions of the Empire.

> Contributions he had need of; for his Extravagancies were unexampled. His Apparel was the richest that could be procured, and loaded with Tewels, yet never twice put on. The Apparatus of his Table, and his Furniture in general, was pure Gold; and the former was commonly prefented to his Guests at their Departure after Sup-Every Thing that appeared about him was answerable to this; and Invention itself was racked to contrive the most chargeable and costly Viands, not only for himself, but even for his Horses, Dogs, and other Animals. It were tedious to relate the feveral several Particulars of his boundless Prodigality, and ELAGABALYS hard to believe them, as they are recounted at length by Lampridius.

His Extravagancies of another Sort were equal to these. For he introduced his Grandmother into the Senate, had her Name incolled as one of their Number, and she assisted at their Debates. She was declared Augusta, and Coins were struck of her, inscribed IVLIA MAESA AVG; on the Reverse of which she represents the Felicity of the Age, with a Caduceus in one Hand, and a Patera in the other, with an Altar before her, the Legend being SAECVLI FELICITAS S C. On this, as on most of the Coins relating to him, the Sun appears in the Area. To do Honour to his Mother Sommias, he instituted a Senate of Women for her to preside in, where the several Points of Fashion, Equipage, and Ceremony, proper to the Ladies, were deliberated and settled. She appears on her Denarius, with Pl. XLV. 15. the Title of IVLIA SOAEMIAS AVG; and on the Reverse, in the Character of the VENVS CAELESTIS, standing, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, a Globe in the other, and the Sun behind her. But on one of her Reverses in Bronze, she Pl. XLV. 16. is feated, with a Cupid before her, who feems in play to catch at the Ball or Globe which she holds in her right Hand.

Pl. XLV. 14.

ELAGABALVS.

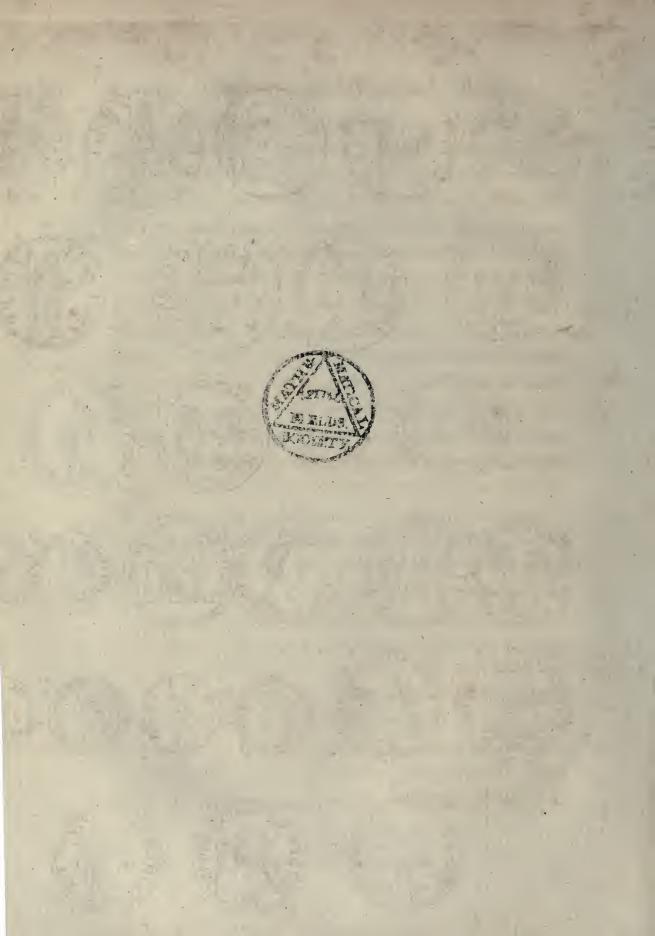

Pl. XLV. 17.

Pl. XLV. 19.

His first Wife was Annia Faustina, the Wife of Pomponius Baffus, and the Grand-daughter of MARCUS AURELIUS. She was a Lady of great Beauty; for which Reason chiefly her Husband was put to Death by ElaGabalus. On her Coins the is ANNIA FAVSTINA AVGVSTA; and on the Reverse their Hands are joined, with the Legend CONCORDIA. This was foon repudiated, and Julia Paula taken in her Stead. She also is Pl. XLV. 18. IVLIA PAVLA AVG S C; and her CONCORD is feated, with a double Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, and a Globe in the right, over which is the Sun. But this too was foon obliged to-give Place to one of the Vestal Virgins, called on her Medal IVLIA AQVILIA SEVERA AVGS C, whose CONCORDis fashioned as the other, but is standing, and has an Altar with Fire burning before her, as a Vestal, and the Sun behind her. The Coins of all these Ladies, Mæsa excepted, are rare. But her he retained not long, marrying a fourth, and after that another and another, and then again returning to Aquilia. At the state of the

On his Marriage with PAULA he made Presents to the Senatorian and Equestrian Orders, and to the Wives of the Senators, and gave a Congiary to the People and the Soldiers, which on one of his Silver Pl. XLV. 20. Medals is called the LIBERALITAS AVG III, who has a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, with a Tessera in Elagabalvis the right, and the Sun underneath. Gladiatorian Shews were also given, at which he appeared in a purple Robe as a triumphant Conqueror. He had no foreign War, and could therefore have no real Triumph. To some one of these Appearances we must therefore impute the Reverse before us, struck Pl. XLVI.-1. in his fecond Confulate, into which he entered on the first Day of the new Year after his Accession. On the Car we may distinguish the Gems, and other brilliant Ornaments, with which he was fond of distinguishing his Carriages. In the Amphitheatre. many wild Beafts were slain, particularly an Elephant, and one-and-fifty Tigers; a greater Number than ever had been killed before at one Time.

His Cruelty was equal to that of his pretended Father; for he put to Death his best Friends, and those who, under MASA, had been the principal Instruments of his Exaltation, for giving him good Advice. He is even faid to have used magical-Arts, and offered human Sacrifices, employing Agents throughout Italy to pick up young Persons for this diabolical Purpose. Yet he was not ashamed to publish himself to the World as the Restorer of: Liberty, by having Coins decreed to him, which represent this Blessing under the Symbol of a Goddess, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and with the other LIBERTAS AVGVSTI. The Sun is feen in the Area of this also.

But Lust was the predominant Vice of ELAGA-BALUS. He not only frequented the public Stews, but made a Brothel of the Palace, in which he appeared publicly naked, acting the Strumpet, and with effeminate Voice inviting those that passed; while his Mother played the Prostitute in a different Part of it. The Historians commonly call him Sardanapalus; too good a Name for fuch a Monster. For the Affyrian Monarch only wasted his Time, like other Eastern Princes, amongst his Women: but this polluted Wretch was the abandoned Pathic of his own vile Slaves. In Fact, he made himself to be called a Woman, was faluted by the Names of Lady and Queen, and as fuch took an Husband, called Hierocles, a Slave and Chariot-Driver. This Fellow was in fuch high Favour, that his Power was absolute; and his Mother, who was but a Maid-Servant, was brought to Rome with a military Guard, and ranked among the Confular Matrons. He determined even to make him Cæfar, maugre the Opposition of the Soldiers, and bitterly menaced his Grandmother for thwarting him in this Project. By her, however, he was at length and with Difficulty perfuaded to adopt his Coufin Alexianus:

Alexianus; which he pretended to do at the Insti- ELAGABALYS. gation of his God ELAGABALUS, who also had charged him (as he faid) to give him the Name of Alexander. But afterwards, seeing the Eyes and Affections of all Men directed to the young Gafar, he repented of this Adoption, and attempted his Destruction several Times, though not without Danger to himself; for he was exceedingly beloved by the Soldiers, and most carefully watched by his Mother. The Prætorians were fo enraged, that they obliged him to deliver up most of his profligate Favourites; and were hardly induced to spare Hierocles, though he begged him off with many Prayers and Tears, offering them his own Throat. But still proceeding to practife against his Cousin, fresh Tumults arose; and, when both of them were in the Camp together, broke out into actual Violence between the two Parties. Most of his Attendants were flain; and himself fled, with his-Mother, to the filthiest Part of the Camp for Safety, where they were both found, and flain together. Their dead Bodies were dragged naked through the Streets; and his own, with a Weight fastened to it, was afterwards thrown into the Tiber. Dio Cassius gives him a Reign of only three Years, nine Months, and four Days, and is herein followed by others. But Victor says that he was flain in the thirtieth Month

ELAGABALVS. Month of his Reign. But Herodian is nearer the Truth, when he gives him a Reign of fix Years; as some of his Coins are dated TR P V. He was a Devil, fays Mr. Walker, in the Shape of an Hermaphrodite, a Prodigy of Impiety, Villainy, Lust, Debauchery, Gluttony, and Cruelty. His Goins are distinguished from those of CARACALLA by the youthful smooth Aspect, by the IMP prefixed to his Inscriptions, and by the * which is commonly feen upon them. · Long the to the transfer country Supplier taris see I or broom, altered where the property will wish Alegera, through to some interest the some Performance Louis - Westing to - 1.0 . . - Thought and I are the many = and county the man frulk from an acting and - pay but it was about he did Comp to take bride out total strait The Are the bounded in the Local March of the art-

the state and a single of the same of the Mariney to step fill polt Del of the Comp beet in patient There are with the line with the an rate senter all dyanes design to perhant about his risky

The Alter of Strong inner to Like and the little gives him a Reign of each than Year, about the the and I see Days and is from to believed by or hims

Month

the Pather Care that he are there in the Chinester MARCUS

MARCUS AURELIUS SEVERUS ALEXANDER.

N the Death of ELAGABALUS, the Soldiery and ALEXA Senate were unanimous in declaring ALEX-ANDER his Successor. The Fathers, who conferred upon him at once all the Imperial Honours, would have dignified him also with the Surnames of Antoninus and Magnus, both which he refused; the first, because it had been so polluted by that filthy Beaft, as he called him, whom he fucceeded; and the last, as by no Means worthy of it. He was content however to prefix to that of Alexan-DER the Names of MARCUS, AURELIUS, and SEVERUS, which appear on one of his first Medals of Gold, Pl. XLVI. 2. VOL. II. which Qq

ALEXANDER which has for its Reverse Jupiter with the Hasta SEVERVS. pura in his left Hand, his right grasping the Thunder, with PM TR P COS PP. For he was the late Emperor's Colleague in the Confulate of this Year. His triumphant Passage from the Senate on this Occasion forms also a Reverse in Gold, with the same Legend: for it represents him in his quadrigated Car, with the Hasta pura, and a Branch of Laurel, the Scepter and Eagle being only proper to Conquerors. Zosimus observes of him, that, being yet a Youth, and of an excellent Disposition, he so behaved that all Men conceived well-grounded Hopes of his Government; which were therefore made by the Senate the Device of fome of his Coins, with IMP ALEXANDER PIVS AVG, and a Female-Figure holding up a Lilly, with her Robe tucked up for Expedition, as on the Reverse of DIADUMENIANUS. His Life had been so much in Danger, that one of his Reverses is properly consecrated to Jupiter the Preserver; Pl. XLVI. 5. who is figured as on the first-mentioned Medal, with an Eagle before him, and the Legend IOVI CON-SERVATORI. The Fidelity of the Soldiers too, who had been the Instruments of his Safety, deferved to be commemorated at the same Time, so that, while he is offering Sacrifice to Jupiter, one Pl. XLVI. 6. of them is represented crowning him with a Wreath of Laurel, and the Legend is FIDES MILITYM. ALEXANDER SEVERYS. The Tranquillity of the Time was also celebrated by the Figure of Peace, with the Olive-Branch in one Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other, entitled the PAX AVGVSTISC; but she is in quick Motion, as not likely to stay long under a Prince who professed to emulate the Glory of the Macedonian Hero, at the same Time that he condemned his Intemperance and Cruelty to his Friends. In Confequence of this Profession, he is figured like him on several of his Coins, sometimes with his Head covered with an Helmet, and fometimes with a Lion's Skin, as in the Frontispiece. But for the present, all his Diligence was necessary to reform the Evils which had crept into the Civil Government. Freedmen and Slaves, Buffoons and Eunuchs, Catamites and Gladiators, had of late Days engroffed all the Power and Honours of the Commonwealth. These were not only banished the Court and City; but most of the Governors of Provinces, preferred by ELAGABALUS, were removed, and replaced by Persons of Courage, Integrity, and Wisdom. In the second Year of his Reign, he married Sulpicia Memmia, stiled on her Coins Augusta, whose Father was of Consular Rank: on which Occasion, Medals of Gold were struck, having for the Reverse a Venus Victrix, with the Hasta

Pl. XLVI. 3.

Pl. XLVI. 4.

1 - WN

Pl. X.LVI. 7.

Pl. XLVI. 8.

SEVERVS.

Pl. XLVI. 9.

ALEXANDER pura, and a Branch of Laurel, with PM TR P II COS PP. It appears from another Reverse in Silver, that he was, at least for some Part of this Year, Conful for the fecond Time; for it has the Figure of Pallas holding out a Victory, in Compliment to the young Emperor's military Prudence, and the Legend PONTIF MAX. TR P II COS II PP. His Piety to his Mother and Grandmother was most exemplary, whose Counsel was of the greatest Use to him. The first had as much Prudence, and the last as much Probity (which is Prudence too in the best Sense) as any Women of the Age. We see the Head of the former joined with his own on some Coins, struck in Honour of the Emperor by the Inhabitants of Tucca Terebentina, in the Neighbourhood of Carthage, which have

Pl. XLVI. 10. for the Reverse, AFaIn WXH TEPEBENTINON KAPXEΔΩNιων, the Good Fortune of the Carthaginian Terebentines; and of the latter, with IMP SEV

ALEXAND AVG behind the one, and IVLIA Pl. XLVI. 11. MAMMAEA AVG behind the other, and subscribed MATER AVGusti. Other Coins of this Empress have a Group of Figures on the Reverse. That which is feated, Patin supposes to have been intended for Mammæa, and observes her Form to be

Pl. XLVI. 12. fo well copied, that one Drop of Water is not more like another; that behind, he adjudges to MÆSA; and and those which stand by to MEMMIA, and the Em- ALEXANDER peror's Sister Theoclia: the Legend FELICITAS SEVERVS. PERPETVA. But on her Denarius, which is beau- Pl. XLVI. 13. tiful, there is only one female Figure, leaning on a standing Column, and holding a Caduceus, which is stiled the FELICITAS PVBLICA. By their Advice he chose a standing Council of fifty Persons (the Number required for a legal Senate) nor ever published any Constitution without the Approbation of at least twenty of the most eminent Lawyers, nor discussed any military Business without the Prefence of the ablest and most deserving Officers, and the best acquainted with Places, Camps, and Action. Sixteen of the gravest and most experienced Senators were always of this Council: and Ulpian, the celebrated Civilian, was made Commander of the Prætorian Guards.

Many ancient Buildings he restored, and founded many new, particularly the magnificent Baths, called by his Name, of Porphyry and Lacedæmonian Marble: a Part of which appears on the Reverse Pl. XLVI. 14, before us, with PM TR P V COS II PP. At this Time Artaxerxes had restored the Persian Empire, and entered Mesopotamia with an Army; but laying Siege to Atra, a City which had heretofore baffled all the Endeavours of TRAJAN, he found himself fo weakened by a tedious and unfuccessful Siege, that

ALEXANDER that he was obliged to retreat to his own Domi-SEVERVS. nions.

One principal Care of Alexander was the Restitution of the ancient Discipline; of which the Soldiers were fo impatient, that they murdered their Commander Ulpian, even in the Presence of the Emperor. But Vengeance was speedily taken for this Insolence. Much Discontent also reigned in the Armies abroad. In the East great Numbers deserted to the Persian, after having slain Heracleo their General. They even attempted to fet up another Emperor, who fled from them, and was drowned in the Euphrates. Another was defeated and taken. And another, whom the Prætorians intended to raife, made his Escape from them, and was not heard of afterwards. These Distempers were only to be cured by Action, which some Troubles in Germany called for. At the fame Time another Pretender to the Empire started up. This was Ovinius Camillus, a Senator of high Rank, whom the Emperor treated with unexampled Humanity. Instead of punishing, he caressed, honoured, and professed Obligations to him for intending to share with him the weighty Business of the Empire; allotted him a Part of the Palace, and his Guards, as his real Copartner. And now that an Expedition was necessary, he offered him the sole Command, Command, and on his Refusal, requested his As- ALEXANDER fistance. They began their March on Foot, but at the End of five Miles Camillus was tired, and unable to proceed. At the Entreaty of ALEXANDER he mounted his Horse, but bore not for more than two Days the Fatigue of this. A Chariot was then provided, but his Ambition was now cured. He refigned his Pretenfions, and retired into the Country unmolested. This Expedition was successful; fince in his third Confulate, in which Dio Cassius, the Historian, was his Colleague, we find him passing to the Capitol in his triumphal quadrigated Pl. XLVI. 15. Car. But instead of an Eagle rifing from the Sceptre as usual, a Trophy is held up, and the Legend is PM TR P VIII COS III PP S C.

The Persians now meditated a fresh Invasion, and ALEXANDER determined to take the Field against them. On this Occasion his Denarius was struck, Pl. XLVI. 16. with IMP ALEXANDER PIVS AVG around his laureate Head, which has for its Reverse the MARS VLTOR armed, and moving to Action. All was done, that human Forefight could judge necessary, to ensure Success. Fresh Musters were made in all the Provinces, great Store of Military Engines were got ready, Magazines of Provisions and Arms established, and a vast Number of Carriages, Horses, and Mules collected, to render the Marches expeditious and eafy.

SEVERVS. Pl.-XLVI. 17.

ALEXANDER eafy. Hence his Reverse, which is called the PROVIDENTIA AVGufti, with a Cornucopiæ, and adding Ears of Corn to a Magazine which is before her. He fixed the Day for his Departure, when public Sacrifices were offered; and he left Rome, the Senate and all the People attending him without the Gates to take a folemn Leave of him. He parted from them, looking back upon the City with Tears in his Eyes; nor was there one of that vast Multitude that beheld his Departure without Sorrow.

Pl. XLVI. 18.

On one of his Reverses he is on Horseback, with the Spear in his Hand, beginning his March, and it is termed the PROFECTIO AVGVSTI S. C. His Army was numerous and well disciplined. Part had their Shields glittering with Gold and Silver, in Imitation of the Argyraspides of Alexander the Great. He had his Phalanx too, confisting of fix incorporated Legions, making an impenetrable Body of thirty thousand Warriors: so that the Number in a Legion at this Time was five thousand. While he rested at Antioch, some of the Soldiers were confined for their dissolute Behaviour with the Prostitutes of Daphne; on which the whole Legion mutinied. The intrepid Emperor exposed his Person to their Rage, and assured them of his fixed Resolution to maintain, at all Events, the ancient Discipline. Their repeated Clamours, and Menaces with drawn Swords,

Swords, were most violent and furious. "If," said ALEXANDER he, "ye are brave indeed, exert yourselves thus Severvs. "against the Enemy; ye cannot terrify me. Should " ye kill me, fingle as I am, ye cannot escape Ven-"geance, while there is a Commonwealth, a Senate, " or a Roman People existing." When, nevertheless, the same horrible Outrage continued, he cried out, with a Tone of Authority, "Citizens, be gone, " and lay down your Arms." This acted like a Charm. They instantly threw down their Arms and Uniforms, and retired to different Inns, instead of the Camp. They were, however, on the Intercession of many, and their own Repentance, reinstated before he set forward, and atoned for this Disobedience by their future Fidelity and Bravery: but their principal Officers were punished with Death for their Negligence and Connivance. Artaxerxes met him with a far more numerous Host. Of the Event the Emperor informed the Senate, when he triumped on his Return, in these Words: " Conscript Fathers, we have conquered the Per-" fians: there needs no Eloquence. 'Tis fufficient, " to inform you what their Arms and Apparatus; " were; seven hundred Elephants having Towers se filled with Archers. Of these we took three " hundred, eighteen of which we have brought " with us. Two hundred were flain. Eighteen Vol. II. " hundred Rr

ALEXANDER

- " hundred Chariots, armed with Scythes; of which
- we could have brought with us, had it been ne-
- " ceffary, two hundred whose Horses were slain.
- " We have defeated one hundred and twenty thou-
- fand Cavalry, and have cut in Pieces ten thou-
- " fand Cuirassiers, with whose Armour we have
- " covered our own Troops. A Multitude of Per-
- " fians have we taken and fold. Mesopotamia, neg-
- " lected by that polluted Beast, we have recovered.
- " Artaxerxes, the most potent Monarch in Reality,
- " as well as Name, we have vanquished and put
- " to Flight. Persia has seen him flying, and where
- " our Enfigns were taken, there he fled and loft
- " his own." On this Occasion the Circensian Sports were exhibited, as expressed in the Reverse of the Frontispiece, and a "Congiary was given to the People. Four Times did he exercise this Liberality, as is intimated on different Coins. On one of them a female Figure stands, with the Lap gathered, a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand and a Teffera in the right. On a fecond, the Distribution is made in the

Emperor's Presence. The Legend of both is the fame, LIBERALITAS AVGVSTI IIIISC. This

Pl. XLVII. 1. Success is celebrated on a Silver Medal by a Victory alate, resting one Foot upon a Globe, entitled VIC-TORIA AVGVSTI, and inscribing on a Shield VOT X. For his first Decennial Term was now hostony 2 compleated.

Pl. XLVI. 19, 20.

WELLER RIAL RUNNE

and produced the state of the control of the contro

THE RESERVE OF THE RE

State of the party of the party

compleated. Herodian has endeavoured to cloud ALEXANDER the Glory of this Transaction, and throughout this whole Reign hath shewn himself a partial Historian, from Prejudice to this most excellent Emperor.

He now continued at Rome for some Time, cultivating the Arts of Peace. Amidst other Regulations, that of the Finances was a principal Concern. And the Oeconomy of his Houshold was such, and he so wisely disposed the Civil and Military Establishments, as to reduce the Taxes to a thirtieth Part of what was paid before. For they who paid ten Aurei under his Predecessor, now paid only the third Part of a fingle one. But this was done gradually. First of all Semi-Aurei were coined, and after that, when the Payment was reduced to a third Part of the Aureus, Pieces of that Value, called Tremisses, were stamped; the Emperor declaring that he would, if possible, bring it down to a Quarter-Piece. And fuch indeed were coined by his Orders. But as the Exigencies of the State would not admit of any further Reduction, they were again melted down. The Aureus, or Solidus of Gold, was worth two Ounces of Silver. Six of them made an Ounce of Gold, and seventy-two a Pound of twelve Ounces. The Pound of Silver weighed a Mina, and contained ninety-six Drachms, or ninety-four Denarii.

ALEXANDER was divided also into twelve Ounces; the Ounce Severys. into two Staters; the Stater into two Sicilici; and the Sicilicus into two Drachms. The Ounce of Silver was worth ten Pounds of Brass; so that twenty Pounds of Brass Money were equal to the Aureus in Value. Elagabalus had coined larger Pieces of Gold, from the Value of two, three, four, and even ten Aurei, to an hundred and upwards; but all these were now called in and melted down, to be recoined in the smaller Forms. This Regulation Pl. XLVII. 2. gave Birth to two Reverses; on one of which we see the Goddess Moneta, with her Cornucopiæ and the Scales, from which the Gold showers copiously, with the Legend MONeta RESTITVTA; on the

Pl. XLVII. 3. other, the Emperor himself crowned with Laurel, with the Hasta pura in his Hand, and called the RESTITUTOR MONetæ S. C.

He was learned himself, and the Patron of the Learned; frequenting their Lectures and Disputations, and settling Stipends on the Professors. Of the Profaic Writers, Plato and Tully were his favourite Authors; of the Poetical, Virgil and Horace. This spoke his excellent Taste and Judgment. But that he studied, and encouraged the Study of, judicial Astrology, was owing to the Weakness of the Times, when the Romans were generally addicted to it, though it cost the Lives of many brave Men, through through the Jealousy of the Emperors. One can- ALEXANDER not then wonder that the Perinthians should strike Severvs. to his Honour that extraordinary Medallion, with his laureate Head, and Αντοπρατωρ Καισαρ Μαρπος AVPn Nics EEVngos AAE ZANAPOE; which has for the Reverse the twelve Signs of the Zodiac; in the Center of which Orb is Jupiter with the Eagle at his Feet; in his right Hand, a Patera; in his left, the Hasta pura; above him are the Chariots of the Sun and Moon in Opposition, performingtheir Courses, the one distinguished by a Star, the other by a Crescent; underneath are the Figures of a Man and Woman, the Representatives of Mankind, as placed upon the Earth by Jupiter, under the Influence of the heavenly Bodies. Why Vaillant should take these to be intended for two Rivers, no Reason in the World can be given, but that they are decumbent; for there is neither Urn nor Reed, Pl. XLVII. 4. but the Face of the one is bearded, and that of the other fmooth. The Legend in the Area (in great Part obliterated) is ΠΕΡΙΝΘΙΩΝ ΙΩΝΩΝ Β ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ.

His second Wife was SALLUSTIA BARBIA ORBIANA; whose elegant Figure we have, with the Title of AVGVSTA, and a Concord on the Reverse, with Pl. XLVII 5: a double Cornucopiæ and Patera, stiled the CON-

CORDIA

ALEXANDER CORDIA AVGVSTORVM S. C. Her Denarius

SEVERVS. differs in nothing from this.

The Germans being again in Motion, ALEXANDER marched into Gaul; but the Enemy, on his Arrival, repassed the Rhine. Not content to have cleared the Province of them, he determined to repay their Visit, and ordered a Bridge to be built over the River; but loft his Life in the mean Time by the Treason of one of his own Officers. This was MAXIMIN, a Barbarian of mean Extraction, born on the Confines of Thrace, his Father being a Goth, and his Mother an Alan. In his younger Days he had been a Shepherd. He was above eight Feet high, comely, and well-proportioned. His great Strength and Activity had recommended him to Severus. The present Emperor at his Accession had preferred him to the Command of a Legion. He was afterwards put over the Troops in Pannonia. For some Misdemeanour in the Persian War lie had been sharply reproved by ALEXANDER; and his vindictive Spirit, stimulated by Ambition, induced him to engage a Body of his Pannonians, by large Promises, in a Conspiracy against him. He was resting in his Tent at Noon when the Conspirators attacked the Guard. The Captains of the Guard, with Mammæa, ran out to learn the Occasion of the

D TEATY 18

the Tumult, and were instantly slain. The Assassins ALEXANDE then rushed into the Tent with their bloody Swords, which the Emperor seeing, wrapped his Mantle around him, and fell decently, as the first Cæsar had done, in the thirtieth Year of his Age, after a Reign of thirteen Years and nine Days.

His Person was tall and graceful; his Manners gentle and affable. He suffered no Day to pass without Instances of his Clemency, Civility, and Piety. He was impartial in the Administration of Justice; and, in Cases of Venality and Corruption, inexorable. His great Rule was, Do as you would BE DONE BY; a Præcept which he learned from his Mother Mammæa, who is supposed to have been a Christian, converted by Origen. This Sentence was frequent in his Mouth, inscribed upon his Palace, and other public Buildings, and proclaimed aloud when public Punishments were inflicted. He had Thoughts of erecting a Temple to CHRIST; but was told, as from the Oracles, that then all would become Christians, and the other Temples be deserted. Every seventh Day, while in the City, he constantly attended the religious Ceremonies at the Capitol. His Aviary was his principal Amusement, which was a very large and curious Collection. Himself and his Mother were very improperly charged with Avarice, considering how largely their Frugality contributed

SEVERVS.

ALEXANDER contributed to the Relief and Ease of the Public. A great Number of Children of both Sexes were educated by them, who were called the Children of ALEXANDER and MAMMÆA. He was temperate, chaste, and prudent; and by his Firmness and Courage wonderfully restored the Empire, which had been fadly weakened by the Cruelty and Extravagance of his Predecessors. His own Coins in general are common; those of MAMMÆA more valuable: but those of his Empresses extremely rare and precious. Mæsa at her Death was deified, as was Mammæa afterwards. The Apotheofis of the former appears on the Coin before us, having her Head on one Side, with IVLIA MAESA AVG; and on the other, the Peacock with expanded Wings, bearing her to Heaven; with the Legend CONSECRATIO.

absolute of the special contract to the parties

I william of the state of the propriores, he find the sure question is Bluery Lawrence William of State of Congress of the Control of low Lincoln, class was your provided the furni

the red that they are pure

the succession of the succession of

Pl. XLVII. 6.

a coller Meller following with Tearl and

THE ME THE PRINCIPLE BY THE PER

CAIUS JULIUS VERUS MAXIMINUS.

HE Assassins of Alexander were instantly MAXIMIN. feized and put to Death by the rest of the Army. But MAXIMIN, whose Part in the Conspiracy was not suspected, being first saluted Augus-Tus by the Pannonians, was foon after acknowledged as fuch by the Troops in general, and his Son declared CASAR, and Prince of the Youth. Hence we have the Head of the former laureated, with ΑνΤοκρατωρ Καισαρ Γαιος ΙΟΥλιος ΟΥΗΡος ΜΑΞΙΜΕΙ-NOC; and of the latter plain, with Taios IOTAios OTHPos MAZIMOC Kaisae; the Reverse of which shews Pl. XLVII. 7. Neptune seated, with his Trident and Patera, whose Throne is supported by two Tritons, bearing in Vol. II. their

MAXIMIN.

17 17 37 17

risold.

their Hands Ofier Baskets filled with Pearls; the Legend ΒΡΟΥΖΗΝΩΝ, as being struck by the People of Prusa in Bithynia, complimenting them with the Sovereignty and Wealth of the Ocean as well as Land. In the latter Capacity, and with the Title of GERMANICVS, the Son also appears, on a fine Medal of Bronze, of the first Size, the Title being MAXIMVS CAES GERM; with his Figure at length on the Reverse, and two Standards by him, inscribed PRINCIPI IVVENTVTIS. S. C. For the Senate, incapable of refifting, found it necessary to add their Approbation. His Denarius bears the fame Impression. But the Emperor, on his own Denarius, is called IMP MAXIMINVS PIVS AVG. with the PROVIDENTIA AVG for the Reverse, bearing the Sceptre and Cornucopia.

He had quickly the Address, by his Donations and Rewards of every Kind, to attach the Soldiers to his Person. Yet his Cruelty to others was such, that the People of Rome were filled with dreadful Apprehensions. For, without Regard of Dignity or Person, those whom he disliked were crucified, or thrown to the wild Beasts, or sewed up in Cattle newly slain. This was done to force Respect from the Nobility; and, to conceal the Meanness of his Origin, he put to Death all who could attest it, and with them his principal Benefactors. For there was not a more cruel Beast on Earth, as who pre- MAXIMIN fumed upon his own Strength, and thought himself fuperior to all Attempts upon his Person. He became the more outrageous from a Conspiracy, real or pretended, fomented by one Magnus, a Person of Confular Rank. All who were faid to be conscious of it, to the Number of four thousand, suffered Death, without Accusation, Trial, or Defence. The Ofroenian Archers also revolted, and chose one Tycus, whom Herodian calls Quartinus, for their Emperor, whom MAXIMIN had discharged from the Service; but he was flain by one of his own pretended Friends, who received Thanks for a while, and was afterwards put to Death for this treacherous

After this, entering Germany with all his Forces, he had feveral Engagements with the Enemy, whom he defeated as often, and plundered, burned, and laid waste the whole Country for three or four hundred Miles together, taking the Name of GER-MANICUS, which he gave also to his Son. This we see on the Frontispiece: and he had Reason for celebrating the Fidelity of his Soldiers on the Reverse of it. For, sticking fast in a Marsh with his Horse, he had been slain by the Enemy, had not his own Troops rescued him. This Service is also intimated by another Reverse, whereon he stands PL XLVII. 8. laureated, with Wreaths, with PM TR P.PP. S.C. The Success of this Campaign is recorded on several Medals.

Pl. XLVII. 9. On one we have a Victory holding up a Wreath, Pl. XLVII. 10. stiled the VICTORIA AVG. S.C. On another, Victory, holding a Palm-Branch, crowns him with a Wreath, and a Captive lies bound at his Feet, with the Legend VICTORIA GERMANICA S.C.;

Pl. XLVII. 11. while on a third we behold him in his quadrigated Car, with a Wreath in his Hand, and Victory placing another on his Head, with PM TR P II COS PP. S. C.

Having settled Affairs in Germany, he marched to Sirmium, where he wintered, intending to make War upon the Sarmatians in Spring: against whom his Arms proved equally successful. The same Year he honoured his Son with the Tribunitial Power, and the Title of Augustus. For which

Pl. XLVII. 12. Reason we see one of his Reverses filled with facrificial Utensils, having the Legend PIETAS AVGusti.

A Serpent is said to have entwined himself round the Head of Maximus, while he was an Infant, and sleeping. This was looked upon as an Omen of his future Exaltation. And it was perhaps in Allusion to this, as well as to express their Prayers for his Health and long Life, that the Sardians have

Pl. XLVII. 13. figured on one of his Reverses a Serpent rising from a Vase, Vase, with an Ear of Wheat on one Side, and a MAKIMIN. Poppy on the other, with the Legend EIII CEII. ΜΕΝΕ CTPATIANOΥ ΑΡΧ. CAPΔΙΑΝΩΝ ΝΕΩΚΟ-PON. Sub Septimio Menestratiano Archonte Sardianorum Neocororum. His Mother was named PAULINA. She was a Woman of good Disposition, who endeavoured all she could to soften the Ferocity of her Husband. But such Endeavours were no Way pleasing to him, who in return is said to have hastened her Death; yet was he kind enough to allow her the usual Deification, as is evident from the very curious Medal; on which she appears Pl. XLVII. 14. veiled, with DIVA PAVLINA; and transported to Heaven, on the Reverse, by the usual Conveyance of the Empresses, on a Peacock, with his Wings expanded, and the Legend CONSECRATIO S C.

But with fuch Cruelties, added to the most insatiable Avarice and Oppression, the People were now wearied out, and every where ripe for Rebellion. The Desection began in Africa, where they slew his Procurator, and proclaimed their Proconsul Gordian Emperor, venerable for his Age and Virtues. He withstood their Desires as much as was possible, throwing himself on the Ground with earnest Deprecations. But with drawn Swords, and Menaces of instant Death, they obliged him to assume the Purple. This done, he immediately associated

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

MAXIMIN. ciated his Son, declaring him Augustus also, and entered Carthage with Imperial Pomp. Thence he wrote Letters to Rome, which were received with great Joy, and in Consequence of which Vitalian, Maximin's Commander of the Prætorian Cohorts, was slain, and the two Gordians, Father and Son, were declared Augusti by the Senate.

OF LIMETAL STREET or near a superior in the second desired and the second

The best with a court of the co or Bernafider bus a Wallia V. Er after data in the second and the contraction of the contr

The state of the s

BY THE ROLL WATER THE STATE OF THE STATE OF

200 Block Called Street Co. S.

C. C. C. A. C. Le eldeth and but Son Led willmed class

Dellination to the Confedute and the

MARCUS ANTONIUS GORDIANUS AFRICANUS. MARCUS ANTONINUS GORDIANUS AFRICANUS.

In the Tumult of the Joy at Rome, occasioned by the Exaltation of the two Gordians, all Informers, Accusers, and the Friends of Maximin, were slain. Sabinus, Governor of the City, underwent the same Fate. Maximin and his Son were declared public Enemies. Letters were dispatched to all the Provinces, requiring their Aid in Vindication of Liberty and the common Safety. The Friends and Officers of Maximin, Civil and Military, were in most of the Cities put to Death. The Honour of the Prætorship was decreed to the youngest Gordian, Grandson of the eldest, the Destination

Two Gordians.

Destination to the Consulate, and the Title of CESAR. The eldest and his Son had assumed that of Africanus; for we read on the Denarius of the sirst, around his laureate Head, IMP M ANTonius

Pl. XLVII. 15. GORDIANUS AFRicanus AVG. On the Reverse he stands, with a Branch of Laurel displayed in his

Pl. XLVII. 16. Hand, and P M TR P COS PP. That of the Son also shews his Head laureated, with IMP M. AN-Toninus GORDIANVS AFR. AVG. On the Reverse he stands in the Character of Mars, and holds the Hasta pura and Shield; and the Legend is VIRTVS AVGG. for Augustorum, as in the

Pl. XLVII. 17. Frontispiece. But the Head of the Grandson is plain, and he is called M. ANT. GORDIANVS CAES: and on his Reverse appear the Secespita, the Sympulum, the Adspersorium, and the Patera, the Guttus and the Lituus, with PIETAS AVGG. S.C.

MAXIMIN, receiving the News of all this, became frantic with Rage, and was by his Friends conveyed to his Chamber. As he grew cooler, he called for Wine, in which he drowned his Senses. The next Day he held a Council of his Friends, and afterwards harangued the Soldiers, exhorting them to revenge their common Injuries; and having given them an immense Donative, began his March towards Rome. In the mean Time one Capelian, a Senator, Schator, whom Gordian had diverted of his Govern- Two Gordians. ment of Mauritania, raised fresh Disturbances in Africa. Against him young Gordian marching, was defeated and flain; and the Father, weighing, the Strength of Maximun, and the Weakness and Perfidiousness of the Africans, in a Fit of Grief and Despair hanged himself. He was upwards of fourscore, of a sanguine Aspect and full Habit, in Stature, Voice, and Carriage much refembling Au-GUSTUS, and of Life and Manners irreproachable. He had a finé Poetical Talent, and celebrated in Verse the Reigns of Antoninus Pius and Marcus Aurelius, calling his Work the Antoniniad. He was possessed of a larger real Estate than any Man in the Empire. His Reign lasted five Weeks only. His Son fell in the forty-fixth Year of his Age. His Father had given him the Surname of ANTONI-NUS. His Genius also was brilliant, and he was well versed in the Civil Law; of a generous and engaging Disposition, but fond of Pleasure; a Lover of medicated Wines, but no great Eater, making short Meals. He delighted much in Baths, and the Amænity of Groves and Gardens: was very delicate in his Apparel, and was given to Women; for he kept a Seraglio of two-and-twenty, by every. one of whom he had three or four Children, being therefore called the Priamus, and jestingly the Vol. II. Tt Priapus, GORDIANS.

Priapus, of his Time. Yet he was public-spirited, courageous, and exceedingly beloved; fo that the Senate with great Readiness consented to his Advancement. The youngest Gordian is said by fome to have been his Son, but by the more creditable Historians the Son of his Sister. The Coins of the two eldest are extremely valuable. There is: one of the Father, not yet mentioned, which has for Pl. XI.VII. 20. its Reverse Rome, habited like Pallas, with Helmet, Spear, and Shield, holding out a Victory on her right Hand, and inscribed ROMAE AETER-NAE.

> The same and the same of the same and the second second second second second

A COMPANY OF THE PARTY OF THE P

MARCUS

MARCUS CLODIUS PUPIENUS MAXIMUS. DECIMUS CÆLIUS BALBINUS.

THE Senate, informed of the Death of the PVPIENVS two Gordians, having gone too far to recede, or hope for Mercy, immediately made Choice of these two to succeed them. The first was Seventy-four Years old, meanly born, but very brave, and of great Experience in Action; prudent, temperate, a Lover of Justice, and seared for his Severity, yet easily entreated. The latter about fixty, noble, wealthy, generous, and affable, but a Lover of his Ease and Quiet. These were declared Augusti; the youngest Gordian being at the same Time action to the contract of the property of the same Time action to the contract of the property of the poungest Gordian being at the same Time action to the property of the poungest Gordian being at the same Time action to the property of the poungest Gordian being at the same Time action to the property of the pr

PVPIENVS knowledged CASAR. Nothing could be so serviceable to the Commonwealth, as the mutual Confidence and Agreement of these two Emperors. This they jointly professed for the present, as appears from their Denarii. In these they have both radiated Crowns, which now became common to the living Emperors, though heretofore the Decoration of those only who were deified. That of

Pl. XLVII. 18. MAXIMUS is inscribed IMP CAES PVPIEN. MAXIMVS AVG.; and has joined Hands for the Reverfe, with AMOR MVTVVS AVGG. The Title of that of Balbinus is IMP CAES D. CAEL.

Pl. XLVII. 19. BALBINVS AVG., and has the same Device for its Reverse, with CONCORDIA, AYGG. We find

Pl. XLVIII. 1. the same Legend also on a Reverse of Pupienus MAXIMUS, in Bronze, where the Goddess Concord is feated, with a Patera and double! Cornacopia. The Vows or Supplications decreed by the Senate

Pl. XLVIII. 2. for a prosperous Decennalia, form a Reverse of BAL-BINUS of the same Metal, the Words VOTIS DE-CENNALIBUS S C. being inclosed in a Wreath of Laurel. A best state of commission is

> The Charge of the War against MAXIMIN was unanimously recommended to Pupienus. Care had been taken to convey all the Provisions within the walled Towns, that the Tyrant and his vast Army might be distressed for Want of Subsistence. Accordingly, ř

cordingly, when he came to Hemona, he found the PVPIENVS Place deserted. Thence crossing the Mountains, he BALBINVS. proceeded to Aquileia. Being now in Italy, his Troops, which expected Plenty there, being disappointed, began to murmur; and the more he endeavoured by Severity to curb the Spirit of Difcontent, the more it was exasperated. The Gates of the City were shut against him, and the Walls covered with armed Men. They were headed by Menophilus and Crispinus, both of Consular Rank, who encouraged the Inhabitants with Assurances of Victory from their Tutelar Deity, Belinus or Apollo. The Attacks of the Enemy were violent; but they defended themselves with Fire, Sulphur, and every mischievous Device, uttering bitter Taunts against the Tyrant and his Son. As the Siege advanced flowly, the Rage of MAXIMIN grew hot against his Officers; several of whom he put to Death. This aggravated the Distemper in his Army, which was now, through Scarcity of Provisions, rather in the Condition of a Body befieged, than befieging. was also bruited amongst them, that the whole World was unanimous in its Disaffection to MAXI-MIN. The Soldiers therefore, whose Families were at Albano, fearing for them and for themselves, watching their Opportunity, flew both the Father and the Son, as they lay sleeping in their Tents at Noonposed them to the View of the Aquileians. Thus

PUPIENUS Noon-day; fixed their Heads upon Poles, and ex-BALBINVS.

MAXIMIN met with the Fate which he merited, after a Reign of little more than three Years. But that of the Son was pitiable, an handsome and accomplished-young Man, but whose good Qualities were somewhat obscured by his Pride and Loftiness. Presently their Statues and Images were demolished, and their Captain of the Guards flain. The Heads were dispatched to Rome, and the Soldiers, after adoring the Images of MAXIMUS, BALBINUS, and GORDIAN, received within the Walls. MAXIMUS was then at Ravenna, making great Preparations for Action; but hearing what had passed at Aquileia, he fent laureated Letters to Rome, which occasioned incredible Joy. The Temples and Altars were thronged with People, returning Thanks to the Balbinus, who used to tremble at the Name of MAXIMIN, was so overjoyed, that he offered an Hecatomb, and ordered a like Sacrifice in Pl. XLVIII. 3. every City. His Reverse is still existing, with Fupiter holding the Hasta pura in his left Hand, and grasping the Thunder in his right, inscribed IOVI CONSERVATOR IS C. The deceased GORDIANS were deified; Sabinus made Governor of the City; and Valens, the Uncle of Pupienus Maximus, Commander of the Prætorian Cohorts. MAXIMUS himself, to whom whom Crowns, Equestrian Statues, and a Victory PVPIENVS were decreed, on his Artival at the Head of a BALBINVE. numerous Body of Maximin's Army, received the Compliments of the Senate; and then, with BAL-BINUS and GORDIAN, retired to the Palace with infinite Satisfaction. The Victory decreed to MAXIMUS we find, however, on the Reverses of both Em- Pl. XLVIII. 4. perors, and entitled on each the VICTORIA AVGG S C. So the Congiary given on this Occasion, which forms a Reverse of BALBINUS, is also stiled Pl. XLVIII. 5. the LIBERALITAS AVGVSTORUM S C. And the ensuing Peace, which we find seated on the Reverse of Pupienus, and denominated PAX PI. XLVIII. 6. PVBLICA S C, we see also standing upon that PI. XI.VIII. 7. of BALBINUS, with the Branch of Olive in her Hand. Legend P. M TR. P. COS. II. PP.

The Moderation of the two Emperors, in the Exercise of their Power, gave the highest Satisfaction to the People: but the Troops, which had submitted and returned with Maximus, had still their Discontents. They looked with an evil Eye upon Emperors, in whose Election they had no Share, and considered the general Acclamations as so many bitter Resections on their own Conduct. When therefore in the East the Persians invaded Syria, and in the West the Germans were in Mo-

BALBINVS.

PVPIENVS tion, and it was refolved that MAXIMUS should march against the former, and Balbinus against the latter, while Gordian should remain at Rome, they watched for an Occasion of venting their Displeafure. This was too foon afforded, by the Grudgings between the two Emperors; which, however filent, were yet perceived. BALBINUS now looked down with Disdain upon the Meanness of Maximus, who also despised then Weakness, of Balbinus. During the Representation, therefore, of the Capitoline Sports, while most of the Soldiers and Attendants of the Court were busied elsewhere, they broke into that Quarter of the Palace where MAXIMUS was. Those around him urged the Necessity of calling instantly for the German Guards. But these were in another Part of the Palace, where BALBINUS refided, and when fent for, were withheld by him, who was jealous of his Colleague. This brought on a Dispute, which ended in the Destruction of both. 5 For the Conspirators, coming up in the Heat of it, stripped them of their Imperial Robes, and were hurrying them to the Camp, when, hearing that the Germans were advancing to their Rescue, they flew them, and left their Bodies in the Midst of the Way. While this was doing, young Gor-DIAN was taken up by another Party of them, conveyed veyed to the Camp with loud Acclamations, and PVPIENVS proclaimed Emperor. These two had but a short BALBINVS. Reign of sourteen Months. Their Coins are exceedingly rare and precious.

Vol. II.

Uu

MARCUS

about their own pro Rederes of

MARCUS ANTONIUS GORDIANUS PIUS.

YOUNGEST GORDIAN.

HE Election of the Soldiers was confirmed by the Senate with great Alacrity, the young Prince, for his Family's Sake, being very dear to all the Roman People; and Decennial Vows were decreed for the Prosperity of his Reign. They are Pl. XLVIII. 8. inclosed in a Civic Wreath, and expressed by VOTIS DECENNALIBUS. S.C. Thus all were for the present united, and lost the Remembrance of past Evils in the diffusive Plenty of the present Season, when GORDIAN exhibited and re-established the quinquennial Games, first introduced by NERO. But the very next Year an Infurrection was made in Africa to dethrone him, which was however effectually . 2 5 7 . . . . 5 tually suppressed by the Governor of Mauritania. Youngest This gave Occasion to the striking of the Reverse; GORDIAN. which shews us the returning Fortune of the Fa- Pl. XLVIII. 9. mily, feated, as we have feen her in the Reign of CARACALLA, with FORTVNA REDVX SC; as well as to the Medal of Gold, which shews him Pl. XLVIII. 10. laureated, with IMP CAES M. ANT GORDIA-NVS AVG; and on the other Side a Victory, with a Palm-Branch and Wreath, inscribed VICTORIA AVG; and to another, on which Mars appears Pl. XLVIII. 11. compleatly armed, as his Defender, with the Title of MARS PROPVGNATor S C. On other Medals, both of Gold and Silver, he is complimented for PLXLVIII-12. his Equity, by the Figure of that Virtue, stamped, ... with her usual Attributes, the Balance and Cornucopiæ, and honoured as the AEQVITAS AV-Gusti. This was certainly due to him for the Kindness with which he treated the penitent Rebels. who expressed deep Sorrow for the Troubles which their Folly had occasioned: though it must be confessed, that, through the Influence of his Freedmen and Eunuchs, who took Advantage of his tender Years, Venality and Injustice were much too bold for a Time: for which he afterwards expressed his Sorrow. The Year after this he entered on his fecond Consulate, and married the Daughter of Misstheus. This Engagement was doubly happy for U 11 2 him.

YOUNGEST him, as it gave him the Possession of an amiable and GORDIAN. virtuous Lady, and secured to him the Counsels of a brave and prudent Man, whose Character was fuperior to all Reproach. On her Medals she is stiled SABINIA TRANQVILLINA AVG; and has for Pl. XLVIII. 13. the Reverse her Concord, Seated, with the Patera and double Cornucopiæ, and the Legend CON-CORDIA AVGustæ. SC. Her Denarius resembles this. But on some Greek Coins, struck at Tomos, and Anchialus in Pontus, we have the Heads both of the Emperor and Empress adverse, with AYT, K M ANT FOP DIANOC AYF, Imperator Cafar Marcus Antonius Gordianus Augustus, and underneath TPAN-Pl. XLVIII. 14. KIAAEINA. These have for the Reverses, one of them, the Dea Salus, with TOMEON MHTPO πολιτων HONTOY, Of the Tomeans, the Metropolitans of Pon-

Pl. XLVIII. 15. tus; the other, the Figure of Serapis, the supposed Author of the Plenty which bleffed his Reign; with ΟΥΛΠΙΑΝΩΝ ΑΓΧΙΑΛΕΩΝ, Of the Ulpian Anchialites; their City being called Ulpia in Honour of TRAJAN. But a Medallion struck by the Seleucians. contains by far the finest Heads of this illustrious Pair, that of GORDIAN having a radiated Crown, and over it, M. ANTΩNIOC ΓΟΡΔΙΑΝΟC CEB, Marcus Antonius Gordianus Augustus; and between both, TPANKYAA CEB, Tranquillina Augusta. On

PLXLVIII. 16. the other Side are the Heads adverse of Apollo, and of the Genius of their City, with a Cornucopiæ behind Youngest her, and the Legend CEΛΕΥΚΕΩΝ ΝΕΟΚΩΡΩΝ GORDIAN. ΠΡΟΤΩΝ, Seleucensium Neokororum Primorum.

The excellent Fruits of this Alliance immediately appeared. His Eunuchs and Freedmen were difcarded; and all, who had imposed upon his Youth and Inexperience, banished the Court. No Man conceived more Joy than himself from this Turn. "Thanks to the Gods," fays he, in one of his Letters to Misitheus, "that, through your Insinua-"tions, I am acquainted with those Things which, " shut up as I was, I could not know. Wretched is "the Prince from whom Truths are concealed; "who, unacquainted with what passes in public, " is obliged to act by the Information of others!"

At this Time there was an Earthquake, fo dreadful that whole Cities with their Inhabitants were swallowed up; on which Account solemn Sacrifices and Supplications were offered, not through Rome only, but throughout the World. When this Alarm was over, the Emperor threw open the Temple of Fanus, agreeably to ancient Usage, and marched against the Persians. In his Way through Mæsia and Thrace he entirely cleared the Country of Enemies. His Passage over the Hellespont is celebrated on a fine Medal in Bronze, having his laureate Pl. XLVIII. 17. Head, with IMP GORDIANVS PIVS FELIX

GORDIAN.

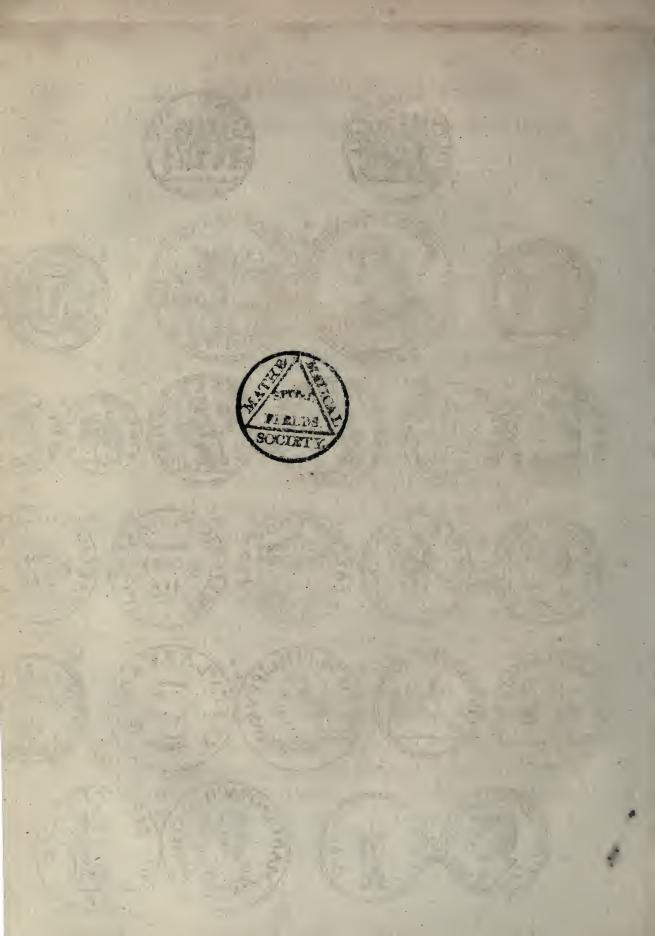

YOUNGEST AVG; and, for the Reverse, the Imperial Vessel filled with Soldiers and Enfigns; and around the Verge, TRAIECTVS AVGusti. Arriving in Syria, he again took Possession of Antioch, which had been feized by the Enemy, with whom he had feveral fuccessful Engagements. He recovered also Carrhæ and Nisibis by his Detachments, and struck Sapor with fuch Terror, that he haftily withdrew his Garrisons without Injury to the Inhabitants. This was chiefly owing to the wife Conduct of Misitheus. who commanded under him. The Senate, therefore, decreed a quadrigated Car, to be drawn by Elephants, at his future Persian Triumph; and another, to be drawn by Horses, to Misitheus, with the magnificent Titles of Father of the Princes, and Guardian of the Commonwealth. These Successes are recorded on many Coins. The first Campaign

Pl. XLVIII. 18. is celebrated by one which exhibits Rome, habited like Minerva, presenting a Globe to the Emperor; near her is a Standard-bearer; and behind him, Misitheus: the Legend PONTIFEX MAX TR P

Pl. XLVIII. 19. III COS II. A second represents him as Hercules, with the Lion's Skin, and is dedicated VIRTVTI

Pl. XLIX. 1. AVGVSTI. On a third he is feated on Spoils, Enfigns are displayed around him, Victory crowns him with a Wreath, and Misitheus presents the Palm to him: the Legend here too is VIRTVS AV- YOUNGEST GORDIAN. GVSTI.

In his second Campaign he passed the Euphrates over a Bridge of Boats, which Passage is described on the Reverse before us. Here also he is crowned Pl. XLIX. 2. by Victory, and attended by Minerva; after whom passes Misitheus, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and the Parazonium in the other, as Captain of the Prætorian Cohorts; and a Soldier is returning back to carry the News of it: this is termed the FELICITAS AVGVSTI. Abgarus, who had been dethroned by Artaxerxes, was now restored to his Dominions. This Act is fignified on the Coin, Pl. XLIX. 3. which exhibits him with the Tiara or Mitre, paying his Devotion, after the Eastern Manner, to the Emperor, who is covered with the Imperial Mantle, crowned with a Diadem, and, holding a Globe in one Hand, extends the other towards him in token of Amity: behind him, AΥΓ ΓΟΡΔΙΑΝΟC; and behind the other, ABFAPOC BACIAETC. On another he stands in his quadrigated Car, crowned also Pl. XLIX. 4. by a Victory, and holding out a Branch of Laurel, with PONTIFEX MAX TR P IIII COS II PP. The next Year we behold him likewise in Action, having Pl. XLIX. 5. the military Habit, with Spear and Globe, and the Legend PM TR P V COS II PP. And on another, he is once more crowned by a Victory, and a Victim is facrificed YOUNGEST facrificed for his Success, to a Deity who appears GORDIAN. within the Temple.

But this Felicity was foon interrupted, by the Death of Misitheus; who made the Roman People his Heirs, and whose Civil and Military Character was not inferior to the most renowned. Some fay, that his Death was purely natural; but others, that it was hastened by the Arts of Philip, who fucceeded to his Command, and began to plot the Destruction of Gordian also. The Store-Ships were kept at a Distance, and the Army led into Places where no Provision could be had. The famished Soldiers grew discontented, and imputed the Whole to GORDIAN. Rumours were industriously spread, that the Youth of GORDIAN was unequal to the Weight of Empire, which required an able Commander and experienced Governor. He corrupted the principal Officers, who demanded PHILIP for their Sovereign. The Friends of GORDIAN at first opposed these Proceedings. The Affair at last was compromised, and PHILIP admitted as Joint-Emperor, to be his Guardian and Director. But his haughty and overbearing Disposition in this Character was fo displeasing to GORDIAN, that he complained of it from his Tribunal, but found his Interest in the Army far inferior to that of PHILIP. He then requested that he might at least have an equal equal Authority. But this too was refused by the Youngest Faction. He even condescended to entreat that he might be confidered as CAESAR only, or as Commander of the Guards, or lastly, as an inferior Officer. But all these Motions were rejected. He was ordered away, and feen no more. This happened in the twentieth Year of his Age, and the fixth of his Reign. He appears to have been a Prince of very excellent Disposition, but easily imposed upon. His Greek Coins are very numerous. One more of them we cannot but take Notice of, for the Singularity of the Impression. On the Obverse the Emperor is laureated, and in Armour, the Inscription being ATT K M ANT FOP AIANOC; but the Pl. XLIX. 6. Reverse is an Horseman bearing a Wreath of Laurel: but the Horse has the Fore-Feet of a Man. and with one of them he holds a Staff entwined: with a Serpent. Dio Cassius tells us, that the Horse of Julius Casar had his Hoofs cloven. But Pliny the Elder, and Suetonius, fay, that they were split like human Toes; and the last, that it was considered as an Omen of Imperial Dignity, and that he consecrated his Statue before the Temple of Venus Genetrix. Whether it was a Statue of this particular Animal, with the first Cæsar upon him (for hewould admit no other Rider) which the Nicaans made the Object of their Veneration, as prefaging VOL. H. X.X the.

Youngest Gordian. the perpetual Empire of the Cæsars, must be left to the more intelligent Reader. But the Æsculapian Staff, without Doubt, infinuates their good Wishes for the Health and Safety of the Emperor. The Legend is ΙΠΠΟΝ ΒΡΟΤΟΠΟΔΑ ΝΙΚΑΙΕΩΝ (πολις σεβεται, understood) The Niceans venerate the human-footed Horse.

with a first source of many set in the second many something the suppose of the last of the same of

The series and the control of the co

anti masa di maka maka maka milan di kata ili salim ingila kata ingila kata ili salim ili sa

And the second of the period of the second of the period o

MARCUS JULIUS PHILIPPUS.

Array to highly for which his is not make you to the of Valerian, there is a Chasm of nine or ten Years in the Augustan Writers: but Zonaras informs us, that, on the News of Gordian's Death, the Senate made Choice of one Marcus to succeed him, a Senator studious of Wisdom and Philosophy. Goltzius mentions a single Coin of him, with the Title of IMP CAES M MARCIVS AVG PM TR P. He died, or was slain, presently after his Election; in whose room they pitched upon Severus Hostilianus, who, being let Blood for some Disorder, died instantly after the Operation. We have, in Goltzius, the Inscription of a single Coin of him X x 2

PHILLP:

AVG PM TR P. But Philip had been proclaimed Augustus by the Army in Syria, and was now recognized by the Senate. His Medal of Gold

therefore calls him IMP PHILIPPVS AVG, and

Pl. XLIX. 7. has for the Reverse ROME seated, with the Hasta pura in the left Hand, and in the right a Victory, holding out a Wreath, with the Legend ROMAE AETERNAE. His Denarius bears the same Title,

Pl. XLIX. 8. the Reverse of which celebrates the Fidelity of the Army to himself (to which his Advancement was owing) by the Representation of a legionary Eagle, two Ensigns, and a Manipulus. His Son, then seven Years old, was declared Cæsar, and Prince Pl. XLIX. 9. of the Youth. For the Medal of Gold, with his plain Head, calls him M IVL PHILIPPVS CAES, plain Head, calls him M IVL PHILIPPVS CAES, and shews him, standing, on the Reverse, with a Globe and armed Spear in his Hand, inscribed PRINCIPI IVVENTVTIS.

PHILIP, having made Peace with the Persians, returned to Rome, where his Courtesy and excellent Government gained him the Good-will of all Ranks. The next Year beheld him Conful. After which he undertook an Expedition against the Carpi, who had invaded the Roman Territories. He gained two Victories, and prescribed to the Enemy the Terms of Peace. This done, he entered upon his fecond Confulate, and took his Son for PHILIP. this Colleague in that Dignity: nor rested here, but conferred upon him the Tribunitial Power also, and the Title of Augustus; by which he became, young as he was, the Partner of his Sovereignty. The next Year also they retained the Fasces; so that the Father was then Consul a third, and the Son a fecond Time, when the Sæcular Games, were once more celebrated, in the thousandth Year of Rome, for three Days and Nights together. Several Medals record this Event, and the Imperial Munificence on the Occasion. On one of them appears Pl. XLIX. 10. the Temple of Jupiter, then resorted to with much Solemnity, as usual; and the Legend SAECVLVM NOVVM. S C. On a second it is distinguished as the Pl. XLIX. 11. MILLIARIVM SAECVLVM; and a Column in the Center of the Reverse bespeaks him COS III, with the SC in the Area. A third, with a like Pl. XLIX. 12. Column, refers to the Games, calling them the SAECVLARES AVG. We have also the SAE-CVLARES AVGG, with the Column inscribed COS II, on a Coin of young Philip; on the ob- Pl. XLIX. 15. verse Side of which is his laureate Head, with the Titles of IMP. and AVG. The same we have, as well as the MILLIARIVM SAECVLVM, on Reverles of the Empress also. A Congiary ministered additional Joy to the Season; for on one Pl. XLIX. 14.

عالث

PHILIP. of his Coins we see the two Emperors and the Empress seated, as Witnesses of the Distribution, with Pl. XLIX. 13. LIBERALITAS AVGG. On another, the Father and Son are feated, as attending to the magnificent Shews then exhibited. Of those proper to the Amphitheatre, we have a Kind of Bill of Fare: for at the Death of Gordian, there were in Rome two-and-thirty Elephants, ten Elks, ten Tygers, fixty tame Lions, thirty tame Leopards, ten Hyænæ, one River-Horse, and one Rhinoceros; ten fierce Lions, ten Camelopards, twenty wild Asses, forty wild Horses, with a vast Number of other Beasts; all which were either now flain, or exposed to the Direption of the People. To which we must add a thousand Pair of Gladiators, to compleat the public Entertainment.

> But far more praifeworthy and superior to all Pomp was the Edict which he published, strictly prohibiting the Practice of unnatural Luft. ALEX-ANDER SEVERUS had Thoughts of making this Regulation, but it was referved for the Reign of PHILIP. This Crime had difgraced the Government of the most virtuous Emperors; and from the rest had received all Manner of Encouragement, to the Dishonour of Humanity. It is to be lamented, that the Infinuation of this Practice is too much interwoven with the Learning of our Schools; and it were to be wished, that no Editions of the Classics Philip. should be admitted there, but such as shall have undergone a proper Expurgation in this Respect. It was, probably, with an Eye to this Prohibition, that the Antiochians of Caria struck Coins in Honour of the Imperial Family, having the three Furies for the Reverse, which also contained a Lesson to the same Purpose. We have them on those of the Empress and the Son; and they were, without Doubt, on those of the Father also. These Avengers of Wickedness are Alecto, Tisiphone, and Megæra. Their Objects are Rage, Avarice, and Lust. Their Station is before the adamantine Gates of Tartarus:

Carceris ante fores clausas adamante sedebant.

Their Heads are tutulated, they are girt under the Paps, and their black Robes descend as low as their brazen Feet. They are armed with their re- Pl. XLIX. 16. spective Instruments of Punishment; one of them holding a Serpent in one Hand, and a Key in the other, as the Portress of Hell Gates; another brandishes her burning Torches; and the third displays the Scourge and Ponyard:

Verbera torta dabunt sonitum, nexaque colubris Conscia fumabunt semper ad ora faces; His vivus Furiis agitabere, mortuus iisdem.

Mad

THE MEDALLIC HISTORY

PHILIP

Mad shalt thou hear the sounding Lash, and dread The Brands and Serpents hissing round thy Head; These Furies shall be thine, alive and dead.

At their Feet are two Dogs;

And obscene Bitches howl'd along the Gloom.

This reminds me of a beautiful Passage in our most excellent Shakespear;

And Cæsar's Spirit, ranging for Revenge, With Ate by his Side, come hot from Hell, Shall in these Confines, with a Monarch's Voice, Cry Havoc, and let slip the Dogs of Hell.

The next Year the Eastern Provinces, discontented with the Government of Priscus, the Emperor's Brother, set up one Iotapianus, whom Zosimus calls Papianus, for Emperor; who was quickly dispatched by his own Creators. The Moesians and Pannonians at the same Time promoted Carvilius Marinus. Goltzius mentions a Coin of this Mock-Emperor, inscribed IMP C P CARVILius MARINVS AVG, and another Greek one to the same Purpose: and it should seem, by a third, produced by Seguinus, with the Inscription ΘΕΩ MAPINΩ, Deo Marino, that he must have been afterwards deisied by Decius, from Prejudice to PHILIP. To put an End to these Disturbances, PHILIP. the Emperor obliged Decius (for he was unwilling) of whose Courage and Experience he had the highest Opinion, to take upon him the Government of Pannonia; whither he was no fooner come, than the rebellious Soldiers, to avoid the Punishment due to their Demerits, and engage the Favour of a new Emperor, slew Marinus, and compelled Decius to assume the Purple. Such is the Account of Zosimus, the Enemy of PHILIP, for his Affection to Christianity, and the Admirer of Decius, for his violent Persecution of it. Decius immediately collected all the Forces that he could, and marched against PHILIP, who, in the Action that enfued, was defeated and slain. And the Prætorian Guards at Rome, with whom he had left his Son, receiving Intelligence of this, put an End to his Life also.

PHILIP was born at Bostra in Arabia, and is said in his Youth to have been the Chief of one of their prædatory Gangs, which was esteemed a most honourable Post in that Nation. He is said to have been afterwards a Convert to Christianity, and to have done Penance for his Treason against GORDIAN. His Wife was MARCIA OTACILIA SEVERA, so named on her Medals, with the Title of Augusta. A

Piety is the Reverse of one of them in Gold, and a Pl. XLIX. 17. Ghastity of another, which is very elegant, in Bronze. Pl. XLIX. 18. VOL. II. The

PHILIP.

The last is on her Denarius also. These were in Character, being due to her Religion and Modesty, which were fuch as became that Christianity which fhe professed. The young Emperor had also been baptized; and was of fo serious a Countenance, as to be never feen to laugh. And when his Father, at the Sæcular Games, once laughed aloud, he was observed to turn away his Face with manifest Displeasure. The Father was scarce more than fixand-forty Years old when he fell, after a Reign of between five and fix Years: and his Son was flain in the thirteenth Year of his Age. His Government had been so agreeable to the Senate, that, maugre the Offence which it might give to his Successor, they decreed to him and his Son the Compliment of Deification. This is evident, from a Silver Medal, which has on one Side his Head, with a radiated Crown, and IMP PHILIPPVS AVG; and for the Reverse an Elephant, with his Rider, and the Legend AETERNITAS AVGG. We must not dismiss this Reign, without taking Notice of a curious Medallion, which has given Occasion to a particular Treatife, written in Vindication of it, being considered by the Author, Mr. Bryant, as a traditional Evidence of the Mosaic Flood. On the Face of it is the laureate Head of the Emperor PHILIP.

PHILIP, with ΑΥΤοπρατως Καισαρ ΙΟΥΛιος ΦΙΛΙΠΠΟΟ PHILI ATT8505, Imperator Julius Philippus Augustus. For the Reverse we see an Ark upon the Waters, containing two Persons, a Man and a Woman, the latter being veiled. The same Persons are also represented as being just landed, and with uplifted Hands witnessing some extraordinary Emotion. On the Roof of the Ark fits a Dove, and another is in the Air, upon the Wing, with a Branch in its Bill. In the Front of the Ark, and under the Man, are the Letters NOE. The Legend is EII Mapus ΑΥΡελί8 ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ Β ΑΡΧΙερεως ΑΠΑΜΕΩΝ, Sub Marco Aurelio Alexandro iterum Archisacerdote Apamensium. A Reverse of Septimius Severus has the same Device, except that the Woman is not veiled. The Medallion before us is in the Peinbrokian Collection, and needs no further Explanation. The Reading is authenticated by the Legend of another Reverse of the Apameans, which runs ΕΠ Μ ΑΥρ ΑΛΕΖΑΝΔΡΟΥ Β ΒΕΛτις APXI AMAMEON, Sub Marco Aurelio Alexandro iterum Optimo Archisacerdote Apamensium. The Apamea, where the Coin was struck, was the City of that Name, on the Meander, in Phrygia, the Region in which they supposed the Ark to have rested. It was also called Κιβωτος, which is the Name of the Ark itself. And here, as indeed throughout Y y 2 that

Pl. L. I.

- The second real Control of the Con and the state of the same of t

practifed, as Memorials of the Flood, and of the Deliverance of the Patriarch and his Family, for the Renovation of Mankind.

CNEUS MESSIUS QUINTUS TRAJANUS DECIUS.

ECIUS was now acknowledged Emperor DECIVS. by the Senate and People, and haftened to Rome. Yet he justly enough ascribed his Promotion to the Genius of the Army in Illyricum; which, therefore, became the Reverse of the Coin prefixed. On his Medal of Gold he is laureated, with IMP TRAIANVS DECIVS AVG, and gives for the Reverse his Victory, with a Palm-Branch and Wreath, terming it the VICTORIA AVGusti. His Denarius covers him with a radiated Crown, and IMP C M Q TRAIANVS DECIVS AVG; celebrating his Arrival on the Reverse, with the usual Representation

Pl. L. 2.

Pl. L. 3.

presentation of himself on Horseback, with the DECIVS. Hasta pura in his left Hand, and holding out his right towards the City, with ADVENTVS AVG. That a Congiary succeeded his Arrival is manifest from his Reverse, which shews a female Figure Pl. L. 4. with a Cornucopiæ in her left Hand, and a Teffera in the right, marked with fix Dots, who in the Legend is called the LIBERALITAS AVG. S C. His Wife was HERENNIA ETRUSCILLA, entitled, on her Medal of Bronze, AVGVSTA, with a Chaftity veiled for the Reverse; who is feated, and holds a Pl. L. 5. Torch in her left Hand, with PVDICITIA AVG. S C. There is the same Device on her Medal of Gold and Denarius. But an Inscription in Gruter calls her, GNAEA SEIA HERENNIA SAL-LVSTIA BARBIA ORBIANA; and on the Coin before us, the is SALLVSTIA BARBIA OR-BIANA AVG.: the Reverse of which is a Concord, with a Patera and double Cornucopia, stiled the CONCORDIA AVGG. She had a Daughter, who became the Wife of Volufianus, who also on some Coins is named CN. SEIA SALL. BARBIA OR-BIANA AVG; and on others, HERENNIA ETRVSCILLA AVG. By her he had four Sons, who were all declared Cæsars; and the two eldest, at least, Princes of the Youth. These are distinguished on Coins by the Names of Herennius, Hostilianus, Etruscus, Etruscus, and Quintus. The first appears on a Me- Decivs. dal of Silver, with a radiated Crown, and is called HERENnius ETRV MES QVintus DECIVS CAE-SAr; and bears for his Reverse the Symbol of Pannonia, the native Country of the Family, with an Enfign in one Hand, and in the other a wild Boar, with which Animal the Country abounded. His Denarius is also radiated, and inscribed Q HER ETR MES DECIVS NOBilis Cafar; and on the other Side is the Figure of Mercury, with a Purse in one Hand, as the God of Gain or Merchandize, and the Caduceus in the other; and here the Legend is PIETAS AVGG: for they were proud of being called the Patrons of Heathenism or Idolatry, which they miscalled Piety, as they degraded Christianity with the Appellation of the Impiety. third Medal of this Prince has his Head plain, with the fame Inscription; and exhibits him standing, on the Reverse, with an armed Spear and Horseman's Rod, and the Legend PRINCIPI IVVENTVTIS S.C. The second Son is also seen on his Denarius; with a radiated Crown, and CN. VALENS HOS-TILIANVS MESsus QVINTVS CAESAR; but the Device of the Reverse is borrowed from the late Reign, being the Temple of Jupiter, with SAECVLVM NOVVM. But a Medal with his plain Head, and C. VALENS HOSTIL MES QVINTVS.

PI. L. 6.

Pl. L. 7.

Pl. L. 8.

Pl. L. 9.

DECIVS.

Pl. L. 10.

Pl. L. 11.

QVINTVS AVGusti, has him seated on the Reverse, and the Legend there is PRINCIPI IVVENTVTIS. The Heads of the two youngest appear on one Coin, and are both radiated, with the Inscription ETRVSCVS ET QVINTVS CAESS. Yet only one of them stands on the Reverse, in the military Habit, with the Hasta pura; and the Legend informs us, that the Coin was struck at Ferusalem, which was now a Roman Colony, and known by the Name of the COLonia AELia KAPITOLINA.

The first Year of this Reign was marked with a most unmerciful Persecution of the Christians, in which the Bishops of Rome, Antioch, and Ferusalem, fuffered Martyrdom: in the Heat of which, the Goths and the Carpi invaded the Lower Mæsia. Against them the Emperor's eldest Son marched with a powerful Army, and gained some Advantages at first, but soon after received a most dreadful Overthrow, himself hardly escaping. The Barbarians were encouraged and supported by Priscus, who affumed the Purple in Macedonia. This brought the Emperor into the Field in Person; and at this Time probably he conferred upon his Son the Tribunitial Power. For a Coin is spoken of by Goltzius, inscribed IMP CAE Q HER ETR MESS DECIVS AVG. Priscus, who was the Brother of the late Emperor, Emperor, was soon after slain, and Decius, if we Decivs. may believe his Panegyrist Zosimus, defeated the Enemy in feveral Engagements, and recovered all the Plunder; but, being determined to destroy them utterly, he cut off their Retreat, and made them desperate: so that, being forced to a decisive Battle, and knowing that their Lives depended upon the Issue, they exerted themselves astonishingly, and gave the Romans an entire Defeat. The Emperor, with his eldest and two youngest Sons, was flain: and to this fatal Event his Successor Gallus is faid to have contributed not a little by his Treachery. Be that as it will, he was honoured with an Apotheosis by the Senate: for one of his Coins is inscribed DIVO DECIO AVG. He reigned little more than two Years, and was near fixty when he perished. and the second of the second of alter the second series

a new market and a department of many and applications

CAIUS VIBIUS TREBONIANUS GALLUS.

TREB. GALLYS.

declared Augustus by the Senate, with the great Good-will of the People. There is one Coin of him existing, according to Goltzius, inscribed IMP CAES AVFidius PERPENNA LICINIANus AVG PM TR P PP. But this Emperor died prefently after his Inauguration. Therefore Gallus, who commanded a separate Army on the Danube, and made haste to succour those who escaped the late Carnage, being, by the Consent of all the Troops, proclaimed Emperor, was acknowledged such at home. His Medal of Gold is inscribed IMP CAE C VIB TREB GALLUS AVG; and on the other Side,

Side, the Providence that raised him is delineated, TREB. GALLYS. holding a Globe and Torch, and is stiled the PRO-VIDENTIA AVGusti. Vows were made for a happy Decennium, as we see on the Frontispiece; and his Son Volusianus was honoured with the Titles of Cæsar, and Prince of the Youth. As such we see him wearing a radiated Crown, with IMP CAE C VIB VOLVSIANO AVGusti; and seated on the Reverse, with a Laurel-Branch in his Hand, and PRINCIpi IVVENTutis. We find his Empress recorded on one Greek and one Roman Medal, by the Name and Title of HOSTILIA SEVERA AVG. He married his Son to HERENNIA ETRUS-CILLA, the Daughter of the late Emperor. On the Coin before us she bears the Title of Augusta; and has a Chastity, seated, for the Reverse, but much more loofely figured than we have hitherto observed it; on one Side is a Goddess, resting on a standing Column, with a Caduceus in her Hand, the Emblem of Security and Felicity; and on the other stands Hygieia, with her Serpent, the Symbol of Health: the Legend is PVDICITIA AVGVSTAE. Hos-TILIAN was the only remaining Son of Decius. Him, with the Consent of the Senate, GALLUS adopted, conferring upon him the Tribunitial Power, and the Title of Augustus. Therefore on his Medal of Bronze we fee him laureated, with IMP CAE

Pl. L. 12.

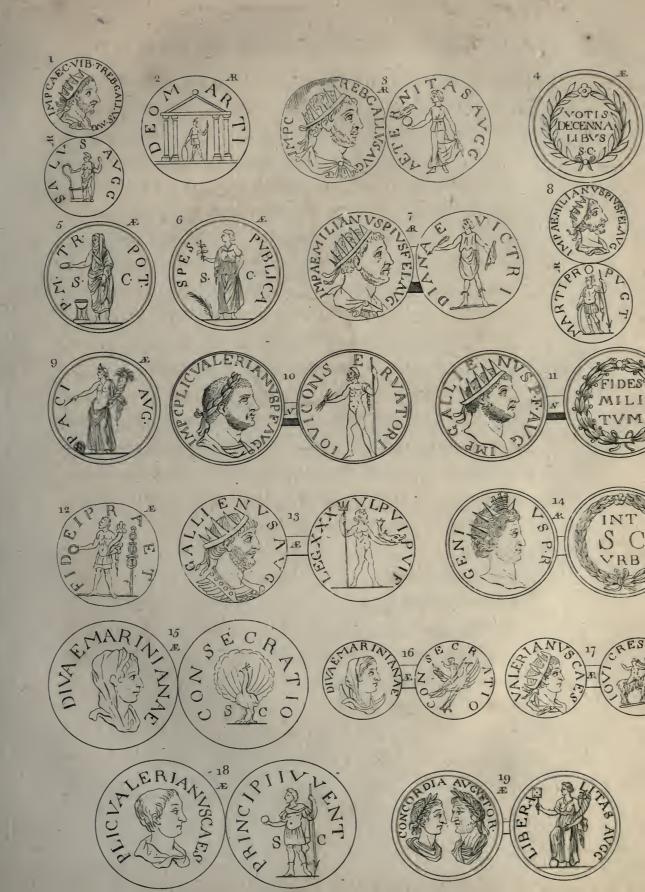

Pl. L. 13.

Pl. L. 14;

Pl. L. 15.

for his Reverse Security, leaning on a standing Column, with SECVRITAS AVGG. But on his Medal of Gold he wears a radiated Crown, with C VALENS HOSTIL MES QVINTVS AVG.;

- the Reverse of which claims the God Mars for his Protector, with the Legend MARTI PROPVG-NATORI. Certainly these were indubitable Testimonies of his prosound Regard for the Memory of the late Emperor, and weigh down the Testimony of Zosimus: for which Reason we give Credit to those who say that Hostilian really died of the Plague the following Year, as was given out, and not by the Treachery of Gallus; at which Time Volusianus, then Consul with his Father, was declared Augustus, and invested with the Tribunitial Power. So that we now behold his curious Medal of Bronze laureated, and inscribed IMP CAE C
- Pl. L. 17. VIB VOLVSIANO AVG; on the Reverse of which is the CONCORDIA AVGG, with the Patera and double Cornucopiæ. His Denarius, with a radiated Crown, has the same Title, with a Temple and
- Pl. L. 18. Deity for the Reverse, inscribed IVNONI MAR-TIALI. But his Medal of Gold, with the Head laureated, and inscribed in the same Manner, has
- Pl. L. 19. for the Reverse a Piety, veiled, with the Hands held up, and PIETAS AVG. Amongst the Greek Coins of this Reign, there are some which have the Heads TREB. GALLYS. of both the Father and the Son laureated: over the former, AVTOK K Γ OYIB TPEB ΓΑΛΛΟС CEB, Imperator Cæsar Caius Vibius Trebonianus Gallus Augustus; and over the latter, OYOAOYCIANOC CEB, Volusianus Augustus. The Reverse is the Genius of the City of Antioch, with a Swimmer underneath, representing the Orontes, and the Legend ANTIO-XEΩN MHTPOKOAΩN, Antiochiensium Metropolitarum Colonia.

Pl. I. 20.

GALLUS made Peace with the Goths, and even fuffered them to retire with their Booty and Prisoners of Rank, promising withal an annual Stipend, if they kept the Peace. For this he is censured, probably without Reason; for, considering the Weakness of the Empire, from the Loss of two such confiderable Armies as had been lately cut off by the fame Enemy, it seems to have been necessary for him to close with such Terms as could be obtained. To add to the public Calamity, the late Edict against the Christians was enforced with all Severity; and the Plague raged with unremitting Violence. The common Wish that it might cease is expressed on his Denarius; on the Reverse of which is the Goddess Hygieia, holding out her Patera to the Serpent, arising from his Repository or Chest, with the Legend

Pl. Ll. 1.

Pl. LI. 2.

TREB. GALLYS. Legend SALVS AVGG. Great Part of the Empire was at the same Time distressed with Famine; and some of the Barbarians passed the Danube, while others invaded Asia. The Persians too crossed the Euphrates, plundered Syria, and made themselves Masters of Antioch, its Capital. All the Sense that Gallus entertained of these Invasions was expressed in the Restitution of the Temple of Mars at Rome, which forms one of his Reverses, with the Legend DEO MARTI. But Aemilianus, Governor of Moefia, collecting what Strength he could, ventured a Battle, obtained a Victory, and cleared his Province of the Enemy. He was in Consequence proclaimed Augustus by the Troops, and instantly marched for Italy. The Emperor, advised of this, gave Directions for the Gallic and German Legions, under the Command of Valerian, to move to his Affistance. But Aemilianus advanced too hastily to admit of it. The two Emperors, therefore, with all the Power they could affemble, met him at no great Distance from Rome. But their Troops, observing their own Inferiority, prevented a Defeat by flaying their own Emperors, and joining Aemilianus. Thus the Reign of Gallus was of eighteen Months Duration only. Both the Father and the Son were afterwards deified, as is evident from the Medal of Silver, Silver, which bears the Head of the former radiated, TREB. GALLYS. with IMP C *** REB GALLYS AVG; and on the Reverse a Goddess, with a Globe in her right Hand, Pl. LI. 3. on which a Phænix rests, with AETERNITAS AVGG.

CAIUS JULIUS AEMILIUS AEMILIANUS.

EMILIANUS, on his Arrival at Rome, was AEMILIANVS.

Pl. LI. 4.

Pl. LI. 5.

Pl. LI. 6,

which had declared him an Enemy, was rescinded. He was invested with the Imperial Power and Honours. Vows were made for an happy Decennium, as appears from the Reverse, with VOTIS DECENNALIBVS S.C. inclosed in a Wreath of Laurel, as well as by the Act itself, expressed upon a different Coin, by the Priest veiled, with a Patera in his Hand, and an Altar before him; as was the general Hope of an auspicious Government, by the SPES PVBLICA, holding out her Lilly. According to some Writers, it was moderate and mild; according to

Pl. LI. 7.

Pl. LI. 8.

Pl. LI. 9.

to others, military and tyrannical. On the fine AEMILIANVS. Medal prefixt, he is laureated, and celebrates his Victory. On another of Silver, he ascribes it DIANAE VICTRIci, and the Goddess is armed with her Bow and Arrow, and buskined for the Chace. On this he wears a radiated Crown, with IMP AEMILIANVS PIVS FEL AVG; as on his. Denarius also, which is inscribed MARTI PRO-PVGna Tori: One of his Coins is impressed with the Figure of the Peace which he hoped for, having a Cornucopiæ in her Hand, and a Globe at her Feet. But this was Self-Adulation; for the Gallic and German Legions had now proclaimed their Leader, Valerian, Emperor, whose Character was superior to that of any Person in the Roman Empire. When, therefore, the Forces at home were affured of this, was they fell upon Aemilianus, and slew; him in his own Palace at Spoletum, after a short Reign of three Months. He was a Moor by Birth, and had raised himself to the first Employments by his perfonal Bravery, Total Total and the service of the s of the Principle World been been until the Period Vol. II.

" mightions by Lekert, of circulation aming the Sentency when Danies education of the the Platton of a Gonfor Aret can all the Sub of el madica et Boch was the military through the Learning, Engineer in Month, the

PUBLIUS

to others, military and tyromical. On the fine Armanana Medal prefixt, he is laureated, and celebrates his Victory. On another of Silver, he afcribes is Pl. I.I. 7.

To confide had no vortained their Loca PUBLIUS LICINIUS VALERIANUS PUBLIUS LICINIUS GALLIENUS.

and the days as fine of the state of the state of Bet its was allered in ion of the Conic

GALLIENVS

VALERIAN CO HE Life of VALERIAN is a Censure. Let him judge of all, who is worthier than " all. Let him be Cenfor of the Senate, who is faultless himself; whose Prudence, Modesty, and Gravity become the Senator; the Friend of good " Men, the Foe of Tyrants, the Enemy of Vice, " illustrious by Descent, of correct Life, eminent of for Learning, fingular in Morals, the Example of Antiquity." Such was the universal Cry of the Senate, when Decius recommended to them the Election of a Cenfor. And had all the Subjects of the Roman World been vested with the Power of PUBLEUS chusing chusing an Emperor, Valerian had been the Man, Valerian without one diffenting Voice. Such was his esta- GALLIENVS blished Character and Popularity when he succeeded to the Imperial Dignity. Immediately he took his eldest Son GALLIENUS as his Colleague, both in the Consulate and Sovereignty. On his Medal of Gold Pl. Ll. 10. he is laureated, with IMP C P LIC VALERIA-NVS P F AVG; and inscribes the Reverse IOVI CONSERVATORI, To Jupiter the Preserver; who in his left Hand holds the Hasta pura, and grasps; the Thunder in his right. But the Head of his Son is radiated, with IMP GALLIENVS P F AVG; and he bears for his Reverse the FIDES MILITVM inclosed in a Wreath of Laurel. This Fidelity of the Soldiers is celebrated on feveral Reverses of the latter; on one of which appear an Eagle, Enfign, and Manipulus, with FIDEI PRAETorianorum; and on another he stands, having a Patera in one Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in the other, with an Enfign fixt by him, and the same Legend. But on a third, which has the Figure of Neptune with his Trident, and a Dolphin, it is particularly applied to the thirtieth and fixth Legions, distinguished as. the LEGio XXX VLPia, and the VI Pia VI Fidelis; though this be the only Instance, that I have seen, of the fixth Legion distinguished either as the Pia, Fidelis, or Felix. For Gallienus a Statue was 3 A 2 contrived.

Pl. LI. 11.

Pl. LI. 12.

Pl. LI. 13.

GALLIENVS.

Pl. LI. 14.

.71. 3.19

contrived, resembling the Sun, but which doubled the usual Size of a Colossus. The Hint of this was probably taken from a Coin struck on his Arrival, by Order of the Senate, which, according to Patin, has the exact Lineaments of his Face, furrounded by the Solar Rays, turrited, and stiled the GENIVS P R Populi Romani: the Reverse is a Wreath, inclosing INTrans VRBem S C. This Notion of a Genius, particularly as applied to the City of Rome, is finely ridiculed by Prudentius contra Symmach. lib. 2, 1. 442.

> Non Genium, cujus frustra simulatur imago: Quanquam cur Genium Romæ mihi fingitis unum ? Cum portis, domibus, thermis, stabulis, soleatis Adsignare-suos Genios, perque omnia membra-Urbis, perque locos, Geniorum millia multa Fingere, ne proprià vacet angulus ullus ab umbrâ: The Men, who dwell there, make the City's Mind, No Genius, with a Form in vain design'd: And why to Rome a single Genius give? Since to the different Quarters where ye live, To Gates, and Domes, the Mansions of each Tribes, And Baths, a several Genius ye ascribe; With thousand Genii thus the Town endow, And scarce a Corner wants its Genius now.

Romam dico viros, quos mentem credimus urbis;

Gallienus was the Fruit of a former Marriage. The present Empress was Mariniana, who, after her Death, received the Honour of Consecration. tieven noo

For

For we have her curious Medal in Bronze, with VALERIAN DIVAE MARINIANAE, whereon the appears GALLIENVS. veiled; with a Peacock, having his Tail displayed, for the Reverse, and the Word CONSECRATIO. But on her Denarius her Head is supported by a Pl. LI. 16. Crescent, and the same Bird is on the Wing, bearing. her to Heaven. By her, VALERIAN had several Children, the eldest of whom was called by his own Name; and to him the usual Distinctions were now decreed by the Senate: since on one of his Medals we read P LIC VALERIANVS CAESar; Pl. LI. 17. on the Reverse of which he stands, in the military Habit, with Spear and Globe, having the Legend PRINCIPI IVVENTutis, and in the Area S C. His Denarius shews him radiated, with VALERIA- Pl. LI. 18. NVS CAES: the Reverse is inscribed IOVI. CRESCENTI; who is mounted on the Goat that nourished him. And this young Prince did indeed! live to be Emperor. On other Coins he is stiled NOBilis: CAESAR.

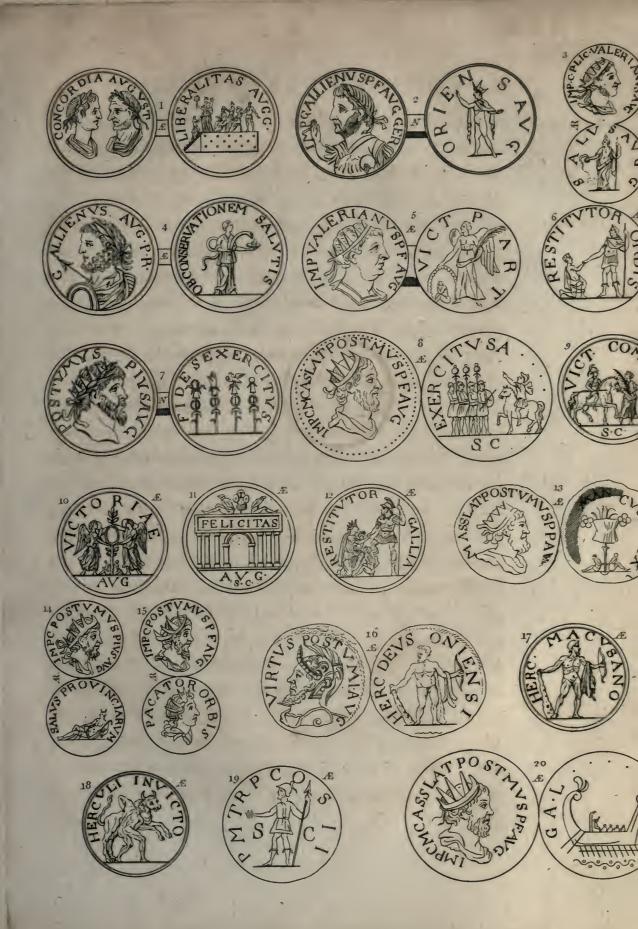

VALFRIAN, on his Accession, studied to justify the great Opinion which the World had conceived of him. His Deference to the Senate secured to him the Esteem of that venerable Body, and his Care to alleviate the public Burdens won the Affections of the People; which were also promoted by their joint: Liberality to them and to the Soldiers, which is recorded.

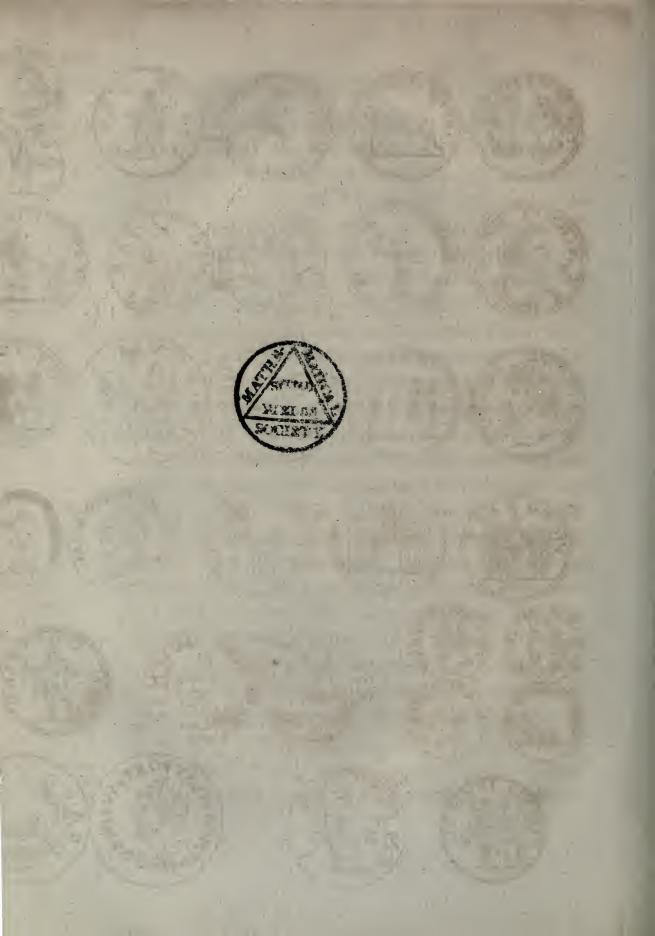

VALERIAN AND GALLIENVS. Pl. LI. 19.

Pl. LII. 1.3

recorded on two feveral Coins, bearing their Heads adverse, with CONCORDIA AVGVSTORum, with the LIBERALITAS AVGG expressed on the one by Liberality treading on a Globe, with her Cornucopiæ and Tessera, and on the other by the usual Form of a Distribution or Congiary. Persons of Merit only were preferred. Disorders were no fooner known than regulated, and the wifest Provisions made for their future Prevention. But the Arts of Peace were too fadly depressed, by the Irruption of Enemies on the Rhine, Danube, and Euphrates. Against the first, Aurelian distinguished himself. But it was judged necessary for GALLIE-Nus, who was then Conful the second, as his Father was the third, Time, to take the Field in Person; and he gave the Germans an entire Defeat; fo that we now read around his laureate Head impressed on Gold, IMP, GALLIENVS P F AVG GERmanicus. Here one Hand is lifted up to engage your Attention to the Importance of the Occasion, and he holds a Globe in the other. On the Reverse he appears in the Character of the Orient or rifing Sun, in the fame Attitude, with ORIENS AVG. On another he is stiled GERMANICVS MAXVmus. The Advantages which he gained over them the next Year were still more considerable. In the same Quarter Postumus acquired great great Reputation. At home the Plague still raged, VALERIAN though all Endeavours were used to keep-down the GALLIENVS. Infection. And these Endeavours are celebrated on a Denarius of VALERIAN by the usual Figure of Hygicia, with the Patera and Serpent, who is called the SALVS AVGG; as it is on feveral Coins of GALLIENUS also, the Legend of one being OB CON-SERVATIONEM SALVTIS

Pl. LII. 2.

Pl. LII. 3.

Pl. LII. 4.

In the following Year the Christians, who had hitherto lived quietly under VALERIAN, and even met with Encouragement, were, at the Instigation of Macrianus, persecuted with all Acrimony. And this Affliction continued fo long as the Authority of VALERIAN did. Probus, afterwards Emperor, now pushed the Enemy across the Danube, acquiring Laurels from the Quadi and Sarmatians; at the fame Time that Aurelian, who had been removed to the Government of Illyricum, drove the Goths before him with great Slaughter; and VALERIAN himself marched against the Persians, who had. widely extended their Arms, and made Cyriades Governor of the conquered Countries. This Man, born of a noble and wealthy Family, had, by his abandoned Luxury and Extravagance, incurred the Displeasure of his Father, whom he robbed of an immense Treasure, and then sled into Persia, where he was entertained by Sapor. Being well acquainted.

with

VALERIAN
AND
GALLIENVS:

with the Country, he became the Conductor of the Persian Armies; which, under his Guidance, over-ran Syria, Cappadocia, and Cilicia. On their Return they had left him behind in full Command, when he assumed the Purple, and the Title of Augustus. He had murdered his Father in the Plenitude of his Power; and was now, on the Approach of Valerian, slain by the Treachery of his own People. He is the first of those who are commonly called the Thirty Tyrants. There is Mention made of a Greek Coin of him, with AΥΤοπρατωρ ΚΑΙσαρ ΚΥΡΙΔΗC CEBαςος, and of a Roman, with the same Title, IMP C CYRIADES P. F. AVG.

The Scythians had passed the Bosphorus, and made great Ravages in Asia, whom Valerian pursued, to no Purpose; for they retired with their usual Celerity, and carried off their Plunder with them. He marched sorward, however, recovering Casarga and Tarsus; and, proceeding to Syria, regained Possession of Antioch, driving the Persuas before him. This Success is recorded on the Medal, which bears the radiated Head of the Emperor, with IMP VALERIANVS P F AVG; and a Victory for the Reverse, with an Eastern Captive at her Feet, and VICTORIA PARTa, or Parthica. Thence he advanced into Mesopotamia, where some crowned Head was restored to his Dominions by him, whom

Pl. LII. 5.

Pl. LII. 6.

we see graciously raised from the Ground by the VALERIAN Emperor, in his military Habit, who is honoured with the pompous Title of RESTITVTOR ORBIS. But this was followed by the greatest Dishonour which, fince the Misfortune of Crassus, had befallen the Roman Empire; for, either led into an iniquitous Situation, by the treacherous Advice of Macrianus, he was defeated and taken Captive (for the Story is differently told) or, in the Midst of a Conference with Sapor, he was perfidiously carried off, and detained a Prisoner.

What was the Behaviour of Gallienus on this Occasion? Did he instantly dispatch Ambassadors to treat of a Ransom for his Father? Or did he fummon the whole Power of the Empire to his Rescue? Neither of these. His Father's Censorial Authority had been irksome to him; and he was well pleased on these Terms to be rid of such a Monitor. Absorbed in Luxury and Dissipation, he gave himself no Concern about it, nor made the least Provision for the Desence of that Quarter: while the barbarous Nations, who despised his thoughtless and dissolute Life, encouraged by this Event, broke in on every Side. He was in Gaul when he received the News of his Father's Captivity. Other Tidings arriving at the same Time, obliged him to hasten his March homewards. For Vol. II. 3 B the

GALLIENVS.

the Germans from Rhætia had passed the Mountains, and were advancing towards Rome; but now hearing of his Return to Italy, they judged it Prudence to retire. With the Goths and Sarmatians, who had passed the Danube, Regillianus, Governor of Illyricum, had feveral Engagements in one Day; and was busied in the Pursuit of them, when Ingennuis, who commanded in Pannonia, was proclaimed Emperor by the Troops there. He was a General of established military Character; yet was defeated by Gallienus; and, after the Action, either put an End to his own Life, or was slain by his own Soldiers. Some Coins of him are mentioned, with IMP C INGENNVVS AVG; others with IMP C Decimus INGENNVVS P F AVG: and others with IMP C. D. LAELius INGENNVVS. PFAVG. GALLIENUS used his Victory with great Cruelty, ordering a general Massacre of the Males in Moesia, who had espoused the Interest of Ingennuus. On which the Malecontents proclaimed Regillianus; but soon after, repenting of what they had done, and dreading the Vengeance of GAL-LIENUS; they flew him, and fubmitted. He is stiled. on his Coins IMP C Quintus NONius REGIL-LIANUS P F AVG.

But the Revolt of Postumus in Gaul was of longer Duration. When Gallienus was last in that Province, vince, he left his Son Saloninus there, under the GALLIENVS. Care of one Sylvanis; who, when Postumus had by a fignal Victory delivered the Province from the Germans, who invaded it, demanded the whole Spoil in the Name of the young Prince. This fo enraged the Troops, that they immediately proclaimed their General. Sylvanus and his Pupil were foon after delivered up to him, and put to Death. He was of such Reputation, that Spain and Britain readily submitted to him. He appears on a Medal of Gold, with a radiated Crown, and the Title of POSTVMVS PIVS AVG. His Reverse, with an Eagle, Manipulus, and two Enfigns, is a Compliment to the Army which chose him, having for its Legend FIDES EXERCITVS. His Medals of large Bronze call him IMP Cæsar Marcus CASsius LA-Tienus POSTMVS P F AVG; on the Reverse of which he is represented as haranguing the Troops on Horseback, with EXERCITVS A """. But we have the very fame Figures in a smaller Form, and there the Inscription is EXERCITVS ISC, which Patin lengthens into Iscanicus, and understands by it the Roman Army in Monmouthshire, in Britain, which gave Name to the Urbs Legionis ad Iscam, City of Caer-Leon-ar-U/k; by the Affistance of which he is supposed to have gained a Victory. For in the Course of the seven Years that his. Authority 3 B 2 lasted.

Pl. LH. 7.

Pl. LII. 8.

31 -17 15

- on one of his Reverses Victory is said to be his Atendant; for the walks familiarly by the Side of his Horse, and with the Wreath in her Hand seems.

  Pl. LII. 9. to direct his Way: the Legend being VICTORIA.
  - Pl. LII. 9. to direct his Way; the Legend being VICTORIA.

    COMES AVG: but, which is extraordinary, we fee the S.C. in the Exergue. Hence it should seem that he had constituted a Senate of his own; for many of the Fathers had sled to him from Rome.
  - Pl. LII. 10. Another Reverse has a Shield fixed against a Tree, by two Victories, with two Captives at the Foot of
  - PL LII. 11. it, and VICTORIAE AVG. Another has a triumphal Arch, with a Trophy and two Captives on the Top, and FELICITAS AVG; and here again
  - Pl. LII. 12. we meet with the S.C. Another calls him the Reforer of Gaul, having before him the Genius of the Province, whom he raises with his Hand; and the
  - Pl. LII. 13. Legend is RESTITVTOR GALLIAE. Another, which is singular in its Kind, bears his Head radiated, with M ASS LAT POSTVMVS PP AVIII; and has for the Reverse two Captives, at the Foot of a Trophy, which is decorated with Roses; and the Legend (a little injured) GERMANICVS MAXimus. On one of his Denarii, on which he is radiated, with IMP POSTVMVS PIVS AVG,
  - Pl. LM. 14. the Rhine is decumbent for the Reverse, and the Legend is SALVS PROVINCIARYM; while another other shews him surrounded with the solar Rays, Gauttenvs. and stiled the PACATOR ORBIS. Thus was the Pl. LII. 15. Roman Empire preserved in the West by his Prudence and Vigour, and restored to its ancient State of Security. Hence Coins were struck by particular Districts, which claimed him as their Hercules; fo that some, with his Head armed, and VIRTVS POSTVMI, are inscribed HERCVLI DEVSONI-ENSI, as Patin supposes, by the People of Duiz, or Deutsche, near Cologne; others, HERCVLI MACVSANO, probably by the Inhabitants of Maesick, in the Principality of Liege; others, HERCVLI INVICTO. On one Reverse he is figured as Mars, with PM TR P COS II; and in the Area S C. He had a Son, who for his Bravery and Eloquence bade fair for being the Rival of his Father's Fame, whom he first declared CAESAR; and afterwards AVGVSTVS. He appears with a radiated Crown, like his Father, and with the same Title. His Reverse is a Row-Galley, with a mutilated Legend GAL "" FA. He perished at last with his Father, by the Conspiracy of Lollianus.

In the East, Sapor was not wanting to himself, but became Master of Antioch once more; and committed dreadful Devastations, not only in Syria, but in Cilicia and Cappadocia. Amongst those who set up for themselves amidst these Distractions,

Pl. LII. 16.

Pl. LII. 17.

Pl. LII. 18.

Pl. LII. 19;

Pl. LII. 201

374

GALLIENVS.

Pl. LIII. I.

Zosimus speaks of Aureolus, Antoninus, and many others; who were nearly all cut off, except Aureolus. This is undoubtedly the Antoninus, whose Memory is preserved on the fine Medal in Bronze before us. His Head is laureated, and he is stiled ΑΥΤΟΚρατωρ COΥΛΠΙΝΙΟς ANTWNINOC CEβασος, Imperator Sulpicius Antoninus Augustus. The Reverse is a magnificent Temple, with the Figure of Elagabal, or the Sun-Image, described already, in the Reign of Heliogabalus; and the Legend EMICWN KOAONIa, the Colony of Emisa. What is intended by the Letters in the Exergue, must be left to the Conjecture of others. All that can be faid at present is, that Emisa was the Scene of his Exaltation, and that he foon died a violent Death, probably by the Hands of his own People; but of the Manner of it History is filent.

The remaining Forces in the East assembled themselves under Macrianus and Balista, and declared the former Emperor, by the Persuasion of the latter. But he pleading his Inability from Age, they readily joined with him his two Sons, Macrianus and Quietus, conferring upon them the same Power and Titles. They were of confiderable Rank in the Army at this Time; and their Father was possessed of immense Wealth. He is said to have studied Magic; and was probably an Egyptian.

The

The Coins struck of him there, give him a radiated GALLIENVS. Crown, and the Title of ATT. K. M DOYASIOG MAKPI-ANOC ATT8505, Imperator Cafar Marcus Fulvius Macrianus Augustus; having for the Reverse the Genius of Alexandria, turrited and veiled, with AAEJAN-APEIA. His two Sons are represented in the same Manner; the first with IMP C FVL MACRIANVS P F AVG; having for the Reverse, Jupiter the: Preserver, seated, holding a Patera and Hasta pura, with IOVI CONSERVATORI; as on his Denarius also: the last with IMP C FVL QVIETVS P F AVG; and the Orient Sun for his Reverse, Pl. LIII. 3. stretching out one Hand, and holding a Globe in the other, with SOLI INVICTO. But on the Reverse of his Denarius a semale Figure is seated, Pl. LIII. 4. and inscribed INDVLGENTIAE AVG. These, with the Assistance of Balista, who was Captain of the Guards, as he had been to VALERIAN, marched from Province to Province, attacking the Persians: where they were least expected, and put great Numbers of them to the Sword: At the same: Time Odenathus, Prince of Palmyra, turned his Arms against them, and they retired with Precipitation. As they passed his Territories, he fell upon their Rear, and did great Execution; fo that to fecure themselves a quiet Passage over the Euphrates, they were forced to purchase it of the Edessans

Pl. LIII. 2:

GALLIENVS.

Pl. Luii. 3.

Ass Late 1

Edessans with the most valuable Part of their Plunder.

During these Proceedings, Manius Acilius Aureolus, Governor of Illyricum, assumed the Purple, and marched against Gallienus, whom he obliged, to come to a Treaty with him, that they might join their Forces against Postumus. On his Coins he is stiled IMP C AVREOLVS P. F. AVG, and IMP C M. ACIL AVREOLVS P. F. AVG.

P. Valerius Valens was at this Time Proconful of Achaia for GALLIENUS, against whom Macrianus, defirous of extending his Authority, fent Piso, with what he thought a fufficient Number of Forces. But Piso, finding himself too weak to cope with him, took up his Quarters in Thessaly, where he also assumed the Titles of AVGVSTVS and THES-SALICVS, and where he was foon after flain by the Emissaries of Valens; who shortly after underwent the same Fate himself, from his own Officers. There is a Greek Coin of Valens, inscribed ATT K ΠΟΥβλίος ΟΥΑΛΕΡίος ΟΥΑΛΕΝΟ, Imperator Cafar Publius Valerius Valens; and another of Pisos stiling him AY A KAAHOYPNIOC HEICON, Imperator Lucius Calpurnius Piso. But the Character of this last was so unexceptionably great, that the Senate, confident of the Approbation even of GAL-LIENUS, decreed his Confectation, together with a triumphal morials of him. There was another Valens, named Superior, Great Nephew of him now spoken of; who, after him, set up for himself in Illyricum; and, after a Reign but of a few Days, was slain by the Army.

The next Year, while Odenathus, having taken in Mesopotamia, passed the Tigris, and laid Siege to Ctefiphon, the Capital of Sapor, Macrianus and his eldest Son marched against GALLIENUS; and, having croffed the Hellespont, were encountered in Illyricum by Domitian, the Lieutenant of Aureolus, by whom they were defeated and flain. Odenathus. on this Event, immediately declared for GALLIENUS, and besieged Quietus and Balista, in the City of Emesa. But the Inhabitants, to make their Peace. cut off the Head of Quietus; and, throwing it over the Walls, furrendered. This is faid to have been done by the Advice of Balista, who therefore received his Pardon; and, continuing there with the Troops, was by them foon afterwards declared Augustus. This produced'a dreadful Slaughter of the Inhabitants, who were backward to admit his Title. He was afterwards flain as he lay in his Tent, by one of the common Soldiers of Odenathus. Some Coins there are of him, which call Vol. II. 3 C him

GALLIENVS. him IMP C SERgius ANICius BALISTA P F AVG.

> All this while Heaven and Earth feemed to concur in heaping Afflictions upon the Roman Empire. The Scythians invaded Afia afresh, destroyed several Cities in Bithynia, and facked and burned the Capital. A Body of them plundered the Temple of Diana, at Ephesus. A Sort of Servile War was kindled in Sicily, by a numerous Body of Banditti, who were with Difficulty suppressed. A most dreadful Earthquake, and Darkness which continued for many Days, heightened the general Dread. Subterraneous Thunders were heard; and many Buildings, with their Inhabitants, were fwallowed up. Many Persons died through Fear. But the Calamity was more terrible in Afia. The Shock was felt in Rome, and even in Lybia. The Sea overwhelmed many Cities, and the Plague made dreadful Ravages. The Sibylline Books were inspected, and a Sacrifice decreed to Jupiter the Salutary. The Goths, occupying Thrace, laid waste Macedonia, and besieged Thessalonica; and Aemilianus, who commanded in Egypt, usurped the Imperial Purple, seizing upon the Granaries. But Theodotus, coming to an Engagement with him. took him alive, and fent him to GALLIENUS, by whose Order he was strangled. On his Coins we GALLIENVS.

read IMP C TI CEST ALEX AEMILIANVS
AVG.

Gallienus now, with Aureolus and Claudius, afterwards Emperor, began his Expedition against Postumus. This last was strongly supported by the Gauls and Franks, and had admitted Victorinus to a Participation of his Power, an Officer of great Activity and Bravery, equal in Valour to Trajan, to Antoninus in Clemency, in Gravity to Nerva, in Oeconomy to Vespatian, in Discipline to Pertinax or Severus. But these Excellencies were all corrupted by his immoderate Love of Women, which cost him his Life at last. This War was carried on with various Fortune, and drawn out to a considerable Length. In the present Campaign Postumus was superior in the first Encounter, and Gallienus in the second, but it was not decisive.

The Behaviour of Gallienus at Byzantium, whither he marched in the following Year, and which should rather redound to his Praise, is by most Historians turned to his Discredit. But the Fact was, even according to Trebellius Pollio, that the Soldiers of Gallienus, in Garrison there, had sacked the Place, and utterly destroyed the Inhabitants; that he went thither to avenge the Cause of the Byzantines, and, not expecting otherwise to he

GALLIENVS.

be received within the Walls, promised Pardon to the Soldiers, whom, on his Admission the next Day, he surrounded and put to the Sword contrary to his Engagement. This done, he returned hastily to Rome, and celebrated the Conclusion of his first Decennium, and the Entrance of his second, with extraordinary Pomp and Magnisicence.

At this Time another Commander, by Name Saturninus, usurped the Imperial Honours, which he maintained with Dignity for some Time, and was then flain by those who raised him. Goltzius takes Notice of one Coin of him, with the Title IMP C SEXtius IVLius SATVRNINVS AVG. This was in Egypt. But Trebellianus did the like in Isauria. On his Coins he is complimented with the Title of IMP C Caius ANnius TREBEL-LIANus P F AVG, and was put to Death two Years after. The Example was presently imitated by Celsus in Africa: One of his Greek Medals is fpoken of, with the Infcription ATTOK TITOS ΚΟΡΝΗΛιος ΚΕΛΟΟΟ ΕΥσεβης ΟΕΒαςος, Imperator Titus Cornelius Celsus Pius Augustus. But his Ambition presently proved fatal to him.

The most popular Act of this Reign was the Investiture of Odenathus with the Imperial Purple, to whose Fidelity and Gallantry was principally owing that the Persians were not Masters of all Asia.

For his Activity had been unwearied, and the Ene- GALLIENVS. my was constantly defeated by him in every Engagement. He had sent to Rome a great Number of noble Captives; and the Emperor, feizing the Opportunity, demanded a Triumph, of which they were the chief Ornaments. Thus Odenathus conquered, and GALLIENUS triumphed. The same Year CENSOR'NUS, a Man of high Quality, who had gone through all the great Offices of State, and was now far gone in Years, and very lame from a Wound which he had received in VALERIAN'S Perfian War, and lived peaceably in his Country-house, was proclaimed Emperor by some of the Troops in Italy; but being a strict Commander, and suffering no Relaxation from the ancient Discipline, he was presently destroyed by the same Hands that raised him. The Inscription upon his Coin is IMP C APpius CLAVDius CENSORINVS AVG:

The Year following, the brave Odenathus was flain by his near Relation Mæonius, who usurped his Sovereignty, and prefently underwent the same Fate himself. There is one Greek Coin of him, with ATT KAIC MΟΙΩΝΙΟC ETC CEB, Imperator Cæsar Mæonius Pius Augustus. With Odenathus perished, by the same Conspiracy, his eldest Son by a former Wife, whom Pollio calls Herodes, but who, on some Coins that remain of him, is stiled HE-RODIANVS

GALLIENVS. RODIANVS IMPERATOR AVG. Those of his Father run IMP ODENATHVS P F AVG, having Reverses representing the Persians taken captive by him. We meet with a Denarius of the Conspirator, whereon he wears a radiated Crown, with Pl. LIII. 5. IMP C MAEONIVS: and has for his Reverse a VENVS victrix; for she holds a Spear in one Hand, probably in Compliment to Zenobia, who is faid to have encouraged his Treason from her Dislike of Herodian. This Lady, who was the fecond Wife of Odenathus, is one of the most celebrated of Antiquity. She boafted her Lineage from Cleopatra and the Ptolemies. After the Death of her Husband, she put on the Imperial Mantle, and a Crown of Gold adorned with Gems, administering the Government in the Name of her Sons Herennianus and Timolaus. She imitated the Pride of the Persian Court, and was adored after their Fashion, but her Entertainments were given in the Roman Manner. In the military Assemblies fhe appeared with an Helmet upon her Head, and a Sword in her Hand, with her Arm bare. In Complexion she was a Brunette. Her Eyes were black, full of Life and Spirit, and of incredible Sweetness. Her Teeth were of such lucid Whiteness, that many judged them to be rather Pearls than Teeth. Her Continence never admitted the

Embraces

Embraces of her Husband when once she had Rea- GALLIENVS. fon to conclude herself with Child. She was sometimes feen abroad in her Carriage, but commonly on Horseback, and would frequently go three or four Miles on Foot. Tho' fober, she would drink with her Officers, and with the Persians and Armenians, in order to fift them to her Advantage Coins there are of her in the Cabinet of Versailles, inscribed CEIITIMIA ZHNOBIA CEBasn; with Hope holding out her Lilly for the Reverse, and L &, Anno quinto. Others of the same Date have the Figure of Abundantia, or Plenty, standing, with the right Hand extended, and a double Cornucopiæ in the left. There is one in the Pembrokian Collection, the Reverse of which is much injured by Time, both in the Figures and the Legend; but two Caps are to be feen, with a Star over each, for Castor and Pollux, the Sons of Jupiter, in Allusion to her own two Sons abovementioned. The Letters discernible are, AHOAA Γ ««». She was fo far from paying the same Deference to Gallienus, which her Husband had done, that she engaged and defeated, this very Year, the Troops which he fent against the Persians. At the same Time another Competitor for Empire started up on the Rhine. This was L. Aelianus, who commanded in that Quarter under Postumus, Pl. LIII. 6.

Pl. LIII. 7.

Pl. LIII. 8,

GALLIENVS and had done good Service against the Germans. Him Postumus besieged in Mentz, and, the Place being taken, put him to Death. We have a Denarius of him, whereon he is covered with a radiated Crown, and around it, IMP C Lucius AE-LIANVS P F AVG; having a Victory bearing a Pl. LIII. 9. Wreath and Palm-Branch for the Reverse, with TO THE VICTORIA AVG. The Troops, which took Mentz, expected to have been gratified with the Plunder of the City, which being refused them, at the Infligation of Lollianus (who also usurped the Imperial Authority) they broke out into Mutiny, and destroyed both Postumus and his Son. Goltzius, from one of his Coins, has transcribed his Title, IMP C SPurius SERVILius LOLLIANVS P F AVG. Lollianus, who was of mean Extraction, had raifed himself to the highest Commands in the Army by his Merit, and hoped by his usual Bravery to maintain his assumed Dignity. But Victorinus made Use of his own Arts, inciting his own Soldiers against him. They complained of the Drudgery and Hardships which he made them suffer, in repairing the feveral Camps and Fortifications which the Germans had destroyed immediately on the Death of Postumus.

Victorinus was now fole Emperor in Gaul, several of whose Coins have reached us. One of his Medals dals in Gold shews him laureated, and cased in GALLIENVS. Armour, with his Spear resting on his Shoulder. On his Shield are depicted two Combatants; the one prostrate, and at the Mercy of his Adversary. The Title is IMP VICTORINVS P F AVG. On the Reverse is a youthful Head laureated, and over against it a female Figure with a Bow; probably representing his Mother in the Character of Diana, and his Son, who was first made CESAR, and afterwards Augustus: the Legend VOTA AVGVSTI. Another of the same Metal has for its Reverse two Lions, and a female Head, covered with the Skin of an Elephant, representing Africa: the Legend is LEGio IIII FLAVIA Pia Felix. His Denarius has Ceres, with her Foot on the Beak of Pl. LIII. 11. a Ship, and holding up her Son Plutus, who rests upon the same Knee; and on the other Side of her is a Grasshopper: proper Emblems of that Wealth and Plenty which form the SAECVLI FELICI-TAS. One of his Medals in Bronze has the SALVS Pl. LIII. 12. AVG, as usually figured; another, the orient Sun hasting, with the Whip in his Hand, to denote the Rapidity of his Motions, with INVICTVS. There is a Coin of his Son, with IMP C Plavonnius VICTORINVS AVG; and a Female standing on the Reverse, with a Cornucopia, called the AEQVI-TAS AVG. The Father's -ungovernable Lust Vol. II. brought 3 D

Pl. LIII. 10.

GALLIENVS. brought on the Ruin of both; for, having debauched the Wife of one Attitianus, a Scrivener, he fell a Sacrifice to the Vengeance of the injured Husband, and some of the Soldiers at the same Time dispatched the Son. He was however honoured by his Officers with an Apotheofis, as appears from three Medals with an Eagle, and the Word CONSECRATIO, one of which is annexed. Pl. LIII. 13.. These had borne the Name of Emperors, but it was the Mother VICTORINA (fometimes called VICTORIA) who ruled with absolute Authority. Her immense Wealth and Generosity had rendered her extremely popular; so that in Gaul she made Emperors at Pleasure. There is a Coin of her, Pl. LIII. 14. whereon she is armed like Pallas, which has the very fingular Infcription IMPeratrix VICTORINA AVGusta, and an Eagle for the Reverse. On the Death of her Son and Grandson, her Influence was exerted in Favour of M. Aurelius Marius, who had been at first an Armourer, but had distinguished himself both in Gaul and Britain. He wears a ra-

Pl. LIII. 15. diated Diadem, with IMP C MARIVS PF AVG; and the Reverse, with joined Hands, celebrates the Unanimity of the Army in his Election by the

Pl. LIII. 16. CONCORDIA MILITVM. The Reverse of his Denarius is the SAECVLI FELICITAS, with a Caduceus and Cornucopiæ. We have the same in Bronze;

Bronze; and another with a Victory, holding out a Gallienvs. Wreath in one Hand, and a Palm Branch in the Pl. LIII. 17. other, with VICTORIA AVG. His Reign is faid to have lasted but three Days; which is not probable; there being scarce Time for gaining a Victory, or recording the Felicity of it. He was slain by a Soldier; who had been formerly one of his Workmen; who assured him, that he fell by a Sword of his own making.

The next Choice of Victorina fell upon C. Pivefus Tetricus. His Son was also declared CÆSAR, and foon after Augustus. The Army too expressed their Veneration of the Person of Victorina, by declaring her the MATER CASTRORVM, or Mother of the Camp, as she is stiled in an ancient Inscription. Tetricus was a Senator of Consular Rank, and at that Time Commander of the Troops in Aquitane. His Authority was acknowledged both in Spain and Britain, and his Reign continued to the fourth Year of Aurelian. His Coins are common amongst us. On those of Gold his Head is laureated, with IMP C TETRICVS P F AVG: on the Reverse he appears in his military Habit, with an armed Spear in one Hand, and a Globe in the other, with PM TR P II COS PP. But his Denarius gives him a radiated Crown, and bears for its Reverse the SALVS AVGG. He has the

Pl. LIII. 18°

Pl. LIII. 19.

3 D 2

fame

MILITVM, holding an Enfign in each Hand:
others have the SPES PVBLICA: others, Fortune with her Helm, and holding out a Wreath, infcribed LAETITIA AVGG. We have also the Pl. LIV. 1. Denarius of his Son, with a radiated Crown, and
C. PIVESus TETRICVS, with the SPES AVGG for the Reverse. The same is expressed in Bronze.
Pl. LIV. 2. Another has the PIETAS AVGG, with facrificial
Pl. LIV. 3. Instruments: another, the PAX AVG, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and an Olive-Branch in the other.

Gallienus, (though a great Part of the Empire was rent from him, by the Power of Zenobia in the East, and of Tetricus in the West, while the Goths were preparing for a fresh Invasion, both of the European and Asiatic Provinces) behaved with amazing Unconcern, as if all Things proceeded to his Wish. He pretended to the People, that all was Peace. That they might believe so, they were soothed with Games, and Shews, and Festivities of every Kind. Coins were struck to confirm the Plenty and the Peace of which he boasted. On one of his Denarii, accordingly, we see the Figure of Abundance, with her Cornucopiæ, and a Cap, the Emblem of Liberty, in her Hand, with VBERITAS AVG; and another, of the Empress SALONINA AVGusta, bears

Pl. LIV. 4.

Pl. LIV. 5.

bears the Temple and Statue DEAE SEGETIAE, GALLIENVS. Of the Goddess of the Corn yet growing. One of his Coins in Bronze has GALLIENVS AVG. around his radiated Head; and for its Reverse a Trophy with two Captives, alluding to the late Advantage gained over Postumus, with PAX FVNDATA. Another, in Gold, gives his laureate Head on one Side, and on the other, a Victory driving a bigated Car, with VBIQVE PAX. One of the Empress's Coins again shews her enthroned, and holding out a Wreath, with AVGusta IN PACE. These have been taken for fatirical Coins; but whoever will be at the Trouble of confulting the Elder Victor, may be convinced of the Seriousness of their Intention. For Raillery on Coins, as Mr. Addison observes, is of a modern Date. And, to convince them of his Security, he gloried in the Protection of every pretended Deity in Heaven; for we have of his Coins, dedicated to Jupiter his Preserver, IOVI CON-Servatori AVGusti, with the Amalthaan Goat that nursed him; to the Sun, SOLI CONS AVG, symbolized by the winged Horse Pegasus; and to the fame, by the Ox, his Assistant in the Production of Corn; to Apollo, APOLLINI CONS AVG, by the flying Gryphon; and to the same, by the Centaur, with a Globe and Arrow; to Neptune, NEPTVNO CONS AVG, by the Sea-Horse; to Bacchus,

Pl. LIV. 6.

Pl. LIV. 7.

Pl. LIV. 8.

Pl. LIV: 9.

Pl. LIV. 10.

81 .VII . I Pl. LIV. 11.

Pl. LIV. 12.

Pl. LIV. 13.

Pl. LIV. 14.

LIBERO

GALLIENVS. LIBERO Patri CONS AVG, by the Tiger; and to Pl. LIV. 15. Diana, DIANAE CONS AVG, by the Stag.

But these Pretences could last but a little while; for the Goths were now in Motion, and obliged him to take the Field in Person. On the Side of Thrace, they were opposed with good Success by Cleodemus and Atheneus. Their Fleet also was defeated by Venerianus, though himself perished in the Engagement. Yet they afterwards plundered Cyzicus, and the proper Asia, and then landed in Achaia, where they were again deseated by the Athenians, under Dexippus the Historian. The Remnant made their Way through Epirus, Acarnania, and Bæotia, and in Illyricum were encountered by Gallienus, who cut many of them in Pieces, and took their Leader captive.

While he was thus employed, Aureolus marched towards Rome, intending to make himself sole Emperor; so that Gallienus, leaving the Pursuit of the Barbarians to the Caré of Martianus, hastened back into Italy. He now declared Valerian, his Brother, to be Augustus. In that Character he appears on a Greek Coin, with his Head laureated, and A. K. II. AIK. OYAAEPIANOC, Imperator Cæsar Publius Licinius Valerianus. On the other Side is the Genius of Clazomene, a City of Iönia, where the Coin was struck, with the Statue of the Ephesian Diana

Pl. LIV. 16.

Diana in her Hand. Coming to a Battle with Au- GALLIENVS. reolus, he defeated him, and forced him to shut himself up in Milan, where he besieged him. During this Siege, his principal Commanders, Martianus, Heraclianus, Cecrops, Aurelian, and Claudius, who succeeded him, entered into a Conspiracyfor his Destruction; to accomplish which they gave him the false Alarm of an Eruption made by the Enemy about Midnight. He immediately mounted his Horse, and, issuing out unarmed, and without his Guards, was mortally wounded by Cecrops. His Son and Brothers were flain at the same Time. Finding his End to be near, he ordered the Infignia of the Imperial Dignity to be carried to Claudius, as most worthy to succeed him; who, in Return, protected his remaining Friends and Relations; and did him the Honour of a Confecration. On a Greek Coin, struck by the Citizens of Pl. LIV. 17. Prusa, on the River Hypius, and bearing on one Side his laureate Head, and on the other the plain Head of his Brother VALERIAN, he is called HOY. AIK. IFNA. FAAAIHNOC, Publius Licinius Ignatius. Gallienus. Of his Empress Cornelia Salonina Augusta we have several Medals, besides those already mentioned; a very fine one, particularly, in Pl. LIV. 18. Bronze, with a IVNO REGINA for the Reverse: and two Denarii, the one with a VENVS FELIX. enthroned, enthroned, and the other inscribed VESTAE GALLIENVS. AETERNAE, having the Goddess standing, with Pl. LV. 2. the Hasta pura in one Hand, and the Palladium in Pl. LV. 3. the other. There is likewise one in Bronze, having. a VENVS GENETRIX for the Reverse, with a Cupid before her; and two Greek Coins, valuable for having preferved the Maiden Name, Chrylogone, Pl. LV. 4. of this Empress. One of them bears her Head upon a Crescent, with CAΛωνίνα ΧΡΥCOΓΟΝΗ CEβαςη: the Reverse a Diana, the Coin having been struck by the Ephefians. The Inscription of the other is Pl. LV. 5. CAAONIVA XPYCOFONH, and was struck by the Sardians; having the Genius of their City, turrited and enthroned, for the Reverse. The first of these was already thrown into a Brazier's melting Pot, when Patin redeemed it; who warmly congratulates himself on his good Fortune in the Recovery of it. There is a Vesta also for the Reverse of the Pl. LV. 6.

Pl. LV. I.

Wife of his Brother VALERIAN.

From the difregarded Captivity of his Father, and the many Tyrants that started up in his Time, Historians have taken Occasion to blacken the Memory of Gallienus very deeply. Yet there have been many Emperors incomparably worse, who have been better spoken of. His Coolness upon his Father's Missortune was, without Doubt, highly criminal,

Denarius of CORNELIA SVPERA AVGusta, the criminal, and basely dishonourable. But this was GALLIENVS. but one Inflance of that strange Indifference which he shewed in all Cases, which did not immediately concern his Life and very Being as an Emperor. Thus, when told of the Revolt of Egypt, " What "then," faid he, "can we not live without the "Linen of Egypt?" So when informed of the Defolation of Afia, by Enemies and Earthquakes, "Well," he cried, "we can do without Saltpetre." This was a Proof of his being deeply plunged in Sensualities: fince he was neither stupid, nor pufillanimous; for he was a Master of Elocution, a good Poet, and versed in all the fine Arts. Pollio, to evince the Brilliancy of his Genius, fays, that when he married his Cousins, and the most eminent Greek and Latin Poets of the Age spoke their several Epithalamia, his own extemporaneous Lines exceeded all their laboured Compositions. For, taking the young Princes by the Hands, he thus addressed them:

> Vos ite, o Pueri, pariter, sudate Medullis Omnibus inter vos; non murmura vestra columbæ, Brachia non hederæ, non vincant oscula conchæ.

Go meetly pair'd, fond Youths, and fear no Foil, Strain every Nerve, and urge the tender Toil, Nor yield, amidst the softer Feats of Love, In amorous Murmurs to the cooing Dove; As clasping Ivies let your Arms entwine, Nor Conchs kiss closer, when your Lips shall join. GALLIEN VS.

The Verses are indeed elegant in their Kind (how-ever small the Merit of it) the Images being strong, and the Language pure and expressive. Of his Intrepidity and Bravery, the Actions of his Reign yield sufficient Testimony. But they were only Flashes of Valour; and he was eager to return to the Life of Pleasure and Dissipation, which he introduced affected. It was this indolent Disposition which gave Occasion for the many Usurpations which disgraced his Reign, as well as to the repeated Incursions of the prædatory Barbarians. He governed sisteen Years: seven in Conjunction with his Father, and eight from the Time that he was taken Prisoner.

the second of could be deliberated by the second and the state of the same of the same

and the second second second

I sent in the sent of the country

a little and that the author thinks

Contract the passall seems of the passal products

MARCUS AURELIUS CLAUDIUS.

N the Death of Gallienus, the Army was in CLAVDI Flame, calling for Vengeance; and was with Difficulty appealed by the Officers, on the Distribution of twenty Pieces of Gold to each Man; for the late Emperor always carried a great Treasure with him. The Commotion being over, they proclaimed CLAUDIUS Emperor, who immediately wrote an Account of what passed to the Senate; which, with much Chearfulness, confirmed the Election. His Character was worthy of it; for, if we may believe his Historian Pollio, his Panegyrist rather, all the Virtues and great Qualities of all the ancient Heroes of Rome were united in him.

CLAUDIUS. is faid to have been the natural Son of the third GORDIAN, begotten, according to Victor, upon a Dalmatian Lady, by the young Emperor, just before his Marriage, by Way of Instruction and Experiment. (Vide Hist. Aug. Lugd. Bat. 1671, Not. 4 & 5, ad pag. 375.) His Gravity, Probity, and Chastity were exemplary. He was an hearty Feeder, but drank little Wine. His Person was tall, his Eyes sparkling, and his Countenance full and broad. He had fuch Strength in his Fingers, that with a fingle Blow he would beat out the Teeth of Horses or Mules. His Feats of this Sort, in the Exercises of the Camp, had been such as deserved now to be recorded on his Coins, by the Representation of Hercules, with his Club, and the PI. LV. 7. Lion's Skin depending from his Arm; explained by the Legend IVVENTVS AVGusti. His Advancement is fignified by the FORTVNA REDux, with Pl. LV. 8. her usual Attributes; as his Arrival at Rome is also by his Equestrian Statue, with the Hand held up, which is called the ADVENTVS AVGusti. His Liberality on this Occasion is expressed on his De-Pl. LV. 9, 10. narius, which bears his radiated Head, with IMP C CLAVDIVS AVG; and the Figure of LIBE-RALITAS AVGusti, standing, for the Reverse, with the Tessera and Cornucopiæ. We have the same

Figure in Bronze, but without her Cornucopiæ.

2 21 2

The

The proper Dispositions were now made for the CLAVDIVS.

Depression of Aureolus; who came to an Engagement in the open Field, was deseated, taken Prifoner, and slain; though Zosimus says that he submitted, and was slain by the Soldiers around.

CLAUDIUS; and Vietor, that he sell by his own Men. However that be, his Troops joined CLAUDIUS; who, with that Reinforcement, sell upon the Alemans, who had entered Italy, near the Lake Benacus, whom he routed, with such Slaughter that scarce one Half of them survived the Carnage.

For which Reason we meet, on some of his Coins, with the Surname of GERMANICVS.

The next Year he was Conful the second Time with Ovinius Paternus. And now it was that the Goths or Scythians, with the Heruli, the Peuceni, the Virtingui, Sigipedes, and many other Nations, instigated by those who had escaped the Sword of Gallienus, assembled on the Banks of the Tyras, to the Number of three hundred and twenty thousand Men. They had provided for their Expeditions two thousand, Zosimus says six thousand, Vessels. With these they entered the Euxine Sea; and, after attempting Tomos and Marcianopolis in vain, proceeded with a fair Wind to the Streights of Propontis, where the Rapidity of the Stream drove their Vessels foul upon one another, so that some were sunk, CLAVDIVS. funk, and others driven on Shore, to their great-Loss. Sailing on, however, and refitting under Mount Athos, they put to Sea again; and landing, laid Siege to Cassandria and Thessalonica. But hearing that the Emperor was advancing against them, they marched further inland, and plundered the Territory of Doberus and Pelagonia. Here the Dalmatian Cavalry cut off three thousand of them. Engaging the Emperor, their Numbers obliged the Romans to retreat; who nevertheless, coming upon them afterwards by Surprize, and through unknown Ways, destroyed no fewer than fifty thousand of them. One Body, failing by Theffaly, and round Greece, laid waste the maritime Coasts, and carried off the People from the open Country; but could make no Impression upon any fortified Place.

> While the Scythians, thus dispersed, were mouldering away, Zenobia sent her Generals, Zabdas and Timagenes, to invade Egypt, at the Head of seventy thousand Men. They defeated the Egyptian Army, which was fifty thousand strong, and took Possession of the Country, leaving behind them a Body of five thousand Men to secure their Conquest. These were foon after defeated by Probus, to whom the Emperor had given the Charge of clearing the Sea of Pirates, with his own Forces, and fuch Egyptians as continued firm to the Roman Interest; and who,

> > after

J. Mark

after his Victory, intrenched himself on an Eminence near Babylon, in order to cut off their Retreat. But Timagenes, who was himself an Egyptian, and perfectly acquainted with the Country, came upon him unexpectedly, with two thousand Palmyrenians, and put his little Army to the Rout. Probus himself was taken, and put an End to his own. Life.

Meantime the conquered Scythians, fortifying themselves with their Chain of Carriages, marched for Macedonia in melancholy Plight, Numbers of them perishing for Want of Provisions; and the Roman Cavalry coming up with them, and destroying many more, forced them to turn towards Mount Hæmus. Here they were furrounded, and fuffered no small Loss. But the Roman Cavalry and Infantry: disagreeing, through Jealousy of each other, they gained a confiderable Advantage over the latter, though the Damage was presently repaired by the: former, who flew to their Relief: so that, not being: able to proceed, and the Plague breaking out amongst them, many surrendered, and many more were disposed of by Disease, Famine, and the Sword. Those at Sea, after circumnavigating the Islands of Crete and Rhodes, retired as well as they could, without doing any thing worthy of Record. This Success was honoured with Reverses of VIC-TORIA

- CLAVDIVS. TORIA (one of which is in the Pembrokian Collection, but so badly executed, that it would difference the Plate) and with the Surname of Gothicus, by which this Emperor is commonly distinguished. His own Protection, amidst these Dangers, he ascribes, on some of his Coins, to Hercules and
- Pl. LV. 11. Vesta (as we conceive); there being, over the former, CONSErvatori, and over the latter, COnservatori AVGusti: on others, to the Queen of Heaven,
- Pl. LV. 12. distinguished by her Peacock, and the Legend IVNO REGINA. This Device we have seen already, forming a Reverse of Manlia Scantilla; but it will be difficult to find it on the Coin of any other Emperor. The Spoil recovered from these vagrant Armies was immense, insomuch that Pollio says he did not only provide for the Security of the Commonwealth, but overloaded it with Opulence, opulentia nimictate donavit. Hence we cannot wonder
- Pl. LV. 13. that Abundantia or Plenty should appear upon his Coins on this Occasion, with her double Cornucopiæ. The short Remainder of his Reign was employed to the great Advantage of the Empire, regulating Abuses, and enacting wholesome Laws. His Equity is therefore, with Propriety, enthroned on the Re-
- Pl. LV. 14. verse before us, with her Cornucopiæ in one Hand, and her even Scales, or Balance, in the other.

  Amidst other Cares, the Coinage merited his Regard. This we judge from one of his Reverses; CLAVDIYS. inscribed REGI ARTIS, meaning Vulcan, who is Pl. LV. 15. figured with his Hammer and Forceps, the Instruments principally made Use of in that Business.

On the fourth of February, of the next Year, which was the third of his Reign, he died, according to some, of the Plague, at Sirmium, much lamented; according to others, he was flain in a Mutiny of the Soldiers; but, as others fay, he had devoted himself, as the Decii did, to ensure Success to the Roman Arms. It is not strange that one of this Turn should persecute the Christians for being such. We have feveral Medals of his Confecration; one with his radiated Head, and DIVO CLAVDIO, with the Reverse inscribed IOVI CONSERVA- Pl. LV. 16. TORI, who is figured standing, with the Hasta pura in his left Hand, and the Thunder in his right; others with an Altar blazing, and the Word CONSECRATIO; and others with an Eagle, and the same Legend. He died Childless, but left behind him two Brothers, Quintillus, who fucceeded him, and Crispus, the Father of Claudia, who was married to Eutropius, by whom she became the Mother. of Constantius Cæsar. He had also Sisters, one of whom was called Constantina. And this is the first Mention that we find made of the Name. A Golden Shield, with his Image engraven on it, was placed Vol. II. 3 F in

Pl. LV. 17.

CLAVDIVS.

in the Senate-House, as a Memorial of him; as was his Statue of Gold, ten Feet high, near that of Jupiter, in the Capitol; and another of Silver, weighing fifteen hundred Pounds, in the Forum. We have only to add, that neither was Gallienus, as Spanheim afferts, nor Claudius, as others, the last on whose Coins the Titles of Pontifex Maximus, and the Tribunitial Power, are recorded.

and the same of th

1 - 2 7 - 0 - 7 - 1 - 1 - 1 and the special party of the same

the second second

MARCUS AURELIUS CLAUDIUS QUINTILLUS.

Fare not to expect from Medals much In-QVINTILLUS. formation of a Reign of seventeen Days.

Yet there are, in the Cabinets of the Curious, some five or fix different Coins of QUINTILLUS; who resembled his Brother in his excellent Qualities, both of Body and Mind, and was therefore unanimously chosen by the Senate to succeed him. One of them has for the Reverse a Soldier standing, with the Legend VIRTVS AVGusti. One is inscribed MARTI PACIFICO: and another has the FIDES MILITVM between two Ensigns. Of a Piece with Pl. LV. 18, 19. this last, is the CONCORDIA AVGusti, with her

- QVINTILLUS. Cornucopiæ, and a military Ensign in her right Hand.

  These are Proofs that the Army at least concurred in his Election. His Denarius bears his Head radiated, with IMP C M. AVREL QVINTILLUS;
  - Pl. Lv. 20. the Reverse of which is inscribed FORTVNAE REDuci, who appears standing, with her usual Attributes. But a Victory, in so short a Reign, was
  - Pl. LV. 21. fcarce to be expected. Yet fuch we have, with her Wreath and Palm-Branch; denominated the VIC-TORIA AVGusti. A Body of the Goths or Scythians, who had separated from the rest, in their Way home plundered Anchialus in Thrace, and made an Attempt upon Nicopolis in Mæsia, but were defeated by the Provincial Troops. This was the Victory here celebrated: and this was the only memorable Event of his Reign. Pollio says, that he was flain by the Soldiers, for the same Reason that GALBA and PERTINAX had so perished before him, because they could not bear his Gravity and Severity: while others affirm, that he opened a Vein and bled to Death, when he found that the Army had proclaimed Aurelian, to whom he knew himself unequal.

LUCIUS DOMITIUS AURELIANUS.

HE Services of Aurelian to the Empire had Avrelian. been very eminent. The Senate, therefore, readily confirmed his Election, on the Death of QUINTILLUS. The Reverse, which celebrates his Pl. LV. 22: Arrival, shews two Enemies prostrate beneath his Horse's Feet, with ADVENTVS AVG. Name of his Empress was Severina. As fuch, the IVNO REGINA makes one of her Reverses. She Pl. LVI. I. had one Child, a Daughter, by him, which appears in the Hand of the VENVS FELIX. Most of the Pl. LVI. 2. Medals, which we have feen, recording the Confent of the Soldiers in his Advancement, are of the Empress. On one of her Reverses this Concord is Pl. LVI. 3. enthroned,

Pl. LVI. 5.

AVRELIAN. enthroned, bearing a Cornucopiæ and Patera, with Pl. LVI. 4. CONCORDia MILITum; on another she is figured standing, with an Enfign in each Hand, and CON-CORDIAE MILITVM; and on a third, the very PROVIDENtia DEORum is derived to him from the Sun, through her Mediation. This Luminary was his favourite Deity, his Mother having been Priestess of the Sun at Sirmium, in Pannonia, where he was born. For this Reason, when he returned Thanks to VALERIAN for the great Honours conferred upon him, he ended his Speech thus: " May "the Gods grant, and that undoubted God the "Sun (Deus certus Sol) that the Senate may judge " of me in like Manner!" We fee the ORIENT also on feveral of the Emperor's Medals; who erected a magnificent Temple to him at Rome, which he enriched with the Spoils of the East. At the Time that he was thus honoured by VALERIAN, and deftined to the Consulate, he was also adopted by Ulpius Crinitus, a Consular of great Wealth and Merit.

· He had scarce looked round him from the exalted Height to which he was now raised, before the Scythians, desirous of revenging the late Defeat, invaded Pannonia; against whom he marched immediately. A drawn Battle enfued; which, however, obliged the Enemy to repass the Danube, and accept of Terms. His Interval of Rest was very AVRELIAN. fhort; for the Suevians, the Marcomans, and other German Nations, were in Arms, over whom he obtained a fignal Victory. But having cut off their Retreat, they took up the desperate Resolution of marching for Rome: At Placentia he came up with, and attacked, them again; but was rudely received, and repulsed: after which they laid waste the Milanese. But receiving a strong Reinforcement, he once more tried his Fortune with them at Fano, where they were totally defeated. He purfued the Fugitives back to Placentia, and cut Numbers of them in Pieces there. The Remainder were put to the Sword in the Neighbourhood of Pavia. On this Occasion Rome seated, in the Habit of Minerva, and the Emperor, who presents a Victory to her, with the Legend ROMAE AETERNAE, feem to congratulate each other on the Reverse before us. He had no fooner compleated this important Bufiness, than he found himself obliged to march against the Vandals, who had passed the Danube; whom he constrained to deliver up Hoftages for their peaceable Behaviour, and a Part of their Youth to be incorporated in the Roman Army. These great Atchievements were owing to the unrelaxing Severity of his military Discipline; on which Account he merited the Title of RESTI-

Pl. LVI. 6.

Pl. LVI. 7.

TV TOR.

AVRELIAN.

TVTOR EXERCITI on his Medals; in which Legend the Reader will remark the ancient Usage of the Genitive Exerciti.

But his Cruelty on his Return stained the Lustre of his military Glory: for he did not only reform Abuses with the necessary Severity, but put to Death Persons of the highest Quality, on very insufficient Testimony. At this Time, with the Advice of the Senate, he enlarged the Walls of the City, inclosing a Compass of near sisty Miles. But this vast Undertaking was not smished till some Years after. He also cleansed the Bed of the Tiber, lining the Sides of it with Brick a good Part of the Way to Ostia.

His next Expedition was aimed at Zenobia, who had hitherto maintained her Sovereignty in the East, extending her Empire even to the Hellespont; her two Sons, Herenianus and Timolaus, all this while bearing the Title of Emperors; for on some Greek Coins we read AYT K HPENIANOC CEB L B, Imperator Cæsar Herenianus Augustus. Anno secundo: on others, AYT K TIMOAAOC CEBACT, Imperator Cæsar Timolaus Augustus, of the same Date. Others of Timolaus have the Addition of EYCesng Pius, with L T, Anno tertio. But Aurelian, on his March, met with more Obstructions than he was aware of: for both in Illyricum and the two Thraces he encountered countered and defeated the Barbarians. Cannabas, AVRELLAN. or Cannabaud, a Leader of the Goths, he cut in Pieces, with five thousand of his Men. From Byzantium he passed into Bithynia, which submitted without a Stroke. He was fo exasperated against the Citizens of Tyana, for having thut their Gates against him, that he declared "he would not "leave a Dog alive in the Place." His Rage, however, is faid to have been difarmed by a Night-Vision of Apollonius, the Philosopher, a Tyanean by Birth, who charged him to spare the Place of his Nativity: fo that when it was taken by the Treachery of Heraclammon, one of its wealthiest Inhabitants, he gave the Soldiers a Commission to kill every Dog within it. And the Humour of the Thing so pleased them, that they did not regret the Loss of their expected Plunder. But the Traitor Heraclammon received his proper Reward, being the only Person that suffered Death. Marching on, he had a short Skirmish at Daphne; after which, Antioch submitted, on a Promise of Impunity. At Emesa, he came to a pitched Battle with the Palmyrenians, whom he defeated. This done, he instantly paid his Vows to the Deity of the Place, to whom he ascribed his Victory, and whose Temple he honoured with magnificent Presents. On the Way to Palmyra, his Troops suffered much from Vol. II. the . 3 G AVRELIAN. the frequent Attacks of the Syrian Banditti. On his Arrival, he laid Siege to the City, which was gallantly defended. At length, wearied with the Tediousness of it, he offered Terms to Zenobia, who answered him arrogantly. Her Answer was penned by the famous Longinus, and it cost him his Life. In it she reminded him of the Losses which he had already fustained, and of the mighty Succours expected by her from the Perfians, Saracens, and Armenians. This irritated Aurelian, who pushed the Siege with extraordinary Vigour. He intercepted the Persian Auxiliaries; and had the Address; by Menaces, Persuasion, and Rewards, to draw over the Saracenic and Armenian Succours. So that Zenobia, seeing her Affairs desperate, left the City privately, and fled, mounted on a Dromedary, towards Persia; but was taken by the Roman Horse fent in Pursuit of her, on the Bank of the Euphrates, and brought to AURELIAN. Her principal Ministers and Advisers were put to Death by him, and her Secretary Longinus amongst the rest. When he asked her, "how she had dared to insult the Ro-"man Emperors?" "You (faid she) my Con-"queror I acknowledge to be an Emperor; but "Gallienus, Aureolus, and the rest, I never looked "upon as fuch." On the Surrender of the City, AURELIAN lest Sandarion in it, with fix hundred Archers.

Archers, and marched back to Europe. Repassing AVRELIAN. the Hellespont, he subdued the Carpi, who had broken into Thrace, and settled a Part of them on the Roman Side of the Danube, as Dioclesian did the rest afterwards.

Information was now brought to him, that the Palmyrenians had put Sandarion and his Garrison to the Sword, and fet up one Achilleus, whom Zosimus calls Antiochus, a Kinsman of Zenobia, for Emperor. Instantly he turned back in a Rage, and by hasty Marches came again to the Place, which he destroyed with extreme Cruelty. For the Soldiers fpared neither the Aged and Infirm, nor the Women and Children, nor the Peasants in the Fields. Yet the City was not then reduced to the ruinous Heap in which it now lies: for the Temple of the Sun, the Emperor's favourite Deity, particularly, which had been plundered by the Officers of the third Legion, was by his express Order restored to its former Beauty and Magnificence; three hundred Pounds Weight of Gold, eighteen hundred Pounds Weight of Silver, and the Royal Jewels, being applied to that Purpose. Hence on one of his Denarii, with his radiated Head, and IMP AVRE-LIANVS AVG, we have for the Reverse the Pl. LVI. 2. Figure of the Sun, with a Globe in his left Hand, and a Spear in his right, pointed against the Breast of an Enemy, who lies proftrate before him: the Legend ORIENS AVGusti. Another Reverse in Bronze has the same Figure, pointing forward with his right Hand, and holding the Whip in his left, with two Eastern Captives at his Feet, and the same Legend; in the Exergue of which, the XXIst and the VIth Legions are particularly honoured.

Pl. LVI. 9.

In this Expedition he was affished by Vabalathus, the fecond Son (most probably) of ODENATHUS by his first Wife. On the Murder of his Father and Brother he had fled, and fince looked upon Zenobia and her Children as Usurpers of the Sovereignty due to himself. He was in Return permitted by AURE-LIAN to bear the Title of IMPERATOR, as his Deputy. For on a Greek Coin we have the laureate Head of Aurelian, with AYT Κ Λ Δ ΑΥΡΗΛΙΑΝΟC C. L A. Imperator Cæsar Lucius Domitius Aurelianus Augustus. Anno primo, meaning the first Year of Aurelian's Sovereignty in the East; and for the Reverse, the Head of Vabalathus wearing the Diadem, with ATT EPMIAC OYABAAAGOC A $\Theta$ H.  $\Gamma$   $\Delta$ . Imperator Ermias Vabalathus Athe. Anno quarto, calling this the fourth Year of his Reign. Mr. Edmund Halley's Explanation of the AOH is ingenious, and more than probable. "They " might be the first Letters of the Name OAH-" NAOOC, which in Syriac began with an Aleph, " and and the A was by those People used instead of O, AVRELIAN.

" as we see the Month Earding written Earding in many of the Palmyrenian Inscriptions; which "doubtless was pronounced like D blasum, or the " Saxon D. In this appears also the great Utility " of Coins to illustrate Matters of History; for by "them alone it is made out, that there was fuch a

" Prince as Wabalathus, Vopiscus fingly mention-

" ing him by the Name of Balbatus." On one of the Emperor's Denarii the Head of this young Pl. LVI. 10. Prince is laureated, and inscribed VABALATHVS VCRIMOR. " Aurelian (fays the fame learned Pro" fessor) would not suffer the Title of Augustus in

"this Family, though he was contented that they " should hold under him as Vice Cafaris, as plainly " appears by the Latin Coins of Aurelian on the " one Side, and Wabalathus-on the other, with

"these Letters, V C R IM OR; which P. Harduin

" has most judiciously interpreted Vice Cafaris

" Rector Imperii Orientis."

Zenobia had kept Possession of Egypt till the Death of CLAUDIUS Gothicus. About which Time it must be that Domitius Domitianus, who had been the Lieutenant of Aureolus, was proclaimed Emperor by the opposite Party in Egypt. For that he was so, is evident from the Medal before us, Pl. LVI. 11. and from that only. On it he is laureated, with

the AVRELIAN.

Fl. LVI. 12.

the Title of IMP CLaudius DOMITIVS DOMI-TIANus AVG: the Reverse is inscribed GENIO POPVLI ROMANI, who is represented with his Head turrited, a Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, and a Patera in the right, with an Eagle before him. It appears also from the Exergue, that he continued these Titles to a third Year, by the Numerical T. and that ALExandria was the Scene of his Exaltation. It is therefore probable that he was put to Death when Aurelian first marched into the East. And when, after his Return, the Palmyrenians revolted, then did the Alexandrians also rebel, acknowledging one Firmius for Emperor, a Man of prodigious Strength of Body, and of vast Wealth acquired by Trade. He is laureated on his Coins, with ATT M DIPMIOC ETC C, Imperator Marcus Firmius Pius Augustus; and an Abundantia seated for the Reverse, with L A, Anno primo. AURELIAN therefore now marched against, overcame, and having taken him, made him fuffer Death with Torture.

His Stay at Rome on his Return was short, being invited into Gaul by Tetricus himself, who could no longer bear the mutinous Disposition of his own Troops. When, therefore, the two Armies met, Tetricus, with all those in whom he had Considence, went over to Aurelian, presenting him with

with an easy Victory. Being now Emperor of the AVRELIAN. whole Roman World, he was complimented as the Restorer of it, and is accordingly entitled RESTI-TVTOR ORBIS on a Reverse, which exhibits a Victory holding out a Wreath to him. He now bent his March to Rome for the last Time, and entered it in Triumph. In the Procession was drawn the Chariot of Odenathus, glittering with Silver, Gold, and precious Stones. This was followed by one equally superb, which had been prefented to him by the Persian Monarch. A third came after, which had been Zenobia's Chariot of State. Last of all came the Emperor, in one which he had taken from a King of the Goths, drawn by four Stags, which he facrificed to Jupiter in the Capitol, in Consequence of a Vow that he had made. But just before him marched a numerous Band of Captives, Blemyes, Ethiopians, Arabians, Indians, Bactrians, Iberians, Persians, Goths, Alans, Roxolanians, Sarmatians, Franks, Swevians, Vandals, Germans, Palmyrenians, and Egyptians, with their Hands bound behind them. Amongst these was Tetricus and his Son, whom he had declared Emperor in Gaul, both clad in Purple, and Zenobia, loaden with Gems, and in Chains of Gold, which were supported by others. For some Days after the People were gratified with all the Entertainments

Pl. LVI. 13.

A V-RELIA-N.

Pl. LVI. 14. Pl. LVI. 15. ments of the Theatre, the Amphitheatre, the Circus, and Naumachia. He also distributed Bread and Pork to the Populace, which Bounty was continued; made many falutary Laws, regulated the Priesthoods, founded the Temple of the Sun and endowed it, granting confiderable Emoluments both to the Architects and Ministers of it. He called in all the Coin, which had been greatly adulterated by the Officers of the Mint, giving out pure Money in lieu of it. Some of the smaller Pieces in Bronze are preserved, with the Emperor's plain Head, the Reverses recommending the Metal of which they are composed; one of them having, in a Wreath, METALlis AVRELIANIS; another, a Stag, with METALlis DELmaticis. But the Officers of the Coinage, and the People under them, concerned in this Iniquity, were fo numerous and resolute, that it became difficult to call them to an Account; for they affembled themselves in Arms under their Procurator Felicissimus, and were not subdued without the Loss of seven thousand of the Imperial Troops.

This Business over, he marched to the Relief of the Vindelici, who were hardly beset by the neighbouring Barbarians; and thence into Illyricum. Here having collected rather a great than a vast Army, he declared War against the Persians. He was advancing towards them, and near Byzantium, AVRELIAN. when he let fall some threatening Expressions against Mnestbeus, his private Secretary, who had offended him. He, knowing the vindictive Disposition of the Emperor, and that he never menaced in vain, wrote down a List of principal Names, some obnoxious, and others not, adding his own to the rest, as of Persons doomed to Destruction; to whom he made this pretended Discovery. All these, as fociating for their common Sasety, fell upon the Emperor on the March, and slew him, in the fixth Year of his Reign, and the sixty-third of his Age.

was

Such was the End of AURELIAN, rather an useful than a good Emperor. He was a Prince of great Bravery, having raifed himself from the Condition of a private Soldier by his Courage. Being not the only one of the Name, he was commonly diftinguished in the Army as the fighting Aurelian (manu ad ferum.) He was by no Means deficient in Generofity, yet naturally ferocious and cruel; for which Reasons he was beloved by the People and dreaded by the Senate. They, who were guilty of Corruption or Oppression in the Provinces, found him inexorable. He withdrew both the Troops and Inhabitants from the Ultradanubian Dacia, and fettled them in Mæsia, leaving the Danube for the Boundary of the Empire on that Side. Vol. II. 3 H He

AVRELTAN. He is not ranked amongst the good Princes; for he wanted that Clemency which is effential to the Character: nor amongst the bad; for he punished Vice, and strangled Faction. To use the Words of Dioclesian, he would have made a better General than an Emperor. But his Usage of Zenobia and Tetricus was truly noble, as well as prudent; for she was fuffered to live, like a Roman Matron, quietly and splendidly with ther Children at Tivoli; and Tetricus was made Governor of Lucania, and a Place in the Senate allowed to his Son: by which Means they and their Posterity continued for several Ages the illustrious Memorials of his Triumph. He was, at the Request of the Army, consecrated by the Senate, some of his Coins being inscribed DIVO AVRELIANO. the marriage of the rest in a supplier of rigonalized - in the Areas are territoria trouble gold on all out it is the for all on places her manager (Thomas and Addressed as is which first has the war distincted by the Fragelie when it continues as they time it its the study form binarioscoulds. He will contribute the Place and tenniforal from the Place of the Entry, and there were to Plate, but one of the

74 7

They wine while

· . . . .

MARCUS

principles that they were described and to place may Period concernit in the Death of Advances.

MARCUS CLAUDIUS TACITUS.

Autor the party of the sent Manager Community

belieben Sentore bei allegen und mit eine Debester The people willing with draffile in weight and obtain

HE Murder of Aurelian threw the Army TACITYS into a strange Ferment. The chief Officers had been concerned in it. They pleaded the Information of Mnestheus. A strict Inquisition was made, and his Villainy discovered. He was impaled upon the Spot, and left a Prey to the wild Beafts. A vast sepulchral Pile was raised by his Murderers, with a Temple and Statues to the Memory of the late Emperor; notwithstanding which, his Successor put to Death as many of them as fell into his Hands. A Letter was now written to the Senate, in the Name of the Army, desiring them to consecrate the deceased, and to appoint a new, Em-3 H 2 peror; " risia" w peror; for that they were determined not to elect any Person concerned in the Death of AURELIAN. The Fathers complied with the first Part of the Request, but the Novelty and Modesty of the last surprized them. They returned the Compliment, not once, but a second and a third Time; which was bandied back as often by the Army. This took up a Space of more than fix Months. And it is wonderful that, during this whole Time, Ambition feemed to be afleep, nor did the Barbarians make any Motion to disturb the public Tranquillity. At last they pitched upon Marcus CLAUDIUS TACITUS, Prince of the Senate, seventy-five Years old. The Providence that raised him is figured PLLVI. 16. with a Cornucopiæ, Scepter, and Globe, and is entitled PROVIDENTIA AVGusti. He erected Statues of Silver to his Predecessor in the Senate-House, the Temple of the Sun, and TRAJAN's Forum. He intended a golden one also in the Capitol, but it was not set up. The Debasement of Metals he made capital, with Confiscation of Goods. The Evidence of Slaves against their Masters was declared inadmissible, even in Cases of Treason. He requested of the Senate the Consulate for his Brother, and was refused it. He seemed pleased with this Liberty, saying only, "the Se-" nate knew what Sort of Emperor they had " chosen."

"chosen." All his ready Money he gave as a Do- TACITYS. native to the Soldiers, as he did his Patrimony to the State. He now took upon himself the Consulate, having Fulvius Aimilianus for his Colleague. The Clemency of his Administration is particularly celebrated, and with Reason; for they had felt the Want of this Virtue severely in the late Reign. He is drawn in the Imperial Mantle, with the Sceptre in Pl. LVI. 176 his left Hand, and the Eagle rifing from it, taking hold of Clemency with his right. This Deity has also the Imperial Mantle depending from the Shoulders, an Helmet on the Head, the Hasta pura in the left Hand, and a Star as the Mark of Divinity. The Helmet and the Mantle intimate this Virtue to be most graceful in great Commanders and Rulers: for, " of all the Virtues," fays Seneca, " none becomes " a King or Prince more than Clemency." This is well expressed by our inimitable Shakespear:

No Ceremony that to Great ones 'longs, Not the King's Crown, nor the deputed Sword, The Marshal's Truncheon, nor the Judge's Robe; Become them with one half fo good a Grace As Mercy does.

The Legend is CLEMENTIA TEMPorum. had Reason, therefore, to congratulate themselves on the consequent Felicity of the Times; who appears Pl. LVI. 18.

TACITYS. pears standing, with the Caduceus in her right Hand, and the Cornucopiæ in her left, having a Star also before her, and the Legend TEMPORVM FELI-CITAS. He shut up all the Houses of ill Fame within the City, and ordered the Baths also to be fhut up before Candle-lighting, to prevent feditious Meetings. He acknowledged Cornelius Tacitus for his Ancestor, and ordered ten fresh Copies of his Work to be transcribed yearly, and laid up in the public Libraries. He interdicted the Use of Garments of All Silk (then worth the Weight in Gold) to all Perfons; and appeared himself in the same Habit as when a private Man. He forbad also the Intermixture of Gold in wearing Apparel, and fuffered not his Empress to appear in Jewels. In his Wine and Diet he was equally fober and abstemious. The Senate was for overjoyed at having recovered their Right of Election in him, that they published it to all the World, and decreed folemn Supplications. Several fingle Senators vowed their Hecatombs on the Occasion and the Occasion of his Reign was with the Goths from the Palus Maotis, who pretended to have been invited by Aurelian to his Assistance against the Persians. These he deseated and obliged to return. As his Civil Government was most excellent, so this Success gave great Expectations of isuly obtained. For Paper mas well advantage for the for fourier may be applied as the format of the format of the confidence of the sense of but, being the Thering format of the forma ciesed aper the Europie or Lorditory, inconfinely afforming the Europeial Constants. The Powerlage vincent as presented, tabling a Snow and Globe, forms the Remarks of the Dispersion of the University of the University of the University.

LVII

daily in also amende administrative versions you committee straight and the ball and a second alaste and his military Prowess, which are expressed on one TACITYS. of his Silver Coins, whereon his Head is radiated, with IMP C M. CL. TACITVS AVG.; having a Pl. LVI. 19. Victory for the Reverse, bearing a Palm-branch, and placing a Wreath upon his Head, with SPES PUBLICA. We have the fame in Bronze; and another with the VICTORIA AVG, with expanded Pl. LVI. 202 Wings and two Shields; and a third with a Palmbranch and Wreath, denominated VICTORIA Pl. LVII. 13 GOTHica. At the End of a fix Months' Reign he was, according to fome, flain by the Soldiers; though others fay that he died a natural Death. It is, however, evident enough, that he was worn out with Chagrin, on account of the Factions which oppressed him. L. Com he for a un most rather for shalled, then he is certained (IMPerator Carlie Manuar Alkinate Florida III) Asthraity

~ UNT 19

MARCUS ANNIUS FLORIANUS.

HE Concord of the Soldiers, expressed in the FLORIANVS.

Coin before us, was rather forestalled, than fairly obtained. For Florianus waited neither for the Consent of the Armies nor the Appointment of the Senate; but, being the Uterine Brother of Tacitus, seized upon the Empire as hereditary, immediately assuming the Imperial Ornaments. The Providence which he arrogated, holding a Spear and Globe, forms the Reverse of his Denarius, with PROVIDEntia AVGusti: On the obverse Side of which he is entitled IMPerator Cæsar Marcus Annius FLORIANUS Pius AVGustus. For his Authority was acknowledged westward. But the eastern Armies made made Choice of their Commander Probus, who FLORIANUS was univerfally beloved. Against him FLORIANUS marched, and pitched his Camp near Tarsus in Cilicia. But, on the Approach of Probus, he was first seized, and afterwards slain, by his own Soldiers, who joined his Competitor; thus feeling, in less than two Months, the ill Effects of his Ambition.

Pl. LVII. 2.

the figural that her all the and they ber

the state of the state of the forest the state of the sta

Planking Painting and the Land

beld in structure harmonical control in the Section 1 was Real to Day of Africa

Tardenistin when 1972 to 972 One objects Out neg reducing Farmer all that real-blue from

Vol. II.

as a miner of the court out a majored winds By made a super

MARCUS AURELIUS PROBUS.

ROBUS had been bred in the Service, under the Eye of his Father. He had very early merited the Favour of the preceding Emperors. At the Time of his Election, when he was forty and four Years old, he commanded all the Forces in Phænicia, Palestine, Syria, and Egypt, and was held in general Admiration for his Virtue and Abilities. The Coin, which records his Adlocation to the Army on this Occasion, bears his Head radiated, and he holds in his Hand the Sceptre with an Eagle, the Inscription being, IMP C PROBVS AVG CONS.

Pl. LVII. 3. The Reverse, which represents the Horse and Foot affembled before him, as usual, has the Suggestum, on which he stands, marked with the Donative PROBVS. which they received. The Senate chearfully conferred upon him all the Imperial Honours; on Advice of which he immediately set out from Cilicia for Rome. His Arrival is distinguished in the usual Manner by his Equestrian Figure, but with the Ad- Pl. LVII. 4. dition of an Enemy prostrate before him, on whom his Horse is trampling: the Legend ADVENTVS AVG.; and in the Exergue R-A, for Roma. For he had particularly distinguished himself in Africa; and had there flain, in fingle Combat, one Aradion, whom, for his great Bravery and Spirit, he honoured with a vast sepulchral Tumulus of Earth, thrown up by the Soldiers to the Height of two hundred Feet: This personal Conquest was now further illustrated by a Reverse, which shews him on Horseback, bearing down the same: Adversary with his Spear, who in the Fall parts with his Shield. The Legend is VIRTVS PROBI AVG. and in the Exergue KARthago; the Coin having been struck in that Country, which was the Scene of the Action. Another Reverse bears the same Device, with a Victory. Pl. LVII. 6. crowning him with a Wreath, and there the Legend is VIRTVS INVICTI AVG.; and in the Exergue: VIXXT, which may be read Victoria Illustris Vicenarii Tribuni: For he was made Tribune of a Legion while he was yet without a Beard; and this 3 I. 2

AJJAAM

Pl. LVII. 5.

PROBVS. Adventure may probably have taken Place in the twentieth or twenty-first Year of his Age. He had also displayed his military Talents with great Glory against the Franks, Germans, Alemans, Sarmatians, and Scythians, and in the East against the Palmyrenians, from whom he recovered Egypt, and smoothed the Way for the Arms of Aurelian in that Quarter. The Historians make Sirmium the Place of his Nativity; but that Honour is due to Siscia, the modern Sisceck, at the Confluence of the Calpa and the Saave, as is evident from the Reverse, which bears the Genius of the Place feated between two Rivers, with SISCIA PROBI AVG.

Pl. LVII. 7.

Seeing his Authority now confirmed, he entered on his first Consulate with Annius Paulinus, and took Vengeance on fuch of the Assassins of Aure-LIAN as had hitherto escaped it, as well as on those whose seditious Behaviour had given TACITUS fo much Trouble, and received the Submission of the European Armies. At the Commencement of the new Year, he became Conful the fecond Time, having Furius Lupus for his Colleague. Some of his Coins of this Year are inscribed IMP C MAVR PROBVS AVG. PM TR P COS II. PP. He now marched at the Head of a mighty Army into Gaul, which had been overrun by the Germans. In this Expedition he recovered seventy considerable Cities from - the

the Barbarians, and all the Spoil which they had PROBVS. collected. Four hundred thousand of the Enemy were flain, and the Remains of them driven beyond the Neckar and the Elbe. Nine Kings threw themfelves at his Feet, delivered Hostages first, afterwards Supplies of Corn, and last of all their Flocks and Herds. Sixteen thousand of their Youth were incorporated with the Roman Troops. He then marched for Illyricum, and by the Way fettled the Country of the Rhætians in perfect Peace. Next he fell upon the Sarmatians and their Allies, obliging them to make Satisfaction for all their Depredations. Thence, bending his Way through the two Thraces, he so terrified the Goths in general, that they either submitted or entered into Treaty with Urging his Progress eastward, he reduced Isauria, which had revolted for some Time past, and fettled his Veterans in the mountainous Parts of the Country, on Condition that they should fend their Sons to the Army, at the Age of eighteen Years. He then marched against the Blemyes, whom he subdued, recovering from them Coptos and Ptolemais. This alarmed the Persians, who sent Ambassadors, and accepted his Conditions of Peace. This done, he returned to Thrace, and fettled one hundred thousand Bastarnæ in the Roman Territory. These proved faithful. But the Gepidæ, Juthungi, and

PROBVS.

Manner, broke out while he was engaged in civil. Wars, and ranging far and wide, created no small Trouble to the Empire. These he afterwards destroyed at different Times, sew of them returning home, and they glorying to have escaped his Hands. But, for the present, he returned to Rome, and triumphed over the Germans, Blemyes, Goths, Franks, Sarmatians, and Germans, whose Subduction had taken up the Time of his third and sourth Consulates. These Successes are celebrated on several Medals of Silver, besides that in Gold, which appears in the Front of this Reign. These all bear his Head radiated: One with PROBUS PE AVG. have

- Pl. LVII. 8. Head radiated: One with PROBVS PF AVG, having for the Reverse Phæbus rapidly driving the solar.
- Pl. LVII. 9. Chariot, with SOLI INVICTO. A fecond has the Sceptre and Eagle before his Head, with IMP C MAVR PROBVS PF AVG.; and the fame Device for the Reverse, but somewhat differently expressed, with SOLI INVICTO CM for Comiti, and in the Exergue a Compliment is paid to the XXIst
- Pl. LVII. 10. Legion, furnamed Rapax. His Denarius also shews him radiated, and armed with Helmet, Spear, and Shield, with the Title IMP PROBVS AVG; and on the Reverse, a speeding Victory holds out a Wreath in one Hand, and supports a Trophy with the other, and is denominated VICTORIA AVG.

There

There is Thunder in the Exergue, between the Let- PROBVS. ters RS, for Romæ Signatus, stamped at Rome. On this Occasion the Roman People were gratified with all the usual Entertainments; but that of the Circus was extraordinary. Large Trees in full Verdure were taken up, and, when removed thither, fixed with Beams extending from each to each, and Earth thrown upon the Roots, fo that the whole Circus resembled a Wood or Forest, into which were let a thousand Ostriches, a thousand Stags, a thousand Boars, as many Does, wild Sheep, and other grazing Animals without Number, which the Populace were to hunt, and to whom was granted a plenary Indulgence of Direption, fo that every Man might get what he could for his own Use. Coins in Bronze were also struck, with the TEMPORum FELICITas Pl. LVII. 11. for the Reverse, having a Caduceus in one Hand, and a Cornucopiæ in the other.

The Regulation of Aurelian, respecting the Coinage, had been either imperfect, or not duly observed; since it required the Care of the present Emperor. Of this the very curious Medal before us is a demonstrative Proof. It contains his laureate Head, with IMP PROBVS PF AVG. He is in Armour, with his Spear before him. Upon his Shield he is represented on Horseback, scattering Money.

Pl. LVII. 12.

PROBVS

ney. Victory marches before him, and he is followed by a Soldier. Three Nymphs, with each her Cornucopiæ and Scales, form the Reverse; and underneath their Scales lie Heaps of Money. The Legend is MONETA AVGusti.

Some Time ago, one Saturninus, a Native of Gaul, had been declared Augustus at Alexandria. His Services in Gaul, Africa, and Spain, had been. very meritorious; and he had been made Governor of the eastern Limit by Aurelian, who, well acquainted with the Gallic Ambition, and the seditious Spirit of the Egyptians, had forbidden him to vifit that Country. But now, no longer under Restraint, and desirous of seeing the Curiosities of it, he went thither, and, on his Appearance with a great Train, was immediately faluted with the Imperial Titles. This fo alarmed him, that he left the Place precipitately, and retired to Palestine. There the Consideration of what had passed, and of the Offence already given, made him desperate; fo that he assumed the Purple, at the same Instant. lamenting with Tears the Necessity of it. Some of his Coins are still extant, inscribed IMP C Publius SEMPronius SATVRNINVS AVG. He was at last befieged by the Body of Forces commissioned to reduce him, taken, and put to Death. But by a Greek Medal, Medal, with AΥT KAI ΠΟΥ, CATTPNEINOC CEB. PROBVS.

LA, it appears, that this Farce must have continued to the fourth Year.

Probus had reigned three Years, when Proculus in Gaul was, by the People of Lyons, and the Troops under his Command, proclaimed Emperor. He was a Ligurian by Birth, and had been bred up amongst the Banditti of that Country, and afterwards distinguished himself in the Army by this great Bravery. His Disposition was strangely libidinous, of which Vopiscus gives an extraordinary Instance. His Wealth now enabled him to arm two thousand of his own Slaves. To this Madness he was incited by the Ambition of his Wife Samplo, a Woman of masculine Spirit. His usurped Authority was for a little Time serviceable to the Gallic Provinces; for he defeated the Alemans, who had invaded them, with great Slaughter. Probus pursued him with Celerity, from Place to Place; fo that at last he put himself under the Protection of the Franks, from whom he pretended to derive his Descent, and was by them delivered up. Some of his Coins have reached us, with IMP C T AEL PROCVLVS PFAVG.

But the Rebellion of Bonosius, which happened about the same Time, was more formidable. He was born in Spain, but of British Extraction by the Vol. II.

3 K
Father,

PROBVS.

Father, his Mother being a Gaul. From a common Soldier, he had raised himself to the highest? Commands, and was now Governor of the Rhætian He was the greatest Drinker of his Time; yet always fober, having the Faculty of parting with his Liquor by Urine as copiously as he imbibed it. On this Account he was employed by Aurelian to fift out the Secrets of the Barbarians in their Cups: in which Charge he acquitted himself well, being represented more discreet in his Wine than at other, Times. Having suffered the Germans, by his Negligence, to burn the Roman Fleet under his Command upon the Rhine, he faw no Safety for himfelf but in Rebellion, which he carried on with Courage and Resolution. At last, after a long and sharp Contest, seeing his Affairs desperate, he put an End to his own Life by the Halter; when the Soldiers jestingly said, "It was a Cask, and not a " Man, that was hanging there." On some of his Coins he is stiled IMP C Q BONOSIVS P F AVG; and there are others without the PF. He left two Sons, whose Lives the Emperor spared, and fettled a Pension upon his Widow Hunila, who was: a Gothic, Lady, of excellent Character and Royali Birth.

These Troubles at an End, Probus resolved upon an Expedition against the Persians; but was slain. Palber, by his own Soldiers on his March through Illyricum. PROBV.S. He was afterwards honoured with a Confecration, one of his Medals being inscribed DIVO PROBO PIO. He had never fuffered his Soldiers to be idle, faying, that "they ought to earn their Maintenance." In Times of Leisure, they were busied. in planting Vineyards, in building and repairing Cities, and other public Works. They were now employed in digging a Canal for draining the Marshes around Sirmium, with which hard Toil. they had been much incensed. He had also been heard to fay, that "in a short Time, he hoped there "would be no Need of Soldiers." These Things inflamed their Spirits to a general Mutiny against the Emperor; who fled for his Life to an Iron Tower, from which he had been wont to obferve their Works, where he was flain in the feventh Year of his Reign. He was, in civil and military Virtue, superior to most, and equal to any, of his Predecessors. His Assassins immediately repented of their own Temerity, and raised to his Memory an enormous Barrow, with the following Inscription engraven on Marble: "Here " lies the Emperor Probus, of real Probity, victo-"rious over all the barbarous Nations, and the " Conqueror of Tyrants." Amongst his other nu-3 K 2

PARES TONE OF Leither, they want build

e and ordered a Clarate Spring as the company of th

Chyrian distraction incension. The had also can be and the political form the hard the had a large of these and the call to a large of th followed their Spoins to a general Muting action to a followed to as from the company to a followed to a followed the company to a followed the comp force that Wester, where he was dring to all and format West of the bird Stage. He was been and the self-and to all a self-and to all and the self-and and the

to the attracts as materials along the conment of infinite payme on harbland that It is the Laprene Promes, of pull Public, at their over all the bretains Mariane trailing merous public Works, he had rebuilded or repaired the magnificent Temple in the City, which had been erected to Eternal Rome, as appears by the Pl. LVII. 13. Reverse before us, with the Legend ROMAE. AETERNAE.

MARCUS

MARCUS AURELIUS CARUS.

Guards, was presently declared Emperor by the Army, and failed not to execute immediate Vengeance on the Murderers of Probus; who, in his Life-time, had highly honoured him with his Recommendation to the Senate, with an Equestrian Statue and a magnificent House erected at the public Charge. The Fathers paused a little on his Election, through Fear of the evil Disposition of his eldest Son Carinus, and then recognized his Title. The Providence that raised him is acknowledged on the fine Medal of Gold prefixed. As his Predecessor had made the necessary Preparations for a War with Persa.

CARVS.

CARVS. Persia, the Troops were unanimous for proceeding on that Expedition. They were now fo quiet and obedient to Command, that the Peaceableness of the Army was, for the first Time, judged worthy of being celebrated on the Imperial Coins. Some Pl. LVII. 14. Denarii were struck accordingly, with IMP CARVS PF AVG. around his radiated Head; with the PAX EXERCITI for the Reverse, having an Enfign in one Hand, and an Olive Branch in the other. We have the same Figure in Bronze, but without the Exergue. He now invested his two Sons with the Dignity of Cæfars and Princes of the Youth, and treated the People with theatrical Entertainments and Circensian Sports, in which were a Number of very extraordinary Exhibitions, that cost immense Sums. Carinus, the eldest, was also made Consul, with his Father the fecond Time, and in July following was succeeded in that Office by his Brother Numerianus, and both were honoured with Proconsular Authority. This is evident from an Inscription in Gruter, to the Emperor and the young Princes, as follows:

> VICTORIOSISSIMO PRINCIPI IVVENT M. AVRELIO CARINO Nobiliss. CÆSARI Cos. Procos.

FORTISSIMO ATQUE CLEMENTISSIMO IMP. CAS. M. AVRELIO CAROINVICTO AVG. P.M.TR.P. II. Cos. II.

VICTORIOSISSIMO PRINCIPI IVVENT. M. AVR. NVMERIANO NOBILISS. CÆSARI Procos.

M. AVRELIVS VALENTINIANVS V. C. LEG. AVGG. PRO. PR. PROVINCIÆ HISPANIÆ CITERIORIS D. N. M. Q. EORVM.

We have also a Denarius of the last, struck at Kassandria in Macedonia, with his radiated Head, and M. AVR. NVMERIANVS Cæfar; with his Figure in the military Habit for the Reverse, and PRINCIPI IVVENTutis, and the same in Bronze. There are others of Carinus of the same

CARVS.

Pl. LVII. 15.

The Sarmatians, on the Death of Probus, had invaded the Roman Territory, and threatened Italy itself; whom he now marched against and defeated, flaying fixteen thousand of them, and taking twenty thousand Prisoners of both Sexes. On this Success he declared his two Sons Augusti; as appears from a Reverse of Numerianus, where- Pl. LVII. 16. on the two young Emperors are represented as holding a Victory (with a Star over it, to intimate the Divinity of their Father, which he even now arrogated) between them, with the Legend VIRTVS AVGGG, as sharing with their Father the Honour of the late Victory, and the Imperial Authority, fignified by the Triplication of the Letter G. In the Area: A', for Anno Primo, and in the Exergue XXI, as doing Honour to the Fidelity and Bravery of the Legion of that Number. He then fent back CARINUS to Rome, to take Care of Africa and the western Empire; while. himself proceeded with Numerianus against the Persians,

CARVS.

Persians, who quitted Mesopotamia on his Approach. He passed the Tigris, made himself Master of Ctesiphon, and merited the Surname of PARTHICUS, which is found on some of his Coins. On others, Pl. LVII. 17. he is dignified with the Title of RESTITUTOR

ORBIS, a venerable Figure placing a Wreath upon his Head, while he holds a Globe in one Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other. On others we see the Orient Sun with his Whip, as representing the Eternity of the Empire; and on others the VICTORIA AVGG. intending himself and Numerianus. But here, as if Cteliphon had been the destined Limit which none of them were to overpass, as some of the Historians intimate, CARUS was carried off, either by Disease or the Stroke of Lightning, after a Reign of about fixteen Months. There was at the Time of his Death a remarkable Obscurity of the Air, occasioned by dreadful Storms of Thunder and Lightning, in the Midst of which he breathed his last, when suddenly a Cry was heard, "The Emperor is dead!" Presently after which his Chamberlains, distracted with Grief, set fire to the Pavilion. This occasioned the Rumour of his having been flain by Lightning. His Apotheofis

Pl. LVII. 18. followed: for round his radiated Head we have DIVO CARO PARTHICO, with an Altar blazARECT AUTRITIONS ENGINEERS

milital mingrass to tubality (in dd') with more than the state of the

with the particular particular to the second of the second on with the the their their are over a

NI VECT S ATHELICS NUMBERINGO

. Trail

by the Exergue, the Medal must have been struck at Siscia, the Capital of Croatia, where the twenty-second Legion was quartered.

Vol. II.

3 L

MARCUS

by the User up the body will been

MANY NOTES

MARCUS AURELIUS CARINUS. MARCUS AURELIUS NUMERIANUS.

CARINVS AND NVMERIANVS. to a most depraved Disposition of his own, sending his best Friends into Exile, destroying the Innocent by false Accusations, debauching the Wives of the Nobility, and raising his Pimps, Pandars, and Catamites to the first Preferments in the State. When Carus heard of his Behaviour, he cried out, "He is not mine;" and had determined to cut him off, and raise Constantius, then Governor of Dalmatia, and of unexceptionable Character, to the Cæsarian Dignity in his Room; but when he received the News of his Father's Death, he looked upon vice of all Persons of Probity and Prudence, and Nymerianvs abandoned himself wholly to the Conversation of the dissolute and worthless. Such were invited to all his Entertainments, and no Deference was paid to any other Character. He had nine Wives in all, feveral of whom he repudiated while pregnant by him. Thus was the Court filled with Vice and Voluptuousness. Aware that the Fathers could not approve of fuch Proceedings, he wrote most haughtily to the Senate, and even promised the Wealth of the Order to the very Rabble of Rome. But as the worst Princes are flattered most, and like it best, so we find the Æquity even of CARINUS celebrated and described in the usual Manner on one of his Denarii, struck at Kassandra in Mace- Pl. LVIII. 1. donia. His Brother, indeed, who well deserved the whole Compliment, is admitted to a Share of it, the Legend being AEQVITAS AVGG. We have around the Figure of Mercury, whom, therefore, we may conclude to have been his favourite Deity. There is one of Numerianus, which perfectly re-round the Figure of CARINUS in his military Vest, armed with an Helmet, having the Parazonium in one Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other. But himself as superior to all Controul, rejected the Ad- CAR also the PIETAS AVG on another of his Reverses, Pl. LVIII. 2.

fembles it. Another has the VIRTVS AVGG Pl. LVIII. 3.

3 L 2

the

VMERIANVS. 21. LVIII. 4.

CARINYS the VIRTUS AVGVSTORum furrounds a very different Device. In the Center stand the two Emperors, in the military Tunic and Imperial Mantle, facing each other. CARINUS is crowned with a Wreath by Hercules. Numerianus holds the Hasta pura in his left Hand, and a Globe in his right, which he offers to his Brother, and is at the fame Time crowned by the Orient.

But this last Prince was possessed of more amiable Talents, and a very different Disposition. He had a fine poetical Genius; his Eloquence was exceedingly powerful; and his Morals without Reproach: So that the CLEMENTIA TEMPORVM, holding the Hafta pura, and prefenting a Victory to him, forms, with great Propriety, one of his Reverses: As the MARS VICTOR of another was also due. to his distinguished Bravery. On this Account he was very dear to the Army; whose Fidelity, holding. a Globe, and feated in the Midst of Ensigns, is. justly celebrated on his Coins, the Legend of which is FIDES EXERCIT. AVG. But his Piety was. excessive, and cost him his Life. For he lamented the Death of his Father without ceasing, till his Eyes became fo weak, that they could not bear the Light, fo that he was forced to be shut up and carried in a close Litter. Of this Arrius Aper (whose Daughter he had married, and whom he had made

Captain

1. LVIII. 5.

1. LVIII. 6.

Pl. LVIII. 7.

Captain of the Prætorian Guards) aspiring to the CARINVS Empire, took Advantage, and flew him; hoping to Numerianus. conceal his Death till he should have gained over the Army; but it was, too foon for him, discovered by the cadaverous Smell. He was immediately haled before the Enfigns, where a grand Council and Tribunal was held. Diocles, Commander of the Household Troops, was unanimously proclaimed Augustus. He ascended the Tribunal, and enquired into the Circumstances of his Predecessor's Death. Then drawing his Sword upon Aper, and faying, "This was the Murderer of Numerianus," he passed it through his Body, adding "I have slain " (Aprum fatalem) the destined Boar at last." For while he was in Gaul, and yet a subaltern Officer, a Druidess had foretold him; that he would be Emperor after having killed (Aprum) a Boar. He therefore hunted frequently, and flew many, complaining on every Change of Emperors, that "he " killed the Boars, but others feasted on the "Brawn." This gave Occasion to the Action and Expression just mentioned, which he performed and uttered purely to fulfil the Prophecy and confirm his Election. This Event took Place in August, about eight Months after the Death of CARUS, when Numerianus had reached the Hellespont on his Return homeward. And Diocles now foftened his Name

-CARINVS Name into DiocLETIAN, and spent the rest of the Numerianus. Year in preparing to meet Carinus.

And CARINUS, on the other Side, however deficient in Probity, wanted not Courage for the Vindication of his Right. When apprifed of what had passed, he marched from Gaul, where he then was, into Italy; and, on the Plains of Verona, encountered and flew Sabinus Julianus, Governor of the Veneti, who, on the Death of Carus, had fet himself up for Emperor. Thence he turned to Illyricum, and, at Margum in Moesia, had divers Engagements with Diocletian. In the last, some Authors fay, that he was victorious, and flain in the Pursuit by a Tribune of his own, whose Wife he had debauched; others, that he was overcome, and fell in the Action; others again, that he was betrayed by his own Men, delivered up, and put to Death by his Rival. However that be, DIOCLETIAN, by his Death, became fole Master of the Roman Empire. Little St. - nr mil sta il 1-P

I Take and the limit of the William of the Whole at all the street of the real

ATC. Is a little to the given air for the Aprel of

I we may a your his County may more than that of LERITARIA

CAIUS VALERIUS DIOCLETIANUS Scores core that the Cordinon hi the Runing

his entry is the end to self of the will of MIOCLETIAN now hastened to Rome, being DIOCLETIAN. acknowledged by the Senate and the Armies. The Consent of the last is expressed on the Reverse Pl. LVIII. 8. before us, where the CONCORDIA MILITVM, arrayed in the Imperial Mantle, with the Hasta pura in the left Hand, presents to the Emperor with the right a Globe, with a Victory mounted thereon, who holds out the laurel Wreath to him. He was now Conful for the fecond Time, and undertook an Expedition against the Alemans, who had entered Gaul. His Success was fuch as warranted the Appellation of GERMANICVS upon some Inscriptions, though the Author has not found it MARCHE upon.

448

DIOCLETIAN.

Pl. LVIII. 9.

upon his Coins, any more than that of BRITAN-NICVS, which was given him for the Advantages obtained by his Commanders in this Island. On this Occasion, probably, the Coin was struck, which has for its Reverse fupiter wearing a radiated Crown, with a Globe and Victory in his right Hand, and an Eagle at his Feet, inscribed IOVI IN-VICTO AVG; which was agreeable to the early Pride and Presumption of this Emperor, who, though sprung from the Dregs of the People, took the Name of Jovius, nor was ashamed of being saluted by the Titles of Lord and God, and of being adored as such.

Seeing now that the Condition of the Empire required a Ruler of great Activity and Courage, and being indolent himself, and not fond of exposing his Person; and having no Son; he made Choice of his Friend M. Aurelius Valerius Maximianus for his Assistant, adopting and declaring him CAESAR, and in the following Year conferred upon him the Tribunitial Power, with the Title of AVGVSTVS.

and the state of the second section in the section in the second section in the section in the Little and the Analysis of the Analysis of the Conference of the C

AURELIUS VALERIUS MAXIMIANUS.

HIS new Emperor was of mean Descent, DIOCLETIAN and no commendable Morals, but of tried Valour and approved Experience in War. The Rebellion of Aelianus and Amandus, who had put themselves at the Head of the discontented Peasants in Gaul, and usurped the Imperial Titles, seems to have forwarded his Appointment. But before he went against the Revolters, both Emperors made their public Entrance into Rome with the usual Solemnities; which is expressed on one of MAXIMIAN'S Reverses, by the Figure of Africa (because there it was coined) holding a Banner in one Hand, and Vol. II. 3 M an Elephant's Tooth in the other, having a Lion at her Feet, as abounding with that Animal, with the Legend FELIX ADVENT AUGG NN for Adventus Augustorum nostrorum. There is the like Reverse and Legend on one of Diocletian, with a Dragon at her Feet, as being the Nurse of Serpents. The Confent of the Army to his Advancement is also fignified by one of his Medals, with his radiated Head, and IMP C VA MAXIMIApresents him with a Globe and a Victory holding

DIOCLETIAN AND MAXIMIAN. Pl. LVIII. 10.

Pl. LVIII. 11. NVS AVG; on the Reverse of which Jupiter out a Wreath, with CONCORDIA MILITVM. MAXIMIAN now marched against the Revolters, whom he subdued in a short Time, notwithstand-Pl. LVIII. 12. ing their obstinate Resistance. We have a Coin of one of their Chiefs, with the Title IMP S AMAN-DVS P F AVG, having a Venus for the Reverse, flyled VENVS AVG; and of the other with the Pl. LVIII. 13. Head radiated, and IMP CL AELIANVS PF AVG, the Reverse being a Victory holding out a Wreath with VICTORIA AVG; an Argument of his having at first gained some Advantage over the Provincial Troops. Cambden is altogether of Opinion, that he was called AVGVSTVS in Britain; because (as he avers) his Coins are found only in this Island; in which Assertion we fear that he is mistaken. In this War, Carausus, so distinguished guished himself, that the Provision of a large Fleet, DIOCLETIAN which was found necessary, and the Defence of the MAXIMIAN. Sea-coasts, which were ravaged by the Franks and Saxons, was committed to his Charge.

While this was doing, DIOCLETIAN passed into the East, who, by his Presence and Preparations, obliged Narses, the Persian Monarch, to submit to his Terms. The Year after this, the two Emperors were Confuls together; Diocletian for the third, and MAXIMIAN the second, Time; when the Burgundians, the Alemans, the Chaibones, and the Heruli, broke into Gaul in such Numbers, as threatened utter Destruction to the Provinces there. But MAXIMIAN, with a few Cohorts only (if we may believe his Panegyrist) defeated the united Force of the two last-mentioned Nations, while the two former, in consequence of his military Prudence, were destroyed by Famine and the Pestilence. For this he feems to have been honoured with an Equestrian Statue; for we see it on one of his Re- Pl. LVIII. 14. verses in Gold, with COS II. He also took the Surname of Herculius, as another Alcides, being represented as such upon his Coins, and frequently spoken of under this Denomination. On one of his Medals of Gold, which bears his Laureate Head, with MAXIMIANVS PF AVG, the Reverse is Hercules seizing the sacred Hind, with Feet of Brass 3 M 2

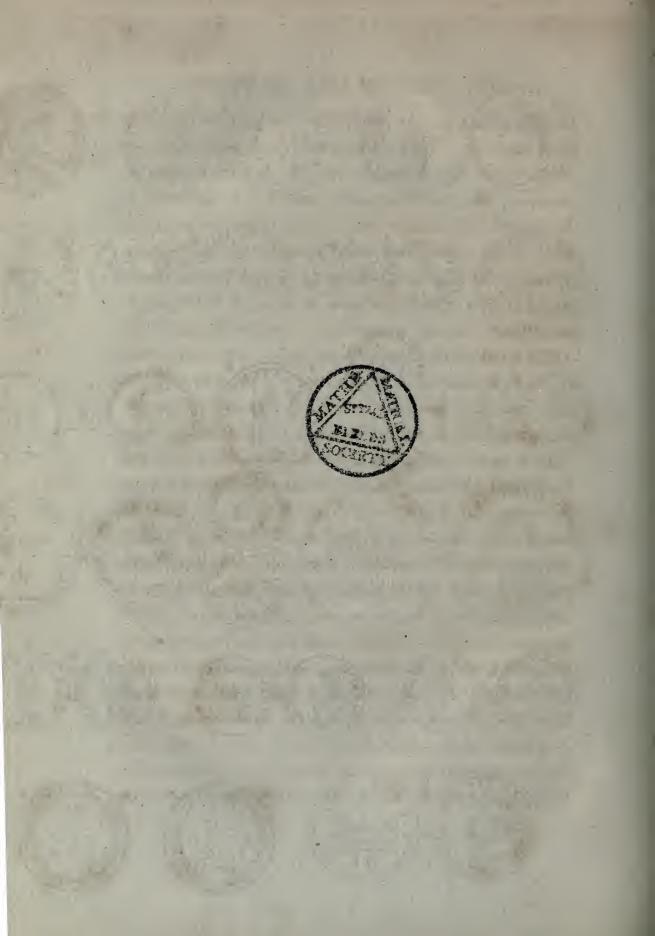

MAXIMIAN.

DIOCLETIAN Brass and Horns of Gold, after his Year's Chace, Behind him is the Lion's Skin, and the Legend is VIRTVS AVGG; in the Exergue PR, for Percussa Romæ. On other Reverses he is represented Pl. LVIII. 17, as strangling the Nemean Lion, his Club standing behind him as useless, and on one of them a Victory (without Wings, as permanent) crowns him with a Wreath. We have the same Device on one of DIOCLETIAN, except that the Victory is there alate or winged. The Legend is alike on both, VIR-TVTI AVGG.

In the Interim, DIOCLETIAN was watching the Motions of the Barbarians, on the Side of Pannonia; and, when MAXIMIAN, after his Victory, passed the Rhine, he also entered Germany, through Rhætia. Their Arms struck such Terror, that two of the German Kings, with all Humility, made their Submission to MAXIMIAN, and the Limits of the Empire were greatly extended. One of these Kings, named Genabod, was restored to his Dominions, through the Piety of the Emperors, as it is called: For on one of MAXIMIAN's Coins, with his radiated Head, and MAXIMIANVS P F AVG, he is on the Re-Pl. LVIII. 19. verse kneeling to him, with the Offering of chis Cornucopiæ, the Type of his abundant Wealth; while the other lays hold of his right Hand, to raife him from the Earth; and this in the Legend is the PIETAS AUGG: the PTR in the Exergue fays DIOCLETIAN that it was struck at Treves, which was probably the MAXIMIAN. Scene of the Ceremonial. All this while the Agreement of the two Emperors was fuch as deserved to be recorded: the Reverse of one of Diocletian's Medals of Gold is therefore dedicated CONCOR- Pl. LVIII. 20. DIAE AVGG NN, shewing a Victory with expanded Wings, who crowns them both with Laurel as they fit, having each a Globe in his Hand.

the

The next Year they were Confuls together once more, Diocletian for the fourth, and MAXIMIAN for the third, Time. And this Dignity is recorded on Medals of Gold, which bear their Heads laureated, with DIOCLETIANVS AVGVSTVS, and MAXIMIANVS AVGVSTVS, while the Reverses Pl. LVIII. 21. shew each its respective Emperor with a Globe in his Hand: but the first is seated, and has a Victory on his Globe, with a Palm-Branch in the left Hand. and in the right a Wreath, with which she crowns him; but the last is standing. The Legend of the one is CONSVL IIII PP PROCOS, of the other CONSVL III PP PROCOS. Great naval Preparations were now made for a Descent upon Britain. For Caraufus, who commanded the Roman Fleet, and had taken great Spoils from the Franks and Saxons, which he had converted wholly to his own Use, had thereby incurred the deep Displeasure

TEANST

Pl. LIX. 1.

Diocletian
AND
MAXIMIAN.

of MAXIMIAN, who ordered him to be put to Death. But Caraufus, having gained Intelligence of this, retired to Britain with his Fleet. He had also the Address to win the Legions there to his Interest, and they proclaimed him AVGVSTVS. With all Speed he augmented his Fleet and Army, and strengthened himself by the Accession of Numbers from the Sea Coasts of the Continent, whom he invited to his Service, and made himself Master of Boulogne. He is said by some to have been a Native of the Low Countries, by others of Ireland. However that be, for feven Years he fustained with great Bravery the Character which he now assumed. His Arrival in the Metropolis of the Island is celebrated on Coins in the usual Manner, by his Equestrian Figure, with ADVENTVS AVG. Against him MAXIMIAN fitted out a most powerful Navy, which Caraufus, by the Address of his People in maritime Affairs, utterly defeated; infomuch that MAXIMIAN was obliged to enter into Treaty with him, by which his Sovereignty in Britain was acknowledged, on the Condition, which followed of Course, that he should defend it against the Barbarians.

CARAUSIUS.

The ERE then we have a new Emperor in Bri-Diocletian, tain; and this Agreement is celebrated, as MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS. above, by the Figure of Peace on one of his Reverses, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and an Olive-Branch in the other, stiled PAX AVG. It is not strange, therefore, that we should read around his laureate Head IMP CARAVSIVS PF INvictus AVG, or that he should appear on the Reverse, having an armed Spear and Globe in his Hands, with VIRTVS INVicta AVG. In the Exergue are the Letters Q L, which I read Quæstor Londinii. For London was at this Time an Emporium of the most considerable Note, and CARAUSIUS probably 6 considered

CARAVSIVS.

Pl. LIX. 2.

. 4

confidered it as the rifing Capital of a new Roman

DIOCLETIAN, MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS.

Empire. For on a fine Medal of Gold, which shews him in compleat Armour, with a Spear resting on his Shoulder, and the Infcription VIRTVS CA-Pl. LIX. 3. RAVSI, we have the Wolf fuckling Romulus and Remus for the Reverse, and the extraordinary Legend ROMA NOstra RENOVAta: In the Exergue RSR, which may stand for Rationalis Sacrarum Rationum, an Officer answering to our Chancellor of the Exchequer. These Letters are repeated in the Exergue of one of his Denarii, which on the obverse Side has his laureate Head, with IMP CA-Pl. LIX. 4. RAVSIVS P F AVG, and for the Reverse a Galley with Rowers, and around it FELICITAS. Pl. LIX. 5. another Reverse, inscribed VBERITAS AVG, Neptune takes hold of his Hand, as ensuring Plenty to his Reign; and in the Exergue of this we have R S Q, Rationum Sacrarum Quæstor. Others give us the SALVS AVG, as usual, and others the a Globe at her Feet.

Pl. LIX. 6.

About this Time, DIOCLETIAN defeated the Sarmatians, and their Allies, recovering the Province of Dacia, and reannexing it to the Empire. For this he assumed the Name of SARMATICVS, and his Victory is celebrated on one of his Denarii, which has his laureate Head with DIOCLETIAa soli non

PROVIDENTIA AVG, with her Cornucopiæ, and

Pl. LIX. 7.

NVS AVG, and a fortified Camp for the Reverse, DIOCLETIAN, before which he is offering Sacrifice, attended by CARAVSIVS. his Officers, and the Legend is VICTORIA SAR-MATica. This Success produced a temporary Peace throughout the whole Empire. Coins were struck with the radiated Head of IMP DIOCLE-TIANVS AVG, with the Eagle before him; the Reverses of which were inscribed IOVI AVGG, with the Figure of Jupiter bearing the Hasta pura in one Hand, and in the other, a Globe, on which stands Victory, and the Eagle at his Feet. Others in Gold are inscribed IOVI CONSERVATori, as in the Frontispiece, and here the Deity grasps his Thunder; as others, with the same Device, are IOVI TVTATORI AVGG. Some of MAXIMIAN. of the baser Silver, on this Occasion bear an uncommon Title, DN MAXIMIANO FELICISSIMO SENiori AVG, who holds before him an Olive-Branch; and the Reverse contains two female Fi-Pl. LIX. 10. gures, the one representing the PROVIDENTIA DEORVM, and the other, the QVIES AVGG. This feems to be the proper Season for that Regulation which we judge the Coin to have undergone by the Authority of MAXIMIAN. For on a fine Medallion, which shews him in Armour laureated, having his Horse in his Hand; and on his Shield, the Wolf fuckling the two Founders of Rome, with Vol. II. VIRTVS

MAXIMIAN,

Pl. LIX. 3.

Pl. LIX. 9.

Diocletian, Maximian, Caravsivs.

Pl. LIX. 11.

VIRTVS MAXIMIANI AVG; three female Figures form the Reverse, with each her Cornucopiæ in the left Hand, and an even Balance in the right, with Heaps-of Money underneath, and the Legend MONETA AVGG. This Sunshine of Peace invited the two Emperors to an Interview at Milan, where they held some private Conferences with great Appearance of Friendship and Cordiality. And here, it may be, was laid the Foundation of that Scheme, which was carried into Execution the following Year. For the Clouds beginning again to gather, they judged it Time to look out for Affistants and Successors. The Persians passed. the Tigris. And the Five Nations in Africa united against the Romans. In Egypt, Achilleus at Alexandria usurped the Imperial Purple, which he held to the fixth Year; for some of his Coins run AYT K A AXIAAEOC EYE EYTCEB L S. And Julianus did the same in Italy. We have his Denarius; with IMP C M AVR IVLIANVS PF AVG, with a Reverse, IOVI CONSERVATori, as commonly figured. What is intended by the Letters in the Area must be left to the Conjecture of the Reader; but the Numbers in the Exergue feem to intimate, that he was supported by the twenty-first Legion. For these Reasons two Casars were created, Gale-. rius Maximian by DIOCLETIAN, and Constantius; Chlorus

Bl. LIX. 12.

Chlorus by MAXIMIAN. Hence we have GAL VAL MAXIMIANVS NOB C, with a Reverse GENIO POPVLI ROMANI. They were at the fame Time invested with the Tribunitial and Proconsular Authority, for the Head is laureated. They were also declared Princes of the Youth; for on one of Pl. LIX. 14. his Denarii, with MAXIMIANVS NOB CAES, he is figured with a Globe and Hasta pura, having the Legend PRINCIPI IVVENTutis. To bind them the more strongly to their Interest, they obliged them to part with their former Wives, and to marry, Galerius the Daughter of Diocletian, named Valeria, and Constantius the Daughter-inlaw of MAXIMIAN, called Theodora. A Partition of the Empire was likewise made. All that lay onthe other Side the Alps was committed to the Government of Constantius; Africa and Italy to HER-CULIUS MAXIMIAN; Illyricum, and all the Provinces to the Euxine and the Hellespont, to Galerius; and all the rest to Diocletian, to whom the others looked up as to their common Father. This Division threw most grievous Burdens upon the Subject, as each of them had his separate Court and Army, attended with the same Expence as when there was but a fingle Emperor. Galerius was difpatched into Mesopotamia against the Persians, by whom he was at first roughly handled; but in the 3 N 2 next

DIOCLETIAN, MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS.

Pl. LIX. 13.

Diocletian, next Campaign, attacking them on the Side of MAXIMIAN, Armenia, he gained a compleat Victory, taking Prisoners the Wives and Children of Narses, and a great Number of his Nobility. Persia might have been reduced to a Roman Province; but a Peace was granted, and the Tigris made the Boundary of the two Empires. The Valour of the Army in this Action is complimented on his Denarius; on the obverse Side of which, is the laureate Head of Galerius, with MAXIMIANVS NOB C; the Reverse being a strong Camp, before which he is offering Sacrifice, with the Legend VIRTVS MI-LITVM.

All this while Diocletian was engaged in Egypt, where he defeated and punished Achilleus, reducing the whole Country. HERCULIUS MAXIMIAN was equally fuccessful against the Moors in Africa, amongst whom Julianus had taken Refuge, who now put an End to his own Life. And Constantius recovered Boulogne from CARAUSIUS, Subdued the Franks who had taken Possession of Batavia, and over-ran a great Part of Germany, meriting the Surname of GERMANICUS. On this Occasion he paid the same Compliment to the Bravery of the Soldiers, which we have feen paid by Galerius Maximian. For on the Denarius, which bears his laureate Head, with CONSTANTIVS NOB C, a ftrong'

Pl. LIX. 15.

strong Camp forms the Reverse, before which the Diocletian, Sacrifice is offering, and the Legend is also VIR- CARAVSIVS. TVS MILITVM. Soon after, CARAUSIUS was affassinated by the treacherous AlleEtus, his prime Minister, and the Captain of his Guards, whom the Troops proclaimed Emperor in his stead. We have therefore a Denarius, with his Head laureated, and around it, IMP C ALLECTVS PF AVG. The Reverse is the Dea SALVS AVG, figured in the usual Manner. The M L in the Exergue is the Moneta Londinii. There is another Coin with his radiated Head and the fame Inscription, having for the Reverse a Ship with Rowers, the Emblem of his maritime Power, and VIRTVS AVG. The Letters in the Exergue are here Q L for Quaftor Londinii. In his third Year, Asclepiodotus, the General of Constantius, landed with an Army in Britain, having escaped in a Fog the Vigilance of the British Fleet. Alle Etus instantly attacked him with his Forces in a tumultuary Manner, and was flain. Thus was the Island reannexed to the Empire, into which Constantius passed, and settled the Affairs of it in fuch a Manner as greatly indeared him to all the Inhabitants.

Pl. LIX. 17..

Hitherto the Affairs of the Empire had proceeded prosperously under the Auspices of Diocle-TIAN. But now commenced the Tenth Persecution

MAXIMIAN,

Pl. LIX. 16.

MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS.

DIOCLETIAN, of Christianity, and the most dreadful which the Professors of it had yet experienced. This took Place at the Instigation of Galerius. DIOCLETIAN withstood his Persuasions for some Time, but being overcome by some of those around him, and by the Response of the Milesian Apollo, whom he confulted, Edicts for the Suppression of it were published. Not content with this, Galerius had Fire put privately to the Palace in Nicomedia, where they were, and accused the Christians as the Incendiaries. He tried the Experiment a fecond Time, but the Mischief was quickly prevented. On this he took his Leave, though in the Depth of Winter, declaring that he fled from the Place through Fear of being burned alive. The Flame of Persecution therefore raged without Respect of Persons. Prisca and Valeria, the Wife and Daughter of Diocletian, who had been converted, were compelled to facrifice. The most powerful Eunuchs of the Court were put to Death. Those of every Sex and Age were hurried to the Stake, or thrown into the Sea; and Tortures, before unheard of, were inflicted. Letters were written to HERculius and Constantius, recommending to them the same Measures. The former was ready enough, for it suited his Morals and Disposition. And the latter, that he might not feem to oppose their united Resolution, Resolution, suffered some Churches to be pulled DIOCLETIAN, down, but touched no Man's Life.

MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS.

At this Time, Eugenius was proclaimed Emperor by a Body of Men whom he commanded, in the City of Seleucia, who marched suddenly to Antioch, which he took Possession of. But as soon as the Antiochians were apprized of his Intentions, they rose upon him in the Evening, and massacred both him and his Attendants. Notwithstanding which, the principal Magistrates, both of Antioch and Seleucia, without further Enquiry, suffered Death by the positive Orders of DIOCLETIAN.

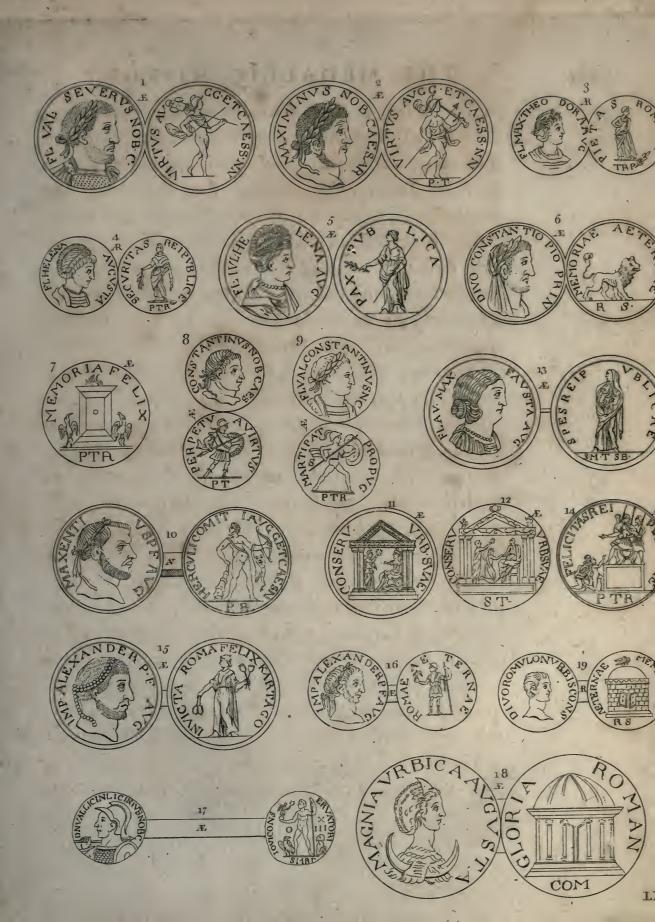

The next Year the two Emperors and their two Cæsars assembled at Rome. Here they triumphed for the Victories which they had severally obtained; and here the Vicennalia of Diocletian, who had now feen the twentieth Year of his Reign, were celebrated. There are two Reverses in Gold which record this Event. Each of them is a Wreath of Laurel inclosing; the one, XX DIOCLETIANI Pl. LIX. 18; AVG S M T, Vicenalia Diocletiani Augusti. Signata. Moneta Treviris; the other, VOT XX SIC XXX, Votis Vicenalibus. Sic Tricenalibus, intimating that, as the Vows for his Vicenalia compleated were now paid, so those for another prosperous Term of ten Years to make up his Tricenalia were now made... But as the Roman People taxed him with Avarice, 19.

and

MAXIMIAN, CARAVSIVS.

DIOCLETIAN, and were free in their Speeches at this Solemnity, he quitted Rome in a Pet, even in the Middle of December, and retired to Ravanna, where on the First of January he assumed the Fasces for the ninth Time, in Conjunction with HERCULIUS MAXI-MIAN the eighth Time. This unfeafonable Journey brought on a Fit of Sickness, which was nearly fatal, and did great Injury to his Faculties. However, in the Course of the Summer, by slow Journeys, and in a Litter, he once more reached . Nicomedia; and early in the Spring of the fucceeding Year, was well enough to appear in public. But the Ambition of Galerius judged him now too weak to hold the Reigns of Government. This Prince infifted upon his immediate Refignation, to which Diocletian seemed not much averse. He wrote also to Herculius Maximian to the same Purpose: and, to avoid a civil War, for which Galerius was too well provided, it was at last concluded, that the two old Emperors should abdicate, that Constantius and Galerius should be declared Augusti, and two new Cæsars be made Choice of. For this Dignity, DIOCLETIAN proposed Maxentius, the Son of HERCULIUS MAXIMIAN, who had married Magnia Urbica, the Daughter of Galerius, and Constantine the Son of Constantius. But Galerius, who carried every Thing with an high high Hand, infifted upon the Nomination of Se- Diocletian, verus, who was to succeed HERCULIUS in the Go- CARAVSIVS. vernment of Italy and Africa, and Daza his own Nephew, to whom he gave the Name of Maximin, who was to supply the Place of Diocletian in the We have therefore the laureate Head of the former, with FLavius VALerius SEVERVS NOB C; and for the Reverse, Mars Victor, armed with Helmet and Spear, and bearing a Trophy on his Shoulder, with the Legend VIRTVS AVGG ET CAESS NN; Virtus Augustorum et Cæsarum Nostrorum: and of the latter, with MAXIMINVS NOB CAESAR, and the same Mars for the Reverse, armed with Helmet, Sword, and Spear, and underneath P T, for Percussa Treviris.

Pl. LX. 1.

Pl. LX. 2.

FLAVIUS CONSTANTIUS. GALERIUS VALERIUS MAXIMIANUS.

CONSTANTIVS
AND
GALERIVS.

MAXIMIAN now appear on their Medals, as above, with the Title of Augustus. Herculius Maximian, little pleased with his private Condition, retired into Lucania for a Season. Diocletian took up his Residence at Salona, his native City in Dalmatia, now called Spalato. Here he erected for himself a most magnificent Palace, the stately Ruins of which excite Admiration to this Day, and amused himself with the Cultivation of his Garden. Being some Time after invited by Herculius and his Friends

Friends to refume the Imperial Dignity, he rejected the Proposal with Contempt. His Behaviour to the Ambassadors on this Occasion is well described by our most excellent Cowley:

CONSTANTIVS
AND
GALERIVS.

Methinks I see great Diocletian walk
In the Salonian Garden's noble Shade,
Which by his own Imperial Hands was made:
I see him smile, methinks, as he does talk
With the Ambassadors, who came in vain,
T' entice him to a Throne again;
If I, my Friends (said he) should to you shew
All the Delights which in these Gardens grow;
'Tis likelier much, that you should with me stay,
Than 'tis that you should carry me away:
And trust me not, my Friends, if every Day,
I walk not here with more Delight,
Than ever after the most happy Fight
In Triumph to the Capitol I rode,
To thank the Gods, and to be thought myself almost a God.

From the Time that Constantius took this Title, the Persecution ceased in the West. Both Emperors held the Fasces together in the two succeeding Years, at the End of which Constantius died at York. His first Wife was Helena, whom he parted with for Reasons of State, and married Theodora, the Daughter of Eutropia (the Wife of Herculius Maximian) by a former Husband, by whom he had three Sons, Dalmatius, Constantius, and Annibalianus; and three Daughters, Constantia,

CONSTANTIVS
AND ALERIVS.

Pl. LX. 3.

Pl. LX. 4.

Pl. LX. 5.

Eutropia, and Anastasia. Her Denarius is inscribed FLavia MAXimiana THEODORA AVGusta. On the Reverse she is represented as giving suck to one of her Children under the very proper Title of PIETAS ROMANA. At her Feet is a Branch of Laurel, and in the Exergue TR, P for Treviris Percussa. On her Death he received again his first Wife HELENA with great Satisfaction. She is also honoured with the Imperial Title on her Denarius, being there stiled FLavia HELENA AVGVSTA. The Reverse is a female Figure veiled and standing (the Emblem of Religion) with a Branch of Laurel in her Hand, denominated the SECVRITAS REIPVBLICAE: in the Exergue, P TR Percussa. Treviris. On one of her Coins in Bronze she is attired in the same Manner, and called FL IVLia HELENA AVG, with PAX PVBLICA for the Reverse, holding a Branch of Laurel in one Hand, and the Hasta pura in the other. She bore to him two Sons; the youngest of whom died, and the eldest was afterwards Constantine the Great. This young Prince had been detained first in the Court of Diocletian, and afterwards in that of GALERIUS, being little better than an Hostage for the peaceable Behaviour of his Father, who had often reclaimed him in vain. At last, when GALERIUS could no longer withstand his Sollicitations, he feemed to consent to his Departure, but dispatched Constantivs a Messenger to Severus in Italy to intercept him. GALERIVS. But Constantine, who was expected to take a formal Leave of GALERIUS the next Day, setting out in the preceding Evening, and hamstringing all the Post-Horses as he went, to prevent a Pursuit, outwent the Express, and arrived in Britain time enough to receive his Father's last Embraces, was folemnly appointed to succeed him as Emperor, and was with much Alacrity acknowledged by the Army and People. The Confecration of Constan-Tius immediately took Place, who accordingly appears veiled upon his Coins, with DIVO CON- Pl. LX. 6. STANTIO PIO PRINcipi, with a Lion for the Reverse, and the Legend MEMORIAE AETER-NAE: in the Exergue, R S, Romæ Signata. Other Reverses are the Eagle, or an Altar blazing between two Eagles, with MEMORIA FELIX, and P TR, Percussa Treviris. His Name always occurs before that of GALERIUS on Account of his illustrious Descent, being of the Family of CLAUDIUS. Gothicus. He was not learned, yet possessed a a Fund of good Sense, which enabled him to see the Vanity of Paganism, and induced him to profels himself the Worshipper of the One God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth; whence he first protested, and afterwards patronized, the Christians.

10

feemed

Pl. LX. 7.

GALERIVS.

25, 1.5 3.

Constantive His Gravity was such as became the Ruler of a great Empire, and his Modesty and Mildness were truly amiable. He loved his Subjects as his Children, and took high Delight in their Content and Welfare, depending, with Reason, upon their reciprocal Gratitude and Affection; for when Diocletian, by his Messengers, reproached him for his Moderation, and the Poverty of his Exchequer, he detained them a few Days, till he had intimated to the wealthiest of his People, how acceptable their Assistance would be at this Time; after which he invited them to a view of his Treasures, when they were aftonished at the immense Heaps of Gold and Silver which they found accumulated. This done, he repaid his Friends the several Sums sent in. will the courted the state of the state of the

stal a limite with my to a such different plantage

THE PARTY OF THE P Contract of the second of the Letare that a service of the fill and a service on the ritingtrings if a court of the court of the court of salous to the same of the Carlotte of the Salating when the training the plant of the property of Action to the Contract of the and the state of t

FLAVIUS

FLAVIUS CONSTANTINUS.

IS Son Constantine, now Emperor by the GALERIUS Disposition of his Father, met with no Obstruction to his Pretentions on this Side the Alps. But when GALERIUS received his Image arrayed in the Imperial Ornaments, as usual, he did not acknowledge him till after much Hefitation, and then only favoured him with the Title of CESAR. Therefore, on one of his Coins, struck at Treves, we read around his laureate Head CONSTANTINUS NOB CAES; on the Reverse of which he is Mars compleatly armed, with the Legend PERPETVA VIR-TVS. And he deserved this Eulogy; for his Affability, Generofity, and Gallantry, had rendered him

CONSTANTINE.

Pl. LX: 8.

the:

CONSTANTINE. Pl. LX. Q.

GALERIUS the Theme of every Tongue. Another, with the fame Title, and a much better Impression, has the same Deity for the Reverse; but the Legend is MARTI PATRI PROPVGnatori. But when the like Image arrived at Rome, it raised both the Indignation and Ambition of Maxentius beyond all Bounds. He was the Son of Herculius, and the Son-in-Law of Galerius Maximian, and confidered himself as equally entitled to the Empire, though he had not been honoured with the Title of CASAR. For neither of those Emperors entertained the least Affection for him; the Deformity of his Body, and the Depravity of his Mind, having rather excited their Aversion. He therefore found Means, by the Assistance of Marcellinus and Marcellus, two military Tribunes, and Lucianus, who had the Charge of distributing Flesh to the People, to engage both the Commonalty and the Prætorian Guards in his Interest. Being proclaimed Emperor by them, the Senate came into the Meafure. the same Time he made himself Master of the City, by the Murder of Abellius the Governor. Hence we have his laureate Head, with IMP C MAXENTIVS P F AVG, and Caftor and Pollux for the Reverse, with AETERNITAS AVG, which now began to be one of the Imperial Titles.

MAXENTIUS.

MAXENTIUS.

from recognizing his Authority, that he urged Severus, whose Province he had usurped, to march against him, which he did with a sufficient Strength, advancing to the Walls of Rome. But Maxentius had invited his Father Herculius thither, who readily attended him, being desirous of turning the Consusion of the Times to his own Advantage; for which Reason he endeavoured (but without Success) to persuade Diocletian to join him. He had the Address, however, to prevail upon his Son and the Senate to consent to his Resumption of the Imperial Dignity. Hence on a Golden Medal, having round Vol. II.

Galerivs,
Constantine,
Maxentivs,
Maximian.

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN.

Pl. LX. 10.

Pl. LX. 11.

the laureate Head MAXENTIVS P F AVG, we read on the Reverse, which bears the Figure of Hercules, armed with his Bow and Club, HERCVLI COMTI AVGG, and CAES N P R. This by the PR was struck at Rome, and by the CAES N, or Cæsaris Nostri, it appears that his Son Romulus had now received that Appellation. And now by Dint of Money, and large Promises, they prevailed upon the greater Part of the Forces of Severus, with Anulinus, his Captain of the Guards, to defert their Leader; fo that he found himself obliged to retreat to Ravenna, where he was befieged by MAXIMIAN, who, with most solemn Oaths and Assurances of Safety, decoyed him thence; and at a Place called The Three Taverns, on his Return towards Rome, put him to Death. This Success is recorded on several Coins of Maxentius, which have for the Reverse the Temple of Romulus. In one a Victory is offering a Wreath to the Deity of the Place, who has a Captive at his Feet. On a fecond, one of the Em-Pl. LX. 12. perors kneels before him, while the other holds out the Wreath of Laurel. The Legend is the same on all, CONSERVatori VRBis SVAE. They now had Reason to dread the Resentment of GALERIUS, and therefore made it their first Care to fortify the City in the most effectual Manner. After which HERCULIUS fet out for Treves, in order to engage the Friendship of Constantine, whom to this End he acknowledged as Augustus, and gave to him his Daughter Fausta in Marriage, his first Wise Minervina, the Mother of Crispus, being dead. On her Coins she is therefore stiled FLAVia MAXimiana AVGusta, and has for the Reverse the SPES REI-PVBLICAE: in the Exergue S M T S P, which Patin reads Sacra Moneta Treviris Percussa. On this Occasion 'tis probable that the Reverse in Gold was struck in the same Place, which shews Constantine as in the Act of distributing a Congiary, with the Legend FELICITAS REIPVBLICAE P TR.

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN.

Pl. LX. 13.

Pl. LX. 14.

While Matters were thus proceeding in the West, Galerius marched to Rome, with Menaces of exemplary Vengeance: but on his Arrival, finding himself unable to carry the City, and seeing some of his Forces already debauched by the Artisices of Maxentius, he retreated with Shame. About the same Time the Troops in Africa revolted, chusing one Alexander, a Person of mean Birth and Character, for their Emperor; who held that State and Title to his fourth Year, for one of his Greek Coins is dated L A, Anno Quarto; when he was overcome, taken, and strangled, by the Generals of Maxentius. On one of his Coins, in Bronze, he is crowned with a Wreath of Pearls, and entitled

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN.

Pl. LX. 15.

Pl. LX., 16.

IMP ALEXANDER P F AVG. The Reverse is the Genius of Carthage, with Poppies in one Hand, and Ears of Corn in the other, and the Legend INVICTA ROMA FELIX KARTAGO. On another he is laureated, with the same Inscription; but the Reverse is a military Figure, representing Rome, with the Hasta pura in one Hand, and a Victory in the other, and the Legend ROMAE. AETERNAE.

HERCULIUS MAXIMIAN having now gained, as he thought, an Ally and Protector, on whom he could depend, returned to Rome, with a Resolution to supplant and dethrone his Son Maxentius. He used every Art to bring over the Troops to his separate Interest; and when he judged his Plot ripe, harangued them from the Tribunal whereon his Son was feated with him. His Speech was entirely a Declamation against the Measures and Behaviour of his Son, whom he degraded on the Spot, drawing from his Shoulders the Imperial Mantle. But MAXENTIUS, leaping down, implored the Protection of the Soldiers; and by the Piteousness of his Entreaties, and the Immensity of his Promises, turned their Resentment against his Father, whom they threatened with immediate Death. The old Emperor faved his Life with Difficulty, by declaring, that " the whole Scheme was intended " purely.

or purely for a Trial of their Fidelity to his Son, " the Assurance of which gave him the highest Sa-" tisfaction, and which could not be fufficiently " commended." Presently after this he quitted the City, and returned to Constantine, whom not finding so eager to support him, as he wished and expected, he left him as fuddenly, and flew to-GALERIUS, in Pannonia, where Diocletian also then was. Here he met with little Consolation, being only a Witness of the Exaltation of Licinius, whom GALERIUS had before made CÆSAR in the room of Severus, and now declared Augustus. All the Merit of this new Emperor consisted in his being a good Officer, and strict Disciplinarian: for he was of mean Descent, proud, unlearned, debauched, unmerciful, and avaricious. The Coins which speak of him in his first Capacity, shew him in Armour, with DN VAL LICINIANUS LICINIANS NOB C, and have the Reverse inscribed IOVI CONSERVATORI, with SMK in the Exergue, Signata Moneta Karnunti. But the following is one of those in Gold which record him as Emperor, and the Compliment of the Reverse is paid to his military Prowess only.

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN.

Pl. LX, 17.

. (

VALERIUS LICINIANUS LICINIUS.

GALERIVS,
CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS,
MAXIMIAN,
LICINIVS.

Is Jurisdiction was to comprehend the Provinces of Rhætia and Pannonia, with Italy and Africa, when they should be recovered from Maxentius. Soon after, Maximin was acknowledged Augustus, by his Uncle Galerius, who on that Occasion found himself obliged to do the same by Constantine.

MAXIMINUS.

MAXIMINUS

HI'S strange Number of Emperors bred Diftraction in the Commonwealth, and could not last long. And as the Number of Emperors, fo that of Confuls, was enlarged. At Rome, Max-ENTIUS and his Son Romulus fustained that Dignity. This young Prince was born of MAGNIA URBICA, the Daughter of GALERIUS, of whom we have feveral Coins, and amongst the rest a curious Medalión, with her Busto in a Crescent, inscribed MAGNIA VRBICA AVGVSTA: the Reverse is a Temple, PLIX. 18. with the Legend GLORIA ROMANorum. By the-COM in the Exergue, it may have been struck at Comum, in the Milanese. Other Reverses of this Empress

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN, LICINIVS, MAXIMIN.

Empress are the VENVS CELESTIS and the

GALERIVS, CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, MAXIMIAN, LICINIVS, MAXIMIN.

Pl. LX. 19.

-1-1567/5

-- 11

VENVS GENETRIX, but figured alike, with the Hasta pura and the Golden Apple. Romulus probably died before his Father, and while he difcharged this Office. For on one of his Coins we fee, around his youthful Head, DIVO ROMVLO N VRIS CONS, which can be only intended, with Propriety, for Nostrae Urbis Consuli. The Reverse is a Temple, with an Eagle upon the Dome of it, and the Legend AETERNAE MEMORIAE: underneath R S, Romæ Signata.

HERCULIUS MAXIMIAN, now weary of being a Witness to the superior State of Galerius, once more withdrew into Gaul, to watch for an Opportunity of deposing his Son-in-Law. With this View he made a fecond Refignation of the Imperial Power. The Franks were then in Arms. He perfuaded Constantine, that a small Detachment of his Forces was fufficient for this Expedition, and his Authority and Experience had Weight. When therefore he marched against them, he left the main Strength of his Army with Herculius, who, catching the Opportunity of his Absence, on a Sudden refumed the Purple, seized upon his Treasures, and bribed the Troops to a Revolt. Constantine, informed of this, flew back, and furprized him before he was sufficiently provided for Defence. He fled, and shut himself up in Marseilles, where he was besieged and taken; and, being again stripped of the Purple, his Life was granted to the Intercession of FAUSTA. But this Mercy was ineffectual to his Cure; for he did not cease to solicit his Daughter with Obtestations, Promises, Entreaties, and Commands, to concur with him in the Destruction of her Husband, by giving him an easy Access to his Chamber in the Night. To this at last she affented, or seemed to assent; but whether from Penitence or Defign, revealed the Proposal to her Lord. An Eunuch was ordered to sleep there. At Midnight Herculius entered, and dispatched him with a Dagger. Supposing now that he had carried every Point, he rushed out, and called aloud, glorying of the Fact. Presently appeared Constantine, furrounded by his Guards. The dead Body was produced, and the Murderer, manifestly guilty, had no Plea. The Choice of his own Death was allowed to him; in Consequence of which he was strangled. That he was honoured with a Confecration (however strange) is very evident, from the several Coins inscribed DIVO MAXIMIANO, with the Addition of SENiori OPTIMo PRincipi, or FELICISSIMO SEN AVG, or SEN FORT IMP, or PATRI.

In the same Manner, and about the same Time, perished Alexander, the Usurper, in Africa, after Vol. II.

3 Q having

GALERIVS,
CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS,
MAXIMIAN,
LICINIVS,
MAXIMIN.

CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS,
MAXIMIAN,
LICINIVS,
MAXIMIN.

Pl. LXI. I.

Pl. LXI. 2.

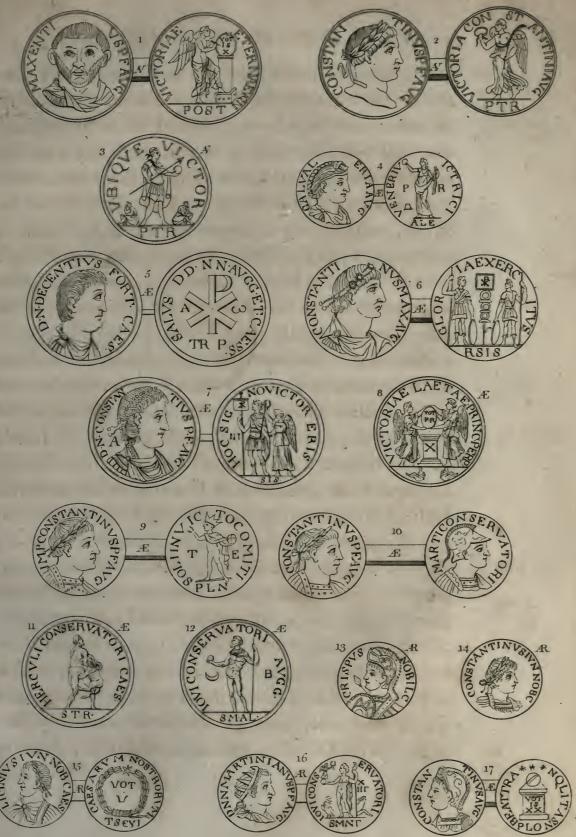

Pl. LXI. 3.

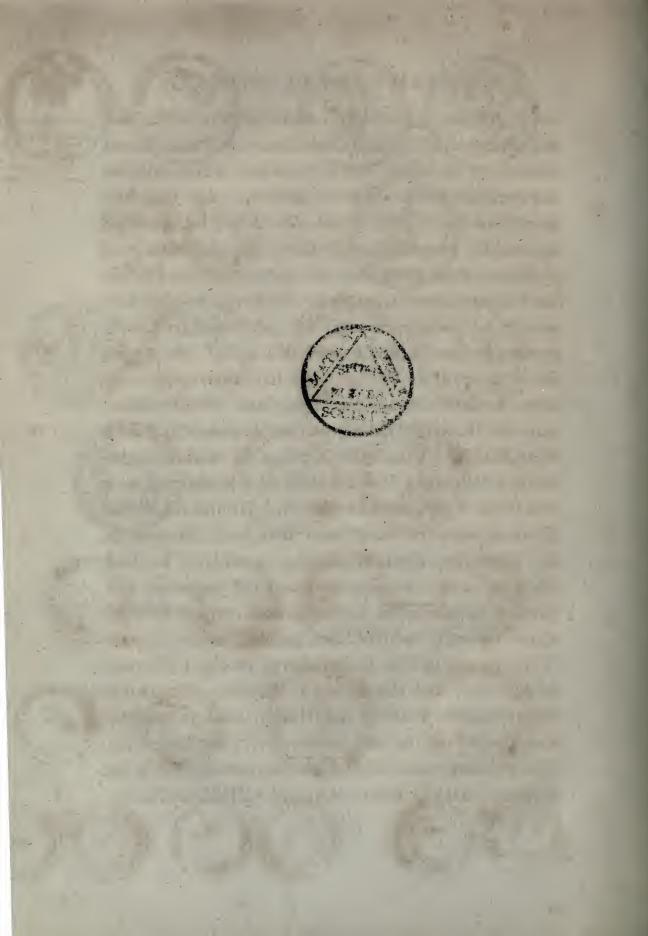

having been defeated, and taken Prisoner by Volusianus and Zena, the Generals of Maxentius. This Success is celebrated on a Medal of Gold, which bears his full Face (and it is the first full Face to be observed on the Coins of the Emperors) with MAXENTIVS P F AVG. The Reverse is a Shield, resting on a Column, on which a Victory is inscribing VOTIS X; and the Legend is VICTORIAE AETERNAE AVGusti Nostri: in the Exergue P OST, for Percussa Ostice. For this he also triumphed with great Pomp.

Nor was Constantine less successful on the Rhine, where he overthrew the Confederate Germans with dreadful Slaughter. On which Occasion the Medal of Gold was struck, with his laureate Head, and CONSTANTINVS P F AVG, with a Victory, having a Palm-Branch and Wreath for the Reverse, entitled VICTORIA CONSTANTINI AVG: in the Exergue P TR, Percussa Treviris. Another Reverse represents him in the military Habit, with an armed Spear and Globe, and two Captives at his Feet, being styled VBIQVE VICTOR.

Meantime Galerius Maximian was struck with a strange Disease, an Ulcer in the Genitals, which bassled all the Art of the Faculty. Apollo and Æsculapius were therefore consulted to as little Purpose. The Disorder spread, and Worms bred in his Intestines. His Pains were excruciating, and Constantine, the Stench of his Body intolerable. This Malady continued to afflict him for a whole Year, and he believed it himself to be judicial. He therefore published, an Edict (which Lastantius has given us at Length) allowing to the Christians the open Profession of their Religion, and requiring their Prayers for his own Health, and the Prosperity of the Empire. A few Days after he gave up the Ghost, having first recommended his Wife and Son to the Protection of Licinius. He had married, as has been said, VALERIA, the Daughter of Diocletian, who is therefore called on her Coins GALERIA VALERIA AVG; the Reverse of which is infcribed VENERI VICTRICI, who is figured with the Golden Apple in her Hand. By the ALE, the Coin appears to have been struck at Alexandria. Of GALERIUS himself, nothing good can be said. He was a cruel Tyrant, and a most unfeeling Oppressor, immersed in Luxury, and leaving in every City through which he passed, most flagrant Testimonies of his Debauchery, in the Dishonour of Matrons, and the Rape of Virgins. He died in the twentieth Year of his Reign, computing from the Time that he was invested with the Dignity of CASAR, and was deified; for some of his Coins are inscribed DIVO GAL VAL MAXIMIANO.

his

MAXENTIVS, LICINIUS, MAXIMIN.

Pl., LXI. 4.

Constantine,
Maxentivs,
Licinivs,
Maximin.

The Death of Galerius brought on a Contest between Licinius and Maximin. The latter immediately marched from Syria, towards the Hellespont, and made himself Master of the intermediate Provinces; while the former moved Eastward from Pannonia, and took Possession of Thrace. (Thus the Hellespont put a Stop to their further Proceedings, and became, by Agreement, the Boundary of their respective Empires. MAXIMIN now renewed the Persecution of the Christians; but, instead of putting them to Death, commanded that they should be punished with Loss of Sight, or maimed; so that many lost their Hands and Feet, while others had their Noses or Ears cut off: His Debaucheries were without Bounds; for he spared neither Maids nor married Women, of whatever Rank. VALERIA, though configned to the Protection of LICINIUS, had taken Refuge with him. He invited her to his Bed, even promifing to repudiate his Wife to make room for her. And when she excused herself, on Account of her Mourning, and the recent Death of her late Husband, he cruelly banished both her and her Mother from Place to Place, seized her Effects, put her Eunuchs to Death, and condemned her female Friends for pretended Adulteries. Nor could all the repeated Entreaties of Diocletian himself prevail in Behalf of his unhappy Daughter. It happened pened that Constantine at the same Time islued Constantine, Orders for destroying the Images of the Elder MAXIMIAN; and as for the most Part the Figure of his Colleague Diocletian was joined in the same Piece, and the Demolition affected both, the old. Emperor, overcome with these Indignities, and looking upon them as the Prelude to further Violence, pined away, and at last starved himselfto Death.

Meanwhile MAXENTIUS, though extremely odious at Rome, by the Multidude of his Debaucheries, Cruelties, and Oppressions, yet made mighty Preparations to revenge, as he faid, his Father's Death. His Design was to march against Constantine, by the Way of Rhætia; having at the same Time an Eve upon Dalmatia and Illyricum. Constantine did not fail to disculpate himself by Letters; but they were so ill received, that the Tyrant in a Rage destroyed his Statues and Images. This was an open Declaration of War. So that Constanting fet forward against him, with an Army of ninety thousand Foot and eight thousand Horse. But MAXENTIUS had more than double the Number of Cavalry; and his Infantry amounted to one hundred and seventy thousand fighting Men; of these, more than eighty thousand were Italians, and enured to the Service: whereas Constantine had but twenty-

MAXENTIVS, LICINIVS, MAXIMIN.

CONSTANTINE, MAXENTIVS, LICINIVS. MAXIMIN.

five thousand Romans in his Army. This Expedition, therefore, excited many ferious Reflexions, which shewed him the Necessity of having Recourse to some able Protector. Licinius indeed entered into Treaty with him, on Promise of having his Sister Constantia to Wife, but sent him no Troops. The miserable End of the great Persecutors of Christianity, and the continued Success and peaceable Death of his Father, who had protected that Profession, struck him forcibly. His Principles, therefore, he determined from this Time to embrace and adhere to. Accordingly he made his fervent Addresses to the ONE God of Heaven and Earth, for Support and Assistance. The Consequence of which was, the miraculous Vision of the Cross, which appeared to himself and the whole Army at Noon-day, with the Inscription EN ΤΟΥΤΩ NIKA, In this conquer. Instructed by a divine Admonition, he caused the Figure to be engraven on his Shields and Enfigns, and a rich Imperial Standard to be made in Imitation of it. The Figure is annexed, as it appears on a Reverse of Decentius, where the initial Letters which compose it, are explained by the A and W in the Area, and the Standard or Labarum, as we see it on one of Constantine's own Coins, where it is called the GLORIA EXERCITVS; on the Obverse of which

Pl. LXI. 5.

Pl. LXI. 6.

the

the Emperor wears a Diadem, decorated with pre- Constanting, cious Stones. We see it also on a Reverse of his Son Constantius, with the Legend IN HOC SIGNO VICTOR ERIS. The Event is well known. It is fufficient to fay that, in the general Action which enfued, Constantine was victorious, and Maxen-TIUS was drowned in the Tiber, the Bridge breaking under him in his Flight. Rome opened her Gates, and received the Conqueror as her Deliverer, with all possible Demonstrations of Joy. The Victory was recorded on Medals of Gold, which shew him in Armour, with his Helmet laureated, and the Title CONSTANTINVS AVG: the Reverse, two Victories, holding a Shield upon a Column, inscribed VOT X, with the Legend VICTORIAE LAETAE PRINCipis PERPetui. In the Exergue PR, for Percussa Romæ. But on those of Bronze, the Infcription of the Shield and Column is VOT PR X, Votis Populi Romani Decennalibus; and there are two Captives in the Exergue. A triumphal Arch was erected, with the Inscription which occurs on the great Medallion, which we lately gave, and the Addition of LIBERATORI VRBIS. FVNDA-TORI QVIETIS. It is still existing, and is, says Mr. Addison, "not only the noblest in Rome, but " in the World. I fearched narrowly into it, " especially among those Additions of Sculpture " made IO

MAXIMIN. Pl. LXI. 7.

Pl. LXI. 8.

Constantine, Licinius, Maximin.

" made in the Emperor's own Age, to fee if I "could find any Mark of the Apparition, that is " faid to have preceded the very Victory, which " gave Occasion to the triumphal Arch. But there "are not the least Traces of it to be met with; " which is not very strange, if we consider that "the greatest Part of the Ornaments were taken " from Trajan's Arch, and set up to the new Con-" queror in no small Haste, by the Senate and "People of Rome, who were then most of them "Heathens. There is, however, fomething in the "Inscription, which is as old as the Arch itself, "which feems to hint at the Emperor's Vision. " Imp. Cæs. Fl. Constantino Maximo P. F. Augusto " S. P. Q. R. quod instinctu Divinitatis mentis mag-" nitudine cum exercitu suo tam de Tyranno quam de omni ejus factione uno tempore justis rempublicam " ultus est armis arcum triumphis insignem dicavit." "To the Emperor Constantine, &c. the Senate " and People of Rome have dedicated this triumphal " Arch, because, through a divine Impulse, with a "Greatness of Mind, and by Force of Arms, he "delivered the Commonwealth at once from the "Tyrant and all his Faction." There is no Statue of this Emperor at Rome with a Cross to it, "though the Ecclefiastical Historians say there were many fuch erected to him. I have feen shari I " his

" his Medals that were stamped with it, and a very Constanting, " remarkable one of his Son Constantius, where he is crowned by a Victory on the Reverse, with

"this Inscription, in hoc Signo Victor eris. R. This "triumphal Arch, and some other Buildings of " the same Age, shew sus that Architecture held

" up its Head after all the other Parts of designing

" were in a very weak and languishing Condition,

"as it was probably the first among them that "revived." There are, however, fome Works both in Sculpture and Medalism, which would do Honour to any Age; and the Author has a Conflantine in Bronze, and a Maximin in Silver, as well executed as any thing that he has feen of the Kind.

For the Reason above given, and the Silence of the Panegyrists on this Head, there have been found some who have called the Miracle in Question; but without sufficient Grounds: For the Appearance was given in open Day, and in the Sight of the whole Army; so that, when Eusebius published the Account of it, which he received from the Emperor himself, had it been false, it must have been disproved by many thousands who were then living. For there being no express Mention of it in the Inscription, a Reason may be easily assigned. The Senators in general, perhaps all of them, were Vol. II.

Licinivs), Maximin. Constantine, Licinius, Maximin.

Idolaters, and held Christianity in Contempt and Abhorrence. To have given, therefore, so public a Record in Favour of it, had been contrary directly to their own Principles. Yet could they not well avoid taking some Notice of it, which was done by using the comprehensive Term of instinctu Divinitatis. The same may be said of the Panegyrists. Yet one of them manifestly alludes to it, when he says, Vix quartá parte exercitus contra centum millia armatorum hostium Alpes transgressus es, ut appareret penitus considerantibus, id quod nos fugit in amore trepidantes, non dubiam te, sed promissam divinitùs petere victoriam. You passed the Alps, with scarce a fourth Part of your Army; so that, to those who thoroughly considered Things, it appeared (which escaped us who were anxious in our Affection) that you was not in quest of an uncertain Victory, but of one promised from above." To the like Purposes there are feveral Passages in the same Work. But Nazarius has improved it into Celestial Auxiliaries. In ore denique est omnium Galliarum exercitus visos qui se divinities missos præ se ferebant. Tis in the Mouth of every body throughout Gaul, that Armies were feen; which declared themselves sent from Heaven, &c. with much more to the fame Purpose; for he dwells upon it largely. In fact, they were content to give it any Turn, which might not feem to acknowledge it as a Miracle in Favour of Christianity, which Constantine, they had been taught to consider as the grand Impiety of the Times. Before this Expedition, Con-STANTINE had not professed himself a Christian, nor made the necessary Enquiries into the Nature of that Profession. For though he protected the Christians, as his Father had done, yet, having been bred under the Inspection of Diocletian and Galerius, we find him paying the like Honours to the Gods of the Heathen, of which there is Evidence enough upon his Coins; witness those struck at Lyons and Treves, inscribed SOLI INVICTO Pl. LXI. 9, 10, COMITI, and others MARTI, others HERCVLI, others IOVI-CONSERVATORI. But from the Time of the Vision, he consulted the most eminent Professors of Christianity, listened with all Attention to their Instructions, and applied himself to the Study of the facred Writings.

MAXIMIN.

11, 12.

Constantine used his Victory with such Moderation and Mercy as gained him the Hearts of the Romans. The Senate paid him all the Honours in their Power, and by a Decree declared him the principal Augustus. This gave no fmall Offence to MAXIMIN, who was now found to have espoused the Party of Maxentius, and looked upon himself as entitled to the Preference. During his Stay in the City he abolished the Prætorian Guards as an 3 R 2 nseless.

Constantine, Licinivs, Maximin.

elololo

useless and a dangerous Body; filled up the Senate with Persons of Rank and Wealth, Experience and Probity, and restored to the venerable Fathers their ancient Privileges and Splendor. His generous Behaviour to the People was their continual Theme: and Admiration. Above all Things, he was careful to express his Gratitude to the Author of his Victory, erecting a vast Trophy in the Midst of the City, with the Figure of & in Characters which could not be erased. He raised also a Statue of himself with the same Figure in the Hand of it, and the following Infcription, HOC SALVTARI SIGNO VERO FORTITVDINIS INDICIO CI-VITATEM VESTRAM TYRANNIDOS IVGO LIBERAVI ET S. P. Q. R. IN LIBERTATEM VINDICANS PRISTINÆ AMPLITVDINI ET SPLENDORI RESTITVI. By this salutary Sign. the true Token of Fortitude, I delivered your City from the Yoke of Tyranny, and afferting the Liberty of the Senate and People of Rome, restored them to their ancient Dignity and Splendor. He gave Orders, for the Building of Churches, which he adorned and enriched, encouraged the Clergy, and honoured them with Exemptions; and having fettled all: Things to his Mind, removed to Milan, where he gave his Sister Constantia to Licinius. Here he published an Edict, in which Licinius concurred,

, 3 M b

LICINIVS.

MAXIMIN.

to quash the Persecution; and wrote Letters to Constantine, MAXIMIN also (who had renewed it presently after the Death of Galerius) requesting his Concurrence: in Consequence of which, it ceased throughout the Empire. Thence he returned into Gaul, and chaftised the Franks, who had again passed the Rhine. in Contempt of Treaties, and condemned his Prifoners to the wild Beafts: a Severity which, notwithstanding their repeated Violations of Faith, was by no Means confistent with his new Pro-

While this was doing, MAXIMIN, not at all pleased with the late Alliance of LICINIUS, passed the Hellestont at the Head of seventy thousand. Men, and made himself Master of Byzantium and Heraclea. By this Time LICINIUS had collected near thirty thousand Men, and moved towards him, hoping to retard his Conquests at least. On this Occasion, MAXIMIN made a solemn Vow to Jupiter, that, if he gave him Victory, he would utterly exterminate the Christian Name. On the Night: following, Licinius is faid to have been admonished in a Dream to make his Addresses, in Conjunctions with his whole Army, to the most High God, with Affurance of Victory. The particular Prayer was also prescribed, and afterwards published throughout the Army. By this the Troops were exceedingly exceedingly encouraged; fo that when MAXIMIN advanced against them, they loosened their Helmets, threw down their Shields, and with their Hands lifted up to Heaven, repeated fervently the Supplication which had been taught them. Then rifing up with Alacrity, they fell upon their Enemies, who feemed to be ftruck with Amazement, and made little Resistance. Their Deseat was entire; and of those who survived the Slaughter, Part fled, and the rest submitted. MAXIMIN himfelf threw away his Purple, and fled in the Habit of a Slave with fuch Celerity that in twenty-four Hours he reached Nicomedia, which was one hundred and fixty Miles distant from the Field of Battle. There joining his Wife and Children, he hastened on till he came into Cappadocia, where he stopped to collect his Followers, and was met by some Troops from Syria. A few Days after, Lici-NIUS purfued him, and entering Nicomedia, returned Thanks to the God who had given him the Victory, and published the joint Edict in Con-STANTINE'S and his own Name, whereby Liberty of Conscience was allowed to all Men, the Churches of the Christians, restored, and a full Indemnisication ordered to be made to them forthwith for all their Losses. This was done at Nicomedia, the fame City whence the Edict for the Perfecution had iffued ' marched after MAXIMIN, who had feized and fortified the Passes of Mount Taurus. But Licinius breaking through on the right, he fled on to Tarfus; where giving up all Hope of Safety, he filled himself with Meat and Wine for the last Time, as he supposed, and then took Poison; the Power of which was weakened by the Fulness of his Stomach, fo that he fell into a strange Disease. His Bowels feemed to be on Fire, and the Pain was excruciating, even to Madness, insomuch that for four Days together he stuffed his Mouth with Dirt, which he devoured greedily. After many and grievous Torments; while he was beating his Head against the Walls, his Eyes dropped out. Then at last he acknowledged the Justice of his Punishment for the like Miseries which he had inflicted on the Christians, implored the Mercy of him whom he had profaned and perfecuted, and in dreadful Agonies expired, after having reigned fourteen Years and an half from the Time that he was created CÆSAR. His Wife and Children, his Relations and Friends, and the Ministers of his Cruelty, were all doomed to Death, and suffered accordingly. And all that remained of the Families of Diocletian and Galerius, underwent the same Fate by the Command

Constantine, Licinius, Maximin.

issued ten Years and four Months before. He then Constanting, CONSTANTINE

A'N D LICINIUS.

mand of Licinius, as fast as the Places of their Residence could be discovered.

The Empire of Licinius now extended from the Adriatic to the Tigris, and yet he wanted room. But his Endeavours to alienate from Constantine the Mind of Baffianus, who had married Anastasia, another Sister of that Emperor, first opened the Breach. The political Instrument that he made use of, was Senecio, the Brother of Bassianus. Him, therefore, Constantine required to be delivered up to him, and was refused. His Statues were at the same Time demolished by Licinius. Con-STANTINE instantly marched against him, and the Event was favourable. But Licinius escaped by Flight, and soon after collected a much more numerous Body of Troops in Thrace, having on his Way made one Valens CASAR. Here a fecond Battle was fought, which lasted till Night parted the Armies. The next Day LICINIUS proposed an Accommodation, by which Constantine was to possess all the Countries behind him, leaving Thrace and the East to LICINIUS; and Valens, said to be the Author of these Troubles, was put to Death. This Peace was cemented by the Creation of Three new CESARS, Crifpus and Constantine, the Sons of Constantine, and Licinius the Son of LICINIUS. We shall give the Heads of these, as they they appear thus entitled on their Coins, with one Constantine Reverse, which is common to all Three, having VOTis V inclosed in a Wreath, with CAESARVM NOSTRORVM in the Margin.

Pl. LXI. 13. 14, 15.

Not long after, the Sarmatians, under the Conduct of their King Rausmodus, passed the Danube, when Constantine came up with and defeated them. The King, having loft the greater Part of his Forces, repassed the River in his Boats, and was preparing for a fresh Invasion, which Con-STANTINE prevented by attacking him in his own Quarters. Raufimodus himself was slain in the Action with many more, a Multitude of Prisoners were taken, and the rest submitted to the Conqueror. This Success is recorded on a Reverse, where Victory is treading on a Captive, having a Trophy in one Hand, and a Palm Branch in the other, with SARMATIA DEVICTA: in the Exergue P TR, Percussa Treviris.

Constantine on his Return passed into Macedonia, and by making a convenient Haven, improved Thessalonica into a Sea-Port. Meantime the Goths made fresh Ravages; and, when they were defeated by him, retreated into the Dominions of LICINIUS, whither he pursued them without Hesitation. This laid the Foundation of a fresh War, LICINIUS catching at the Opportunity which he had VOL. II. wished 3 S

CONSTANTINE
AND LICINIVS.

43 . 11

wished for. In Consequence of this, both Emperors measured their Strength by Land at Adrianople, where Constantine reared the facred Standard, and gave the Word God our Saviour. The Army of Licinius was routed, with the Loss of thirty-four thousand Men, and their Camp taken. LICINIUS fled to Byzantium, where his Fleet lay, with as many as could keep up with him. The rest submitted to the Victor, who immediately led his Forces to Byzantium, and befieged it, ordering his Son Crifpus to bring up his Fleet. This produced a Naval Engagement between the young Prince, with eighty Vessels of thirty Oars each, and Abantus the Licinian Admiral, with two hundred, a Number too great for the Scene of Action. For being crowded, they injured and confounded one another, and fo became an easy Prey to the regular and orderly Attack of the Constantinians; so that the Place was presently after compleatly invested by Sea and Land. But LICINIUS had found Means to pass over to Chalcedon, where, say the Historians, he declared Martinianus, the Commander of his Houshold Troops, CASAR. But it is clear, from the Coin referred to, that he admitted him to a Participation of the Imperial Title and Power: For his Head is radiated, with the Inscription DN N MARTINIANUS P F AVG; and the Reverse is

1. LXI. 16.

CONSTANTINE A,ND.

Jupiter holding a Victory, with the Eagle on his Hasta pura, and at his Feet: the Legend IOVI CONSERVATORI. Him LICINIUS detached with a Body of Forces to Lampfacus, to make Head on that Side, while himself kept Possession of the Hills around Chalcedon. Meantime Constantine, getting together a Number of Boats, transported the greater Part of his Troops to the facred Promontory, as it was called, at the Mouth of the Euxine Sea, and there landing them, pitched his Camp upon the Eminences. Licinius therefore, recalling Martinianus, encouraged his Forces, and marched to the Attack, but was again utterly defeated; on which Chalcedon and Byzantium opened their Gates to the Conqueror. LICINIUS fled to Nicomedia, and was there befieged; when, finding no Possibility of escaping, he surrendered himself, resigned the Purple, and implored Mercy; which was granted at the Entreaty of Constantia. Martinianus suffered Death, and Licinius was ordered to Thessalonica; where, endeavouring by his Emissaries to raise fresh Forces, and excite the Barbarians to his Assistance, Treopas to some he was also strangled.

- Constantine, now sole Master of the Roman Empire, reinstated and indemnished all who had suffered under Licinius for the Cause of Christianity, restored and enlarged their Churches, prohibited

CONSTANTINE.

Pl. LXI. 17.

hibited the idolatrous Sacrifices, the Inspection of Entrails, Soothfaying, &c. as well as the Dedication of new Idols or Temples; and celebrated the Vicenalia of his Reign, the Council of Nice then fitting. This, with the Tranquillity which then reigned, is commemorated on one of his Coins struck at London, having his galeated Head with CONSTANTINUS AVG, the Reverse being a Globe upon an Altar, inscribed VOTIS XX, and three Stars over it, representing his three Sons, Crispus, Constantine, and Constantius: the Legend is BEATA TRANQLITAS. Percussa LONdinii. The next Year he visited Rome, where the Inhabitants were very free in their Invectives against him, for having forsaken the Religion of his Ancestors. For this Reason his Stay was short. And this Distaste is faid to have contributed not a little to the Foundation of a rival City. The Empress Fausta now accused her Son-in-law Crispus, of incestuous Attempts upon her Person; which so enraged the Emperor, that he was executed by his Orders, too haftily: for foon after the Falshood of the Accufation was detected, and the Wickedness of the Empress fully appeared, who was thereupon suffocated in an hot Bath. For the Assuagement of his own Grief, and by Way of Atonement for the Injury done to his Son, he erected his Statue of Silver, overlaid with Gold, with the Inscription Constantine. HAIKHMENOC TIOC MOY. My Injured Son! 'The Ministers of her Debaucheries suffered also, as did young Licinius, the Son of the late Emperor; for whose Death no Reason is assigned. Calocerus, Master of the Camels, endeavouring to make himfelf a King in Cyprus, was put to Death with Ignominy. In the following Year died HELENA, the Emperor's Mother. Soon after, the Goths and Sarmatians beginning to stir, he laid a Bridge over the Danube, and chastised them.

This done, he fet himself to the Building of an Imperial Seat, resolving to visit Rome no more. The first Site that he made Choice of, was a Spot between Troas and the ancient Ilium, on the Coast of Afia, where he laid the Foundations, and raised a Part of the Wall. But on better Consideration he quitted this Design, judging it more adviseable to enlarge the City of Byzantium. He therefore inclosed the Isthmus with a Wall from Sea to Sea, to the Distance of fifteen Furlongs beyond the Limits of the City as it then stood, so that it was made to occupy feven Hills. He built feveral Forums, in Imitation of those of old Rome, which he furrounded with elegant Houses. These he made Presents of to Senators, and other Persons of high Quality. He laid out an Hippodrome also, which Constantine, he adorned with Obelisks, Columns, Statues, Fountains, Porticos, and a Senate House, conferring upon the Members the same Honours and Privileges which the Fathers enjoyed at Rome. The Palace which he erected was little inferior to that of the former Emperors; and the Whole was divided into fourteen Wards or Regions. In fine, he raised his new City to such an Height of Splendor and Magnificence, that it not only vied with, but, if we may believe Sozomen, exceeded old Rome, both in the Number of its Inhabitants, and its Affluence of every Kind. On the fifth of the Ides of May, and in the twenty-fifth Year of his Reign, in the Year of Christ three hundred and thirty, and in the one thousand and eighty-second Year from the Building of Rome, his new City was folemnly dedicated to the God of MARTYRS, and by an Edict engraven on a Pillar of Stone, and publicly fixed up in the Strategium or Place of military Exercises, near his own Equestrian Statue, was ordered to be called NOVA ROMA CONSTANTINOPOLI-TANA,

